COOLIDGE NOTE STUNS SENATE

'LIAR' FLUNG AS SENATE ROWS OVER COUZENS

Fight Averted When Ernst Explains.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—Scenes of wild disorder prevailed in the senate today during a bitter controversy growing out of the case in which the revenue department is demanding back taxes of about $10,000,000 from Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.].

Senator Ernst [Rep., Ky.] was about to take his seat after referring to Senator Glass as "a willful, wicked, and malicious liar."

SENATOR ERNST.

Also participating in the personal attacks, as savage as have marked any session of the senate in years, was Senator Glass [Dem., Va.]

Fight Is Threatened.

Until Senator Ernst with much difficulty obtained an opportunity to explain his remarks his denunciation of a fellow senator was supposed to refer to Senator Glass.

The Virginia senator, white with rage, seemed ready to leap across the aisle at Senator Ernst when Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, jumped between them with demands that the senate be restored to order and that Senator Ernst be taken to task for flagrant violations of senate rules.

The scenes of disorder came at the end of a three hour debate, which began when Senator Ernst took the floor to read a prepared speech in defense of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and in criticism of methods employed by Senator Couzens in conducting the senate special committee's investigation of the internal revenue bureau.

Senator Ernst, as a Republican member of the committee, charged that Senator Couzens throughout the inquiry has shown a personal animus against Secretary Mellon. Senator Ernst sought to justify the recent action of the treasury in assessing against Senator Couzens an additional tax of nearly $11,000,000 on profits in the sale of stock in the Ford Motor company to Henry Ford in 1919.

Couzens Attacks Mellon.

Senator Couzens replied to Senator Ernst, attacking Secretary Mellon and the internal revenue bureau.

Senator Glass, who was secretary of the treasury at the time Commissioner of Internal Revenue Roper in the Wilson administration gave an advance appraisal of the value of Ford's stock as of March 1, 1913, in order that the amount of tax on the sale of the stock could be determined, followed Senator Couzens with a denunciation of the action of Secretary Mellon in reopening the Couzens case.

Senator Glass declared the valuation of the Ford stock in 1919 was made at the request of the Ford interests, not at Couzens' request. He challenged the accuracy of the memorandum on which the treasury has now assessed an additional tax on Senator Couzens. He asserted that the reopening of a case after a lapse of years in this manner by the treasury is "bad policy, open to immoral use and tyranny."

Ernst Brings Climax.

There were frequent interruptions and exchanges back and forth as the three principal participants in the controversy proceeded. The senators grew more and more vehement, and the climax finally came when Senator Ernst left the floor after Senator Glass had concluded.

"I want to know," Senator Ernst shouted, "if there is any way I can, without offending the rules of the senate, call a fellow member a willful, wicked, and malicious liar."

Senator Ernst got no further, as Senator Robinson was on his feet declaring out of order. Other senators joined the presiding officer, echoing Senator Robinson's remonstrance, and Senator Ernst was forced to take his seat.

Moses' Motion Defeated.

Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.] moved that Senator Ernst be allowed to proceed in order." The Democrats and Administration Republicans voted against the motion, and it was defeated by a vote of 32 to 42.

Senator Ernst finally got an opportunity to make an explanation when Senator Robinson yielded to him in the form of a motion to proceed with the consideration of the Warren nomination for attorney general.

Senator Ernst explained that he did

THE BUNKER BUILDERS

EX-CHICAGOAN MISSING; FEAR HE'S A SUICIDE

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—George W. Patterson jr., son of a professor in the College of Engineering, University of Michigan, and formerly son-in-law of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson of Chicago, disappeared from his home at 228 East 38th street a month ago, and has not been heard from since. He left a note saying he intended to commit suicide because he believed he had been a failure in life. There is no trace of him since he left his apartment.

G. W. PATTERSON JR.

Mr. Patterson was married last July to Grace, the daughter of Ellwood Hendrick, author and chemist. This was his second marriage. His first wife was Susan Ryerson of Chicago, who died shortly after they were married. He is 33 years old, a graduate of Yale ['14], and was a soldier of the foreign legion in the war. After an adventurous career, which included journalism, advertising, and foreign travel, he attempted to settle down in New York after his second marriage and establish himself in the business world. His failure to succeed at once, according to his family, bred an inferiority complex which depressed him.

News of the disappearance has been kept secret until now.

SILESIA "SOLD" FOR WIFE'S LOVE

Mussolini Paper Bares Post-War Intrigue.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, March 14.—Rome got a most sensational shock tonight when Premier Mussolini's paper, Popolo Italia, devoted the entire front page to a story of love and intrigue between Count Sforza, once foreign minister, and the wife of a member of the Polish embassy, which, it is claimed, had a tremendous effect on the Upper Silesian plebiscite. Germany lost its second richest territory to Poland by the plebiscite, which was held during Count Sforza's term of office.

As the Popolo Italia handles the story, it recalls the wildest romances of medieval times when nations were set at war for a pretty woman's favor.

All Rome tonight is asking who was the wonderful Polish woman who aided her country by helping win Upper Silesia for Poland, while others ask whether the "high personage" who gave up Italy's participation in the German plebiscite for this beauty's love actually was the present Count Sforza or another great statesman.

Injects a Bit of Mystery.

The reason the mystery remains after the exposure of Premier Mussolini's paper is that Popolo Italia writes the story in three parts, in one of which it uses slightly altered names and thirteenth century Italian style.

The whole exposure is headed: "How Count Sforza in 1921 safeguarded the dignity of the nation."

The first part merely tells the facts concerning the Silesian plebescite. It attacks Count Sforza for his actions during the plebiscite and recounts the massacre of Italian troops by Polish irregulars. Twenty-one Italians were killed. Instead of demanding satisfaction and sending more troops to insure an honest plebiscite, Premier Mussolini's paper charges that no action was taken, but, instead, Count Sforza withdrew the Italian troops, leaving the Polish irregulars to control the plebiscite.

Woman's Charm Changes History.

Then follows the Boccaccian-like tale. In brief it reads: In Florence during the great plague the duke of Milan, Count Francesco II Sforza, became enamored of Madonna Dianora, a great Polish beauty.

Madonna Dianora was married, but she and her husband were good Polish patriots, interested in having a certain boundary line drawn favorably for Poland. So the husband obligingly stepped aside and Count Sforza became Madonna Dianora's lover, and accordingly Poland's thirteenth century border was drawn in accordance with the wishes of Madonna Dianora and her king, and history again was changed by a woman's charm.

But It All Happened in Rome.

"But in order to avoid mistakes," adds Popolo Italia, reverting to plain present day Italian, "we must explain that the incident referred to occurred in room 21 of a certain Roman hotel. The Polish husband always left early in the evening and always returned between 2 and 3 in the morning.

Meanwhile our high personage had called, ordered dinner for two, and spent the greater part of the evening and night there. Always when the high personage was present, the hotel employés say, certain foreign attachés called for information. This liaison lasted from September, 1920, to May 1921, two months after the Silesian plebiscite gave the country to Poland."

Madonna Dianora is identified by many as the wife of the secretary of the Polish embassy during the dates mentioned.

HEIR TO MILLION HELD BY CROWE; WRIT STOPPED

Expect Indictment This Week.

William D. Shepherd, heir to the McClintock $1,000,000, is in custody by agreement of his lawyers, who "do not wish to precipitate a murder charge at this time."

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe announced late yesterday that a grand jury investigation will begin tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Mr. Crowe said he expects the indictment of Shepherd by Wednesday at 2 o'clock.

That was Mr. Crowe's answer to a writ of habeas corpus issued yesterday by Chief Justice Jacob Hopkins of the Criminal court.

Ready to Charge Murder.

"If I'm compelled, I will lodge a formal complaint of murder against him now," Mr. Crowe told Judge Hopkins. "If I may retain him in custody until Wednesday at 2 o'clock, I'll have the proper process on which to hold him."

Bitter charges were made by Shepherd's lawyer at the morning session of the habeas corpus hearing. It was somewhat of a surprise, therefore, when Shepherd appeared again with new lawyers, William Scott Stewart and W. W. O'Brien, partners and specialists in criminal law who have often been successful in securing not guilty verdicts in famous murder cases.

It was more a shock than a surprise when Attorney Stewart suavely informed Judge Hopkins he had no objections to Mr. Crowe's keeping Shepherd in custody. Mr. Stewart was complimentary to Mr. Crowe, under whom he had for a time served as an assistant.

Scarcely Seems Serious.

In fact, the proceedings appeared as anything except a habeas corpus hearing where the man held in custody was confronting formal accusation of murder by the administration of typhoid germs to a 21 year old boy who had made a will in his favor to the extent of $1,000,000 and who faced the loss of that $1,000,000 by the approaching marriage of that youth.

It was a mild proceeding. Had Attorneys Stewart and O'Brien been asking for probation of a culprit they could not have been more benevolent toward judge and prosecutor.

Mr. Crowe was good natured and genial. He won his point. It was conceded to him without contest. All he asked he received.

Shepherd Seized at Home.

The prosecutor who piled high the evidence against Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, had ordered the forcible removal of William D. Shepherd, heir to $1,000,000, from his home at midnight. He declared then that the evidence justified this procedure.

It was done as ordered. Shepherd was permitted to take only his hat and kiss his wife good-by. His attorneys were prevented from talking with him.

This was done because Dr. Charles C. Faiman, president of the National University of Sciences, had just given what was regarded as evidence of the utmost importance. He said Shepherd was the man who studied bacteriology under his tutelage, who stole three test tubes of germs from the school, one tube containing live typhoid bacilli, who paid him $50 for the recovery of the previous letter of inquiry about the course, which bore Shepherd's signature and which might be incriminating.

Follows Other Evidence.

Coming as this did on top of testimony by E. T. Breidigan, a bacteriologist, and Dr. George E. Fosberg, State's Attorney Crowe said it climaxed matters. Breidigan had said Shepherd studied germs at the laboratory where he was employed. Dr. Fosberg said Shepherd had consulted him twice asking about the action of germs administered to a living being and how a death could be caused by germs or poisons, the murderer taking no chances of detection.

The $1,000,000 McClintock estate was considered a motive. The will to Shepherd's favor would have been abrogated by the marriage of Billy McClintock to Isabelle Pope—that was certain.

The circumstances of young McClintock's illness and death had been discussed by many witnesses at the inquest which stopped so suddenly

HOW COOLIDGE DEFIED SENATE

Washington, D. C., March 14.—(Special.)—President Coolidge hurled a bomb into the senate today when he personally took charge of the fight for the appointment of Charles B. Warren for attorney general in the following statement:

"Notwithstanding various reports and rumors, the President is making every effort to secure the confirmation of Mr. Warren. As the time is very short, he has consulted certain men and senators as to what course shall be pursued in case Mr. Warren is not confirmed. He has decided on no other appointment. He will offer him a recess appointment.

"He hopes, however, that the unbroken practice of three generations of permitting the President to chose his own cabinet will not now be broken and the opposition to Mr. Warren, upon further consideration, will be withdrawn, in order that the country may have the services of his excellent qualities and the President may be unhampered in choosing his own method of executing the laws."

Doctor Slain; Quiz Patient and Spouse

Dr. George J. Gordon, 703 Independence boulevard, was shot and instantly killed last night as he started to drive his automobile away from 1122 Larrabee street, where he had been attending a patient. Three persons are locked up, including the patient and his wife.

Detectives are unable to determine whether Gordon was lured to his death by enemies or whether the killing was a case of mistaken identity.

Asks to See Doctor Again.

He had been calling on Peter Sorce of the Larrabee street address. On Friday, Sorce claims he was knocked from the running board of a street car by an automobile truck. He sustained a possible fracture of several ribs. Dr. Gordon, the family physician for three years, treated him, and last night his secretary relayed a phone call to him that Sorce wanted to see him again.

He went to the Sorce home and apparently treated the patient, for Sorce later displayed an examination slip which he was to present to the Surface Lines offices in his attempt to collect damages. It was signed by the doctor.

After the call Dr. Gordon walked out of the house. As he stooped over to turn the key in the lock of his car two young men slipped out of the shadows near the Sorce home and started firing.

Saw Murderers Run Away.

One bullet went through the side of Dr. Gordon's head, another plowed through his mouth, and a third hit him in the chest. He crumpled over the wheel, dead instantly.

Phillip Iello, who lives above the Sorces, says he saw the shooting and saw the assassins run along Larrabee street.

Iello and the Sorces were taken for questioning. Mrs. Sorce is described as pretty, and it is said Dr. Gordon had attended her. The Sorces have been married four years.

One theory was that Dr. Gordon had worked up a large practice among the Italian speaking residents of the district through cutting rates, as detectives found. For childbirth cases it was said he charged $25 while others were charging $50 to $75, and on sick calls the charge was $2 against $3 and $4. It was said he might have caused enmity through this practice.

Dr. Gordon was born here in 1890 and was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1915. He was a member of the American Gynecological society and the Western Surgical association.

L. CELLA, NORTH SIDE GANGSTER, SHOT TO DEATH

Louis Cella, well known to the police as a north side gangster, and recently arrested in connection with the robbery of the Parkway hotel, was shot and fatally wounded early this morning by Phillip Edwards, living at the Worthington hotel, 747 North Clark street. Cella was shot twice in the abdomen and died shortly afterward in the Passavant hospital.

The shooting occurred at Chicago avenue and Clark street. The two men were in a restaurant and a quarrel started. Witnesses said Cella threatened to shoot Edwards. The latter went to his room and obtained a gun. On his return the quarrel was renewed and he fired twice, both bullets taking effect.

Edwards fled, but after a chase of four blocks he was captured by Policeman William Quilter of the "flivver" squad. Cella was an associate of Irving Schlig and George [Rabbit] O'Connell, both of whom have police records.

VOTE HALTED ON WARREN AFTER DICTUM IS READ

President Will Name Him Anyhow

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—"Confirm my appointment of Warren to be attorney general of the United States or I will give him a recess appointment the minute you adjourn to go home."

Stripped of verbiage, that is the defiance President Coolidge hurls at the United States senate this evening

And he adds:

"Meanwhile, I am making every effort to secure confirmation."

Foes Are Face to Face.

Thus are the lines drawn for a great constitutional battle which, by the senate's decision tonight, is to begin Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

This is an hour and a half before the senate usually convenes. Debate is to continue for four hours, each speaker to be limited to thirty minutes, and voting on the Warren confirmation coming at 2:30 o'clock. The defiance fell upon the ears of the assembled senate a little before 6 o'clock.

It created excitement that was too deep and appalled to be noisy. Senators on both sides of the chamber gasped. Even the galleries—made hectic by seven hours of turbulent debate—remained hushed.

Dawes Is Absent.

And with all this turmoil going on, Vice President Dawes, a lover of excitement and creator of the first of those turbulent scenes in this session, was absent! He didn't hear a gray haired Kentucky senator beg for permission to call another senator a liar, during the debate on the Mellon-Couzens tax law that preceded the Warren battle, and he didn't get a chance to enjoy any of the struggle over his chief's nomination, a struggle that would have been avoided had he been present to break the first tie vote that led to Warren's rejection.

As soon as word came of the President's defiance Senator Reed [Dem., Mo.] read a carbon of an Associated Press dispatch which gave the drift of the defiance, "and the Associated Press," added the senator, "is usually accurate."

To make assurance twice sure, as well as—it may be suspected—to put teeth in the rising wrath of his stunned colleagues, Senator Walsh [Dem., Mont.] begged the privilege of reading the exact text of the defiance, which he did with that peculiarly mordant precision of his which would, if he chose, convert a love letter into an affront.

No Vermont Sugared Pill.

The President's dictum to the recalcitrant senate was written with studied directness and no wasted words. There was no sugar in the pill. He let the senate know that he is working as hard as he can against it, that—short as the time has been—he has thought out what he will do in case of nonconfirmation, and that what he will do, if the senate remains obdurate, will be to take instant advantage of its homegoing—which it is eager for—to do what it has told him it does not want him to do.

Then he turned the knife by again praising the Warren whom senators have for four hours been bitterly denouncing and whom other senators for an hour before that had been ineptly and feebly defending, wishing the while that they had any other task.

No Quarter in This War.

A beautiful fight was never more beautifully mapped.

It is as sensational as it is unprecedented. Andrew Jackson's fights with the senate did not begin more uncompromisingly. As soon as he had drawn a full breath Senator Robinson, [Dem., Ark.], known as "Thundering Joe," leaned over and picked up the gage of battle.

"To give his advice and consent to a presidential appointment or to refuse it," he shouted, "is a constitutional duty a senator swears he will perform when he takes his oath of office. The power of the senate to advise and consent to nominations is coexistent with the right of the President to nominate.

"Senators! The challenge having been made, the senate must meet it fearlessly and decisively.

"Even as I cannot tell the executive whom to nominate, neither can the executive tell me whom nomination I shall consent to—tell me whom I shall vote to confirm.

"When either branch of the government challenges the constitutional authority of the other, that authority must be maintained. It shall be maintained.

"No executive has the right to resort to such expedients as now are threatened to the end that a rejected appointee shall perform the functions of any office—high or low. . . . The question must be considered with proper regard for the rights and prerogatives of the executive and of this body."

Statesmen Thunderstruck.

To comprehend the effect those crashing sentences produced upon the tense assemblage you have to remember that they were addressed to some of the greatest constitutional lawyers of this century—to men like Borah, James Reed, Overman, Robinson, and Walsh, the last named of whom—I mean it literally—eats and sleeps with the constitution of the United States.

Walsh, more stunned than Robinson was, and hence not so vociferous, released these words anxiously and haltingly:

"I cannot believe that the President is so lost to his duty as to take action so unjust.

"I hope—this is—is—not true!

"I hope so, for if it is true the hour has come of the failure of that co-operation between the departments of the government which the American people have a right to expect."

Montana Sneer a Taunt.

Then, regaining composure, he said with his desolating sneer:

"I am quite content that the President should continue to exercise his 'every effort' to secure the nomination of Mr. Warren. I am curious to see the result!"

While the anti-administration forces were thus leaping to their advantage the administration leaders were slowly coming to.

Blow upon blow they have been dealt since inauguration day. Rebuff after rebuff they have received. Chagrin has become their luncheon dish in the senate refectory, for when they met there they ate it more than they did what the colored men set before them.

Lukewarm Spirit of Defense.

Today they got triple portions. Senate Leader Curtis was dazed and slow. Pepper made a speech defending Warren that let down guard after guard for venomous James Reed and pitiless Carter Glass. There was no decisive Republican leadership for the administration, and again the word went through the press gallery, "It's the same old story; nobody really stands by Coolidge except the American people."

Blazing ineptitude on the part of administration leaders was the cause of Coolidge's icily worded defiance of the senate. Early editions of the afternoon newspapers announced that the effort to get Warren confirmed had been abandoned, and that the President was considering Beck, Goff, McCammant, and Rugg for the attorney generalship. Curtis of Kansas was named as authority for this statement, he having been in hurried conference at the White House at noon.

White Hot Fury of Coolidge.

The President was angry and disgusted. His defiance of the senate and his declaration of "Warren forever" was soon prepared, and was released for the later editions.

Thus a battle develops that far transcends in significance the battle to confirm Warren.

The senate could have endured a recess appointment of Warren after it had adjourned. But to be threatened with a recess appointment while it is still sitting smites it not alone in its dignity, which is as precious to it as her honor to a woman, but, according to the senatorial reading of the law, in its privileges and rights, which, it says, are its life.

Ignores Constitution, Charge.

James Reed, on the floor of the senate, his face crimson, pinned down the point of the constitutionalists thus, in his paraphrase of the presidential defiance.

"To you, sirs, the President says, 'The constitution gives you the power to advise and consent, but I will override that power. I will wait until you adjourn and then I will put in office the man you said was unfit.'"

By contrast with what Coolidge has done, the fights of Woodrow Wilson with the senate were, in the opinions of veterans on the federal scene, weakened affairs, and the fights of Grover Cleveland lumbering and slow.

This is the nub of the matter: Coolidge's quiet, thin lipped New England determination is more deadly than Cleveland's bulk or Wilson's scorn.

Monday an Armageddon.

Monday should be a day of gorgeous fighting.

In the four hours of debating each senator will be limited to half an hour. Already the great constitutionalists are champing at the bit, and the demagogues, like Heflin of Alabama, have also assured the senate of their determination to speak.

Consenting this evening to postpone further debate, Senator Robinson said ominously:

"I am satisfied the vote will not be affected if the debate goes over until Monday."

The comedy treasure of the day has been Pepper's defense of Warren, in the course of which he said:

"The fundamental question is whether this man got such a bias in favor of big business that, if you translated him to the attorney generalship, would he be incapable of performing the duties of his office in relation to combinations outside the law."

Walsh interjected:

"The trouble is he won't conceive any corporations to be outside the law."

Cites Knox Record.

"Philander Knox," resumed Pepper, "got his training putting together these great combinations and yet as attorney general he was the first and greatest enforcer of the laws against them. . . . Hence Warren could now turn around and pursue relentlessly combinations which twenty years ago he would have considered innocent. I believe Mr. Warren will be a better attorney general for the experiences he had, however, those experiences he described, in the days gone by."

Pepper, whose senate pet name is "Warm Molasses," sweetly intoned the words "in the days gone by," and Reed of Missouri, catching them up later but not at all sweetly, said:

"I know there is an old maxim of 'the days gone by' which says, 'set a rogue to catch a rogue.' But, like many old maxims, it doesn't work. A rogue very seldom starts out to catch a rogue. First and last, only honest men catch rogues. . . ."

Has Praise for Knox.

"Philander Knox, sir [turning to Pepper], was an intellectual giant and he was as intellectually honest as he was great. And I challenge any man to name in the same breath, in the same sentence, in the same chamber, in the same day, the name of Philander Knox with the name of Charles Beecher Warren!

"How often it is, senators, that a demagogue will take refuge behind the coat of a Lincoln or a Washington. It is thus that the senator from Pennsylvania today drags from the tomb a corpse and endeavors to hold it up before us to obscure our vision."

Senator Pepper also read into the record telegrams from Michigan jurists, citizens, and associations attesting to Mr. Warren's legal ability and expressing confidence in his integrity.

ENGLEWOOD H. S. PAPER AWARDED PRIZE IN CONTEST

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—The "E" weekly of the Englewood High school, Chicago, was awarded third prize—an embossed certificate—in the class A contest conducted by the Columbia Scholastic Press association, which ended its convention today. The South Side Times of South Side High school, Fort Wayne, Ind., won first prize, a silver cup, and the South High Beacon of South High, Cleveland, was awarded second prize in this class.

CIVIC GROUPS, 7 OF THEM, O. K. TRACTION PLAN

Indicates Trend of City's Sentiment, Belief.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Seven organizations, representing as many phases of Chicago life, yesterday recommended the approval of the traction ordinance at the referendum election April 7. So large and varied an expression in one day, it is said, indicates a fast growing sentiment in favor of the rapid transit program, approved by the city council by a vote of 40 to 5. The indorsements are held especially significant in view of the lack of any organized effort to inform the public, because the nonpartisan committee favoring the ordinance has not really got under way.

Those Indorsing Plan.

Among the indorsements of the transportation program by organizations are the following, yesterday's seven being the first named:

Chicago City club.
Brotherhood of Electrical Workers No. 9.
Clearing Industrial association.
Garden Homes Improvement association.
Kiwanis Club of Austin.
Greater North Avenue Business Men's association.
North Austin Manor Neighborhood club.
Union of Steam and Operating Engineers No. 536.
Chicago Association of Commerce.
All-Chicago council.
Chicago Woman's club.
Chester Highlands Improvement association.
South End Business Men's Association (Roseland).
Austin Business Men's association.
Bryn Mawr Men's club massmeeting.
Metropolitan chapter, American Association of Engineers.
Better Government association.

Most of these expressions have come as a result of talks by Mayor Dever explaining the purpose and meaning of the ordinance. Little has been done save by the mayor to inform the public regarding the plan, and the mayor is certain that all that is necessary to obtain approval of the program is to get the facts regarding the ordinance before the public.

100 Persons Offer Aid.

About 100 volunteers assembled yesterday afternoon at the nonpartisan committee's headquarters, 29 South La Salle street, to be instructed regarding the ordinance. Each of these persons offer their services gratis to speak to audiences which desire information. The "professors" of this school were Special Attorney Jerome N. Frank, Carl R. Latham, Ald. Guy Guernsey, and former Judge Stephen A. Foster.

They answered every criticism made of the ordinance.

"The loudest objections to this pending plan come from the old Thompson crowd, who want the Thompson district plan," said Mr. Frank. "Their most frequent criticism of this ordinance is that the city will lose the taxes now paid by the surface and elevated lines, which total about $3,000,000 a year. Their insincerity is easily shown. The discarded district plan provided for exempting the transportation from taxes. According to the critics, it was right in that plan and wrong in this one. In addition to that, the old district plan conveyed authority to raise $15,000,000 a year in taxes by direct levies upon the people.

"Answering further, about one-third of the taxes of the elevated and surface lines consists of income taxes to the federal government and corporation tax to the state. The nonpayment of those doesn't affect local taxpayers. But, in addition, the new transit lines will create enormous wealth, hundreds of millions. Increasing the taxable wealth will really decrease taxes on the present property owners. All of the criticisms made to date are of as little or of much less value."

Carl Latham's speech was an analysis of other transit improvement plans.

He took up the granting of a 20 year franchise, pure municipal ownership and operation, condemnation of the present facilities and increasing the city bonding power, the 1918 ordinance, the Thompson district plan and the substitution of busses for the surface lines. He argued that the best solution with the greatest prospect of immediate benefits, without added taxes, is supplied by the Dever ordinance.

"Tell Public the Facts."

"Get the facts to the people, this ordinance has many merits, but make haste for the time is short," was the burden of the talk of Ald. Guernsey, who is a member of the council committee on local transportation.

Former Judge Foster said that the Thompson five cent fare district plan "is silly, impossible and political" and is "being used only to deceive the people for some purpose other than the gaining of adequate transportation." Corporation Counsel Busch also said that the principal task is to get the facts about the ordinance to the voters.

Members of the local union No. 9 of the Brotherhood of Electrical workers not only indorsed the ordinance yesterday but pledged that each of the 1,200 members will do active work % the polls next month. Irwin Knott branded as "a lie" the rumor spread that the electricians had gained some concession from the city administration.

Tired of Promises.

"Certain labor politicians, many of whom do not represent a union," said Knott, business agent of the electrical workers, "appear peeved because I came out for the ordinance. Back of that peeve is a desire to reestablish William Hale Thompson. Members of local No. 9 are tired listening to the Thompson five cent fare bunk and have voluntarily decided to try out Mayor Dever's plan."

The local transportation committee of the City club has made a study of transportation for ten years. Its conclusions, indorsed by the board of directors, is that the "ordinance merits the support of all those genuinely interested in the solution of the problem," and therefore they recommend that the voters approve of the ordinance on April 7.

"In addition to his general interest in the welfare of the community the citizen has two outstanding special interests in this question, that of the car rider and that of the taxpayer," says the report of the City club. "As a car rider he wants satisfatcory service at the lowest possible rate of fare. As a taxpayer he wants assurance that his burden will not be increased."

The report holds that these interests are properly provided for in the pending ordinance and discusses the subject under physical plan, service, and fares. No one, not even discarded politicians, has criticised the plan for extensions, improvements, and rapid transit. The City club holds that it is the enlightened selfish interest of each group on the board of control to give good service, and that it is possible to force good service.

The Clearing Industrial association said in its resolution of indorsement that the "ordinance represents the best solution of the present traction situation which is practical under existing legal and financial conditions."

Explains the Ordinance.

At the regular Saturday afternoon discussion of the Hamilton club Corporation Counsel Busch explained the ordinance yesterday. This organization asked for 1,000 copies of the ordinance and synopsis, which will be distributed to its membership.

Ald. Schwartz talked to the League of Women Voters at the Congress hotel. Carl Thompson, secretary of the Public Ownership league, was also present, and asked a number of questions, to each of which Ald. Schwartz made reply. No action was taken by that organization.

Women Leaders in Civic Affairs Place Stamp of Approval on Traction Plan

A number of women, prominent in civic activities, yesterday indorsed the city administration's traction program. Among them were the following:

Mrs. Alfred Cogswell Tyler.—I am for the ratification of the traction ordinance. In the first place, because it is the only immediate remedy for the intolerance of our transportation facilities. In the second, because I think the plan outlined in the ordinance is the most businesslike which has been suggested, and third, because it smacks the least of politics.

Miss Mary E. McDowell.—After a good deal of consideration and listening to both sides of the question, I have decided to stand for the mayor's traction plan. Now, when we have a plan worth trying out, is the time to do something.

Mrs. Amelia Sears, assistant general superintendent United Charities.—The proposed traction ordinance will result in thousands of laborers purchasing small houses in areas now unreached by cheap transportation. This will insure better health and wholesome lives to the children. It will eliminate unhappiness and weariness suffered now by the early morning workers; women taking children to nurseries at 6 a. m. in order to be to work at 7 a. m.; young factory girls and boys walking long distances because they cannot afford both surface and elevated fares. Therefore, what the United Charities see in the traction ordinance is, increased health and happiness, better living conditions, home owners increased, and unnecessary suffering reduced.

Mrs. William Hefferan of the board of education.—The comprehensive building program of the board of education will be helped tremendously by the increased and improved transportation system proposed in the traction ordinance. Children will be encouraged to attend both junior and senior high schools when they become easier to reach. In some sections of the city it is now practically impossible to secure either teachers or substitutes at branches, because of the difficulties in order to reach the outlying districts. Teachers will rejoice at a system of transfer which will enable them for one fare to use both the elevated and the surface lines.

Esther Steelman.—I live at 73d street, and work in the Ladies Hairdressing shop in the Drake hotel. It costs me 42 cents a day in fares on the train and bus. When the proposed elevated extension in my neighborhood is built it will cost me 14 cents a day, and I am for it! I am going to vote for the traction ordinance on April 7, and save money.

Mrs. Mary Langworthy.—I am in favor of the traction ordinance: First, because it is a comprehensive plan. Second, because it promises immediate construction of a subway, which means a tremendous saving of time as a result from the elimination of congestion in the loop. Third, because thousands of working women who come in and out of Chicago every day, who are now forced to stand, indecently crowded and herded like cattle, should benefit enormously under the new system. Fourth, because it seems to be the only plan that has any real possibilities.

Mrs. John Bley, president Housewives league.—I look upon the ratification of the traction ordinance as the greatest thing that can happen to Chicago, and I am sure that every citizen who has the welfare of the town at heart will be glad to take advantage of the opportunity to vote yes on April 7, and to give the city a modern traction system. In the meantime, because this campaign is an educational one, every man, woman and child should be working to reach the people of Chicago with information in regard to the ordinance. When the voters know the facts there can be no doubt but that we shall have ratification.

FOUR CHILDREN ASLEEP SLAIN BY FATHER WITH AX

Then Hacks at Self and May Not Live.

Kansas City, Mo., March 14.—W. Linn Gibson, 34, lay dangerously injured by his own hand in a hospital here tonight, the slayer of his four little children. He killed them—Josefie, 7; her twin brother, Maurice Lee; Hazel, 5; and Helen, 1½ years old—with a father's hatchet while they slept in their beds early today at the home at Prather Hill, near North Kansas City.

Found in Sister-in-Law's Home.

Following the tragedy Gibson fled to the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Nell Prather, nearby, where he attempted to take his own life with the hatchet, and later by slashing his wrists. Physicians say he probably will not live.

Gibson's wife called to him this morning to quiet the baby. Then, going herself to do so, she met her husband on the stairs, the bloody hatchet in his hand. Gibson raised the hatchet, but did not strike. He ran to Mrs. Prather's home, where he was found stretched on the floor bleeding from many wounds in his head and wrists.

Worried by Financial Troubles.

Gibson was said to have put all of his money in a garage that did not pay and had brooded much over his financial troubles.

He was characterized by neighbors as a slow thinking, kindly, home loving man.

SHEPHERD HELD; CASE GOING TO GRAND JURORS

Crowe Hopes for Quick Indictment.

rch 3 for a three weeks' continuance. The story had been told of how Shepherd prevented a deathbed wedding of the sweethearts—and he had admitted it.

Olson First to Accuse.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the criminal court had been the first to make an open accusation against Shepherd. Acting as one who was a friend of the dead youth, and in his capacity of a citizen, he questioned witness after witness at the inquest and ended with the dramatic charge that Shepherd deliberately administered typhoid germs to William McClintock.

The authorities had the previous testimony of Shepherd's interest in germs. Now, after Dr. Faiman made his statement, they had traced live germs to Shepherd's possession.

Mr. Crowe acted. Shepherd was questioned all night, but admitted nothing. Detectives took him to the Briggs house and remained with him. Mr. Crowe went home to sleep. He was not present when the habeas corpus hearing first came up yesterday morning.

Crowe Calls Evidence Strong.

"May it please the court," Mr. Crowe said at the afternoon session, "I have here the relator [Shepherd]. I am holding him without process, it is true. This is the result of an investigation into the death of William McClintock. The evidence so far, in my judgment, was sufficient for me to take Shepherd into custody.

"I have prepared formal complaint, if it is necessary. If the attorneys [turning toward Stewart, though Hedrick also was present] don't object, I would like to have this hearing continued until Wednesday at 2 o'clock."

Attorney Stewart smiled. A minute before, Mr. Crowe and he had been whispering to each other.

Attorney Hedrick spoke of an arrangement whereby Shepherd would be kept at the Briggs house, where his wife and counsel could call. Attorney Stewart announced his agreement to that.

Recalls Work as Prosecutor.

"I have an insight into the workings of the state's attorney's office," Attorney Stewart began. "Perhaps Mr. Crowe remembers me as one of his former assistants. I know we are technically entitled to discharge here.

"I do not wish to precipitate a charge of murder here, and, of course, we insist on our rights, Judge Crowe could prepare the charge.

"I wish to leave him every latitude. I know he will conduct the investigation squarely and fairly. I know Judge Crowe will look carefully into this case, which, we claim, is a conspiracy to deprive Shepherd of his rights under the will.

Assails Olson for Activity.

"We know there is a statute prohibiting judges from practicing law. Judge Olson has taken a personal interest in this case. He wants to make sure of an indictment."

Judge Hopkins waved aside the remarks concerning Judge Olson. Then Stewart continued:

"I don't want to see Judge Crowe pushed into a conspiracy against a member of this bar."

"The state's attorney always has his feet under him," Judge Hopkins commented, whereupon State's Attorney Crowe said, laughingly:

"May I reserve my closing argument?"

That was over.

THE MORNING HEARING

The first move to obtain the release of Shepherd took place in the morning before Messrs. O'Brien and Stewart were brought into the case. At 9 a. m. Attorneys Hedrick and Stoll, representing Shepherd, applied to Judge Hopkins for a writ of habeas corpus. Assistants of Mr. Crowe asked for delay. To their request Mr. Hedrick interposed objections.

"This is a will conspiracy," he thundered. "Is this court going to protect an innocent man in a damnable conspiracy?

"I told Mr. Sbarbaro yesterday I would bring Shepherd to him any time he wished. I would send him in alone. He didn't need to stage that midnight play.

Violated the Law.

"The state's attorney violated every principle of law in doing what he did. No warrant—only a subpoena—and they took him from his doorstep. If the Supreme court ever hears of it they will disbar Crowe or any lawyer who would do such a thing.

"The purpose was to terrorize and torment Shepherd. They wouldn't let him talk to his lawyers. Put yourself in his place and, even if the evidence is mountain high, it's a violation of the constitution to hold him.

"If the evidence is sufficient to procure an indictment, that is their privilege. Why not go at it in the right way?

"This seems like Russia. Like anarchy."

Learning that Mr. Crowe would appear in the case at a later hour, Judge Hopkins postponed action and the agreement for a delay till next week, with the afternoon session, was consequence.

THE QUIZ GOES AHEAD

When the court proceedings were over for the day Mr. Crowe assigned Assistant State's Attorney Harold Ward to aid John Sbarbaro and Joseph Savage in preparing for the grand jury. The prosecutor himself was visited by Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom.

It had been intimated that the attorney general might intervene in the proceedings of the McClintock investigation. They were together two hours. Then Mr. Carlstrom was asked:

"Are you going to participate in the investigation?"

"There's no need. Mr. Crowe is capable and efficient," he replied, ending the matter.

Shepherd and Attorneys Stewart and Hedrick conferred all afternoon in the prosecutor's office. Afterwards Sergts. William E. Hanke and John J. Geary took him to dinner, then to the hotel.

Assistant Prosecutors Sbarbaro, Savage and Levy, questioned Dr. Fosberg, Lester E. Adams, 705 North avenue, A. K. Hilny, 8930 Grand boulevard, Susie Housen, 3144 Vernon avenue, Miss Isabelle Anderson, 6428 Kimbark avenue, and Dr. Faiman.

Dr. Fosberg was steadfast in his former story. Miss Anderson formerly was a stenographer in Shepherd's office and she denied she had typed the letter to Dr. Faiman. Adams, Hilny and Miss Housen were former students at the National University of Sciences and they said they didn't remember seeing Shepherd there.

Talks of Home Laboratory.

Dr. Faiman said the first time Shepherd called at the school he asked prices on courses, on outfitting a home laboratory and about microscope lenses. The next time he called, Dr. Faiman said, Shepherd asked to see slides containing germs, asking always about typhoid germs, how they were cultured and if he had any live germs on hand, which he did.

When Shepherd called again, Dr. Faiman said he showed him the live germs under the microscope. That day the three tubes disappeared, and Shepherd came no more, he declared.

Louis Kles, former houseman at the McClintock-Shepherd $65,000 home at 241 Melrose avenue, Kenilworth, came in and told Mr. Sbarbaro he recalled two occasions when he surprised Shepherd in the basement experimenting with fluid in two bottles. Each time Shepherd stepped into another room and slammed the door, Kles said. He added that Shepherd had a large storeroom in the basement which was always kept locked.

Then it was announced at the office of the state's attorney nothing more would be done until today.

Short Skirts Feature Fashion Show Tomorrow

The mannish style in women's spring costumes is to be pushed into the background in the near future, Mme. Alla Ripley, president of the Fashion Art league, which opens a four-day exposition tomorrow, predicted yesterday. She said that soft draperies and extremely short skirts are the outstanding features of the models to be exhibited in the gold room of the Congress hotel.

Million Brings Tragedies to McClintock Family

This is the tale of the McClintock million, tarnished with death along its long course.

In 1870, an Englishman died, leaving the entire estate to his widow, who promptly married William Hickling. They came to Ottawa, Ill., where Mrs. Hickling died, her husband and heir wedding Sarah Gensler. A few more years and death took Hickling. The widow became the wife of William McClintock. She died a short time later.

In 1902, McClintock moved to Chicago and married Miss Emma Nelson, then of Topeka, Kan.

April 3, 1903, a son was born and named William Nelson McClintock.

In 1905, an automobile accident ended his father's life.

That same year William D. Shepherd and his wife went to live with Mrs. McClintock and her little son.

June 7, 1909, in an illness which sprung up over night, Mrs. McClintock died, leaving her son a million dollars and leaving the Shepherds almost complete control of him. He went to school, went to college and returned just before attaining his majority to woo his bride to be, Miss Isabella Pope, and to study a business course to fit him to handle his estate.

Nov. 23, 1924, McClintock became ill. Typhoid fever.

Dec. 1, 1924, Miss Pope got a license for their wedding but it was never used, for on—

Dec. 5 Billy died, and Shepherd became his heir. The McClintock dynasty was broken.

Dec. 17 it was announced that seven cousins would seek to break the will.

On Dec. 24 Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, whose own brother had died shortly after a visit from the Shepherds, had Billy McClintock's body taken from its grave for an autopsy.

On March 3 Judge Olson flatly accused Shepherd of the murder. Then the inquest was postponed to March 24.

On March 12 Dr. Faiman started making his important admissions and next day charged that Shepherd had stolen typhoid germs from him and later paid him $50.

March 13 Shepherd was placed under arrest by State's Attorney Crowe.

Yesterday, March 14, it was agreed that Shepherd should remain in custody at least until Wednesday. In the meantime the grand jury will be asked to indict him.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IS LOSER IN $60,000 SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—[Special.]—Clara Kimball Young, motion picture actress, and Harry Garson, formerly her producer and manager, today were $60,000 losers by a court judgment rendered by Superior Court Justice John L. Fleming.

The suit was brought by Robert M. Brownson, Michigan attorney, for services rendered under a contract entered into in New York, July 24, 1917, to act as their counsel. His plea alleged default in three-fourths payment of the agreed sum of $80,000 and expenses.

Miss Young was represented by a lawyer who made no objection to entering the judgment.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.

FURTHER COLD TODAY AND THEN MILDER WEATHER

Temperatures here may drop to 12 degrees above zero this morning, but that ends the present cold snap, it was predicted last night. Monday there will be increasing cloudiness, but the temperature will moderate.

The gale expected yesterday didn't arrive, although conditions were bad enough. There was a thirty mile wind and it rained and it snowed in alternation for most of the day, clearing up in the evening.

Total precipitation of the day was only .15 of an inch, and so far this year there has been a precipitation deficiency of 2.16 inches.

AIREDALE AND WOLF ARE FOUND GRIPPED IN DEATH

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., March 14.—[Special.]—A fatal duel, between an airedale and a timber wolf was uncovered with the finding today of the bodies of both in the bush behind the farm of Joseph Kominski in Mackinaw county, near Brevort lake.

When the airedale failed to return home after two days of absence Mr. Kominski searched the surrounding territory. Lying in the bloody snow, the big airedale was found dead with its teeth clenched in the throat of the wolf.

The airedale's jugular vein had been ripped by the fangs of its wild opponent, evidently at the outset of the battle. The pelt of the wolf, taken off by the farmer, measured six feet long.

OLD SUB CHASER SEIZED WITH RUM IN WILD CHASE

New York, March 14.—After an exciting chase today a police launch, commanded by Sergt. Frederick E. Ruggles, captured the converted submarine chaser Vee, one of the swiftest rum runners in the harbor. The boat is valued at about $90,000.

KELLOGG SET TO SHAPE DETAILS FOR ARMS MEET

Now Ready to Discuss Parley with Coolidge.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—Details of an American summons for a new conference to limit naval armaments, which President Coolidge has indicated is about to be given serious consideration, are still to be shaped by the President and Secretary of State Kellogg, it was indicated by state department officials today.

Secretary Kellogg has not discussed the matter with the President since returning home from his post as ambassador to London, it was learned today, owing to the fact that he has not yet had time to take this situation up at the White House.

Has Been Busy with Routine.

Since his return Mr. Kellogg has been swamped with the events incident to assuming his work as secretary of state, much of which detail included such routine as official calls, studying the background of his new post, and familiarizing himself with the trend of home affairs generally.

He is known to have brought home a valuable insight into the European phases of any pending conference such as the President proposes, but it was stated emphatically today that he has never sounded out foreign representatives on the sentiments in their countries towards an American invitation to a new conference.

British Advances Only Informal.

His conversations in London, word of which first came from British sources, it was said today, were only informal, and did not go into detail, so that these latter matters are still to be investigated.

Among the matters yet to be settled formally is the question of what nations are to be invited if the President proceeds with his plan for a conference.

Policeman Shoots Youth of 17 Caught in Holdup

Charles Kublis, 17 years old, 3232 Lime street, one of four armed robbers caught in the act of holding up John Klinek, 3406 South Paulina street, last night, was shot in the left hip by Policeman Frank McMahon of the Deering street station while at 21st and Poplar streets. The wounded boy was taken to the Bridewell hospital. His companions escaped by driving away in a Cadillac car.

Grecian Spectacles

The Greeks used other people for their spectacles.

Anyone who was bothered with his eyesight had slaves trained to read to him.

There is no trace of spectacles in classic times—excepting the false report about Nero's emerald.

Someone, to be sure, lately found a lens of rock crystal in the ruins of Nineveh, fairly well polished, and with a clear focus.

But the man to whom it had belonged had been dead several thousand years and could make no report upon the use he put it to.

If the ancient Assyrians and Babylonians did possess a knowledge of spectacles, it became lost afterward, for neither the Hebrews or the Egyptians knew anything about them.

Modern optical science, as expressed in the Almer Coe stores, has developed within the memory of many men now living.

JOHN BORDEN AND MRS. STILLWELL WED IN CAPITAL

To Honeymoon in South at Groom's Estate.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Courtney Letts Stillwell, daughter of Mrs. Frank C. Letts of Chicago, and John Borden, Chicago millionaire sportsman, explorer, and writer, were married at noon today in the apartment of the bride's mother at the Wardman Park hotel.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. V. Briggs in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Frederick C. Letts of Chicago. She wore an ensemble costume of lanvin green kasha cloth, combined with foulard to match, the coat being of kasha and the gown of foulard. Her hat was a small model of green felt.

Mrs. Letts, mother of the bride, wore black charmeuse made on straight lines and a picture model hat of black.

Californian Is Best Man.

The bridegroom had as best man Harry Scott of San Francisco.

Owing to the death of the bride's father less than a year ago, the wedding was extremely simple. Among the out-of-town guests who witnessed the ceremony were Miss Joyce Borden of New York, sister of the bridegroom; the Misses Anne and Betty Borden, his daughters, who came from St. Timothy's school at Catonsville, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Letts of Chicago; and Mr. and Mrs. George F. McLaughlin Jr. of Lake Forest.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Borden left on a honeymoon trip through the south, during which they expect to spend much time on Mr. Borden's plantation in Mississippi. They will make their home at 1952 Astor street, Chicago.

Bride Has Two Children.

As Miss Courtney Letts, Mrs. Borden made her début in Washington while her father was serving here during the war. Her first marriage, which ended in divorce, took place, however, after her return to Chicago. She has two small children, a boy and a girl, who have been sent to the Mississippi plantation under the care of a governess to await the arrival of Mr. Borden and his bride.

Mr. Borden, who is widely known as a sportsman, scientist, and explorer, has also been divorced. He is a brother of Mary Borden, now the wife of a high ranking British army officer. She has won considerable fame as the author of several widely read novels.

A RIVER TRAGEDY

RESCUE FAMILY OF CRIPPLE AS 'HOME' IS SUNK

Arthur Fletcher, 53 years old, a cripple since the winter of 1899, when he rescued seven Northwestern university students who were carried out into the lake on an ice floe, was seriously injured yesterday and his family made homeless when a heavy sand scow rammed his houseboat in the river at North Western avenue.

Fletcher, whose heroism gained him a Carnegie medal, has been a houseboat colonist for thirty years. It was while his boat was anchored off Rogers Park that he noticed the students in distress and went to their rescue in a rowboat. Exposure to the cold at that time made him a paralytic for life.

The scow which sank his home threw him, his wife, Catherine, and children into the icy water. They were rescued by occupants of other houseboats, who came to the scene in row boats. Fletcher was taken to the county hospital and the others cared for by neighbors.

EW ALIEN LAW DAMS FLOOD OF IMMIGRANTS

orders Tight, Smuggling Nil, Says Sen. Reed.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—Our new immigration law virtually has settled the immigration question, according to Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.], chief sponsor of the measure in the senate.

"After an eight months' trial of the law Senator Reed finds that the volume of net immigration is only a fraction of what it was under the old law, while the character of the additions to our population from this source has been tremendously improved.

"Assertion that fully as many aliens are sneaking and being bootlegged across our borders as are entering legally the senator pronounces fanciful.

Some Smuggling from Canada.

"There are not ships enough crossing the ocean to bring the immigrants who are said to be smuggled into the United States in these days," said Senator Reed today. "We know what the human freight is on the boats coming to Mexico and Canada.

"There are not enough of them coming to bring the numbers that are said to be smuggling themselves in. There is some smuggling from this precious crowd of lawbreakers that hovers outside of New York, the rum fleet. They do smuggle in a few immigrants, I believe, along with their liquors. There are a few smuggled across the Canadian border. It is very easy to come across on the Detroit ferry, for instance, if one speaks English and looks like an American. The inspectors don't have the time to examine them very carefully. There is some smuggling there, but it is comparatively little.

Border Police Force Established.

"We are guarding against it by locating our inspectors in Canadian seaports and Mexican seaports, infinitely better than we could by trying to police the border. We have recently established a police force of about 250 border police.

"The Canadian boundary is 4,380 miles long, measured by all of its windings. The Mexican boundary is 1,744 miles long, and it is very easy to cross at any place. The coast lines of our states immediately adjacent to the boundaries furnish very easy methods of access. The St. Lawrence river and the great lakes coast line and the Washington and Maine coast lines add 1,000 miles of accessible frontier in addition to the land boundary. Down in the Gulf of Mexico our gulf states add 1,700 miles more of frontier, which is comparatively easy for an alien to cross in safety. But there is encouragement, so far as that goes, in the figures regarding deportations. They have very much increased because of the increased vigilance of our immigration authorities. In the last six months the deportations amounted to 4,441, an increase of about one-third over any similar period in our history.

Hiding Almost Impossible.

"It is practically impossible for an immigrant to smuggle himself in and stay hidden. It is not always that our inspectors get him, but somebody whose job he has taken or somebody who has a personal reason for telling on him always informs immigration authorities and in the end they get him.

"We have picked up a surprising number on applications for citizenship. A good many of them think that their offense is forgotten; after a few years they apply for citizenship, and then to their astonishment they are arrested and deported."

Under the new law the congestion of immigrants at Ellis Island and other points of entry has been completely done away with, Senator Reed pointed out, as well as the racing of immigrant ships to land their human freight within the quotas. Only so many are allowed to come in each month from each country, and when an alien obtains a visé of his passport by an American consul he knows that he is within the quota.

"It is a pleasure to testify from my own personal experience that the state department is applying this law in absolute frankness without discrimination," said Senator Reed. "Visés are granted in the order of application to persons who are fully qualified to come in. That is to say, no person, whatever may be his political influence, is able to have himself advanced on the list on which the visés are granted by the various consuls over any other suitable immigrant who has applied. I know that because partly out of a desire to test it I tried not long ago to secure such a preference from the state department and was absolutely unsuccessful, although I took it clear to Secretary Hughes himself.

Senator Reed cited some instructive figures showing the marked effect of the new law on the tide of immigration.

Temporary Wall Full of Holes.

"In 1914, the last year of unrestricted immigration," he said, "we gained 915,000 immigrants net and about 85 per cent of that number came from Europe. The gain in immigrants from Europe in 1914 was 801,000 persons, nearly 1 per cent of the population of the United States, and about one fourth of that number came from Italy; about one-fourth came from Poland, and about one-fourth from Austria-Hungary. Only about one-fifteenth were English speaking immigrants. That was the problem we were facing when the temporary quota law was to expire on the first of last July.

"The immigration law that was temporarily adopted in 1921, the temporary quota law, fixed quotas at 357,000, but it left so many loopholes that the actual arrivals were twice that many, and our net gain, therefore, in 1924, the last year before this new law went into effect, was 630,000 persons and about two-thirds of them came from Europe.

"Let us see what these six months have done. From July 1 to Dec. 1, 1924, the gross arrivals of immigrant aliens from Europe amounted to 67,363; the departures of emigrant aliens going abroad to stay amounted to 48,120, so the net gain from Europe was only 19,203. The departures of southeast and eastern Europeans far exceeded the arrivals.

Thinks Problem Well Solved.

"I think we can fairly say for the first time in seventy-five years that the problem of European immigration to America has been settled with a net gain at the rate of less than 40,000 annually, and all of that net gain coming from northern and western Europe, mostly people who speak our language before they get here, mostly people who have inherited from their forbears a capacity for self government."

Asiatic immigration the senator pronounced no problem for the reason that fewer Asiatics are coming in than are going out.

SEEKING THE FLU GERM

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, examines test tube in test for bacilli. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

DENIES MALADY IS EPIDEM OF MYSTERY FLU

24 Hour Toll Here Is 21 Lives.

Although Chicago is afflicted with a highly contagious respirational malady that is proving fatal in many neglected cases, Health Commissioner Bundesen and the United States public health service joined hands yesterday in minimizing the seriousness of the epidemic.

Influenza and pneumonia deaths traceable to the malady totaled 21 for the last twenty-four hour period, Dr. Bundesen said, and the number of new cases reported was 143. He added that precautions taken by an aroused public are putting the malady under control. The rain and snow has helped, he said.

Death Rate Decreases.

"We are having a severe outbreak of colds, which, although highly contagious, are not fatal unless neglected," Dr. Bundesen said. "It is the neglected case with its fever, aching, and prostration that develops into pneumonia and fatality. This is no new or mysterious malady and is not confined to Chicago. Deaths decreased during the last twenty-four hours, although they were higher than the death rate for the same period last year."

A hot bath, some hot drinks, and a bed with plenty of blankets is the prescription the health commissioner advised for those who feel the disease coming on. If no relief is felt in twenty-four hours it's a case for the doctor.

U. S. Takes No Steps.

Beyond similar warnings the U. S. public health service is taking no steps to combat the disease, Washington reports said. Chicago appears to be hit a little harder than most other cities.

Dr. Bundesen coupled with his flu warnings an admonition to avoid raw or under-cooked pork. Trichinosis from raw pork right now is as much or more threatening than the flu, he said.

PARIS POINTS TO 'MA' FERGUSON IN SUFFRAGE PLEA

PARIS, March 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—"Ma" Ferguson's rule as governor of the state of Texas was today evoked as an argument in favor of women's suffrage in France by the sponsors of the measures coming up for discussion in the chamber of deputies next Tuesday.

The preamble of the document distributed among the deputies read:

"In the state of Texas, which is ruled over by 'Ma' Ferguson, are things not running as smoothly as before? On the contrary, the conditions are better. 'Ma' Ferguson is actually accomplishing what no man ever attempted before her régime. She has inaugurated open warfare against the Ku Klux Klan."

Propaganda circulated by suffrage advocates declared: "The United States is better off since women were permitted to vote."

OWNER OF STORE RESISTS ROBBER; SHOT, MAY DIE

Desco Brown, 1133 Berwyn avenue, proprietor of a delicatessen store at that address, may die because he resisted a robber last night. He was shot through the stomach.

The robber entered and commanded Brown to turn over the contents of his cash register. Brown refused. The thug raised his gun and fired. Brown fell.

George McCabe, 1409 Greenleaf street, a customer, attempted to stop the robber as he turned to flee. A shot was his reward, a shot which struck a rolls of bills in his hip pocket but did no other damage.

SHOOTS MAN WHO DECIDED SHE WAS 'TOO DANGEROUS'

When Thomas Condich, 28, 2548 Princeton avenue, tried to jilt Mrs. Mary Fiore, 25, last night because she was becoming "too dangerous," she proved the accuracy of his fears by pulling out a revolver and firing five shots, two of which wounded him in the shoulder.

For several hours after the shooting, which occurred in the Hotel Elmo, 219 West Van Buren street, where the two had registered as man and wife, police were unable to find either man or woman. Then Condich was discovered in the Chicago hospital. He directed the police to Mrs. Fiore's home at 307 West 25th street.

After Condich had identified her, Mrs. Fiore was locked up in the Hyde park police station.

MME. JERITZA, PRIMA DONNA, HERE IN SILENCE

In order that she may sing, Madame Maria Jeritza, Viennese prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera company, never talks—when she is out doors.

This tall lady with the amazingly lovely golden hair stepped off a Santa Fé train from Kansas City last night, took one whiff of Chicago smoke, another of Chicago air, and her vigil of silence began. She sings in English and in French; she sings in German and in Italian; she sings in Spanish, and mayhap in Russian. But she cannot be interviewed unless she is surrounded by four walls, a ceiling and a bit of heat.

Later, in her suite at the Drake hotel, Madame Jeritza spoke a bit, in quaintly correct English which, she explains, "day by day gets better and better." While she is inside, that is.

Madame Jeritza, who appears in a concert this afternoon at the Auditorium theater, was accompanied by four accompanists, by Mr. F. C. Coppicus, head of the Metropolitan Music bureau and by her husband, Baron von Popper.

11 Women Die in Stampede of Over 1,000,000 Pilgrims

CALCUTTA, March 14. — [United Press.]—Eleven women were crushed and suffocated and seven injured in a stampede of more than 1,000,000 pilgrims attending the annual festival of Ajodhja, famous holy place at the foot of the Himalayas.

$1,000 CHECK STARTS PAULINA'S HOPE BOX FOR A FAR OFF DAY

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.] — Miss Paulina Longworth, daughter of the Republican leader of the house of representatives and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, born on St. Valentine's day, has received her first wedding present, although the day for her christening has not been named.

The wedding gift, which comes from Mrs. Marshall Field, is a check for $1,000, which has been placed at interest in little Miss Longworth's name until her wedding day, when, Mrs. Field remarked casually, since she would not be here, the bride is to select a gift with the compliments of an old family friend.

SMOOT IMPROVES, HIS DOCTORS SAY

Washington, D. C., March 14. — [United Press.]—Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], who was taken seriously ill in the senate yesterday, was said today to have passed "a fairly good night."

Smoot is suffering from acute indigestion and a general breakdown, according to his doctors, who have directed him to remain in bed for at least two weeks.

VICTIM OF SHOOTING DIES.

Mrs. Leila Lesser, 27, colored, 1530 West 13th street, who was shot during a quarrel in her home last Monday, died yesterday.

WOLVES PURSUE MERRYMAKERS; LEAP ON SLEIGH

Winnipeg, Man., March 14.—[Special.]—Mounted police today reported dances are being postponed and social engagements, involving trips between sunset and sunrise, canceled by residents of the new settlement at Vilna, northeast of Edmonton, Alb., because timber wolves have invaded the district and are threatening the lives of settlers.

On Friday night a party of merrymakers, returning from a dance, were pursued for miles by a pack of twenty timber wolves. Whenever the horses slowed down, leaders of the pack attempted to jump into the sleigh and the men had to fight the beasts off with their rifle stocks. The men only had the shells in their rifles and saved them for an emergency. The foreman of a tie camp was attacked today by twelve wolves. His horse galloped off to camp and the man climbed a tree. Lumbermen, aroused by the arrival of the horse at camp, went to the rescue and killed three of the wolves.

Crack Three Safes in Harvey; Loot Is Small

Three safes were robbed early yesterday in Harvey. Robbers wrecked the safe in the Illinois Central depot and took $17.43. At the Standard Oil company refining plant they smashed the safe but took no money. An expert worked the combination of the safe in Koch Brothers' machine shop, removed $25, and locked it again.

15 SAY THEY'RE ANNIE TO GET $10,000, BUT NONE IS REAL ANNIE

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—Fifteen women have appeared to claim the $10,000 reward offered by Mrs. A. B. Woodson, wealthy Washington resident, for the discovery of Annie Mitchell and proof that she was the first wife of Jack Seldow.

Mrs. Woodson is anxious to clear the man who wed her runaway daughter, Mary, of a charge that he is a bigamist. Seldow is in the Tombs awaiting arraignment on an old charge of assault, but the authorities are inclined to release him to his bride and her mother if the bigamy charge is disproved.

None of the fifteen who sought today to prove themselves the real and only Annie Mitchell was able to substantiate her claim.

POLICE ORDERED TO LAUNCH NEW DRIVE ON SPEED

City Judges, Too, Told to Enforce Law Strictly.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

While the death clock ticked away human lives remorselessly yesterday, just as a matter of percentages and equations, a start was made toward what appears to be the only available method of checking it—a drive by the police against automobile speeders.

Chief of Police Collins called a special meeting of his captains, told them that speed deaths were increasing and that the law would have to be enforced more strictly. He informed his captains that he would hold each one strictly accountable for his district in this matter, and that they would have to devise a system by which they could keep in touch with their districts for twenty-four hours of each day.

Judge Olson's Order.

"Enforce the speed law," Chief Justice Harry Olson told the Municipal court judges.

The state law is so elastic, there is such a jungle of city and park ordinances, sometimes in conflict with the state law, that this is not an easy matter. It cannot be done with any uniformity, Judge Olson admits, until there is a concentration of speed courts and some clarification of the laws.

Coroner Oscar Wolff has what he considers a basic remedy for this situation.

This is a law providing for a certificate of competency to be held by every driver of an automobile. His bill has already been introduced by Senator Glackin and sentiment seems to be gathering in favor of it. It was defeated at the last session of the legislature but has new features which may make it more palatable to the motoring public.

Color Blind Barred.

The bill now provides for elimination during the first year of the glaringly unfit. No certificate would be issued to those who have ever been found insane, convicted of a felony or convicted of driving while intoxicated. The color blind are also cut out from this privilege.

"At the present time the police, the coroner, and the judges state that many persons in all these classes of the unfit are driving cars in Chicago.

"The man at the throttle of a railroad engine is a picked man," said Judge Olson. "He is a man with a clear brain, a good record, and good habits. He has a clear track to run on. How much more important is the man at the wheel of an automobile, weaving through the crowded traffic?"

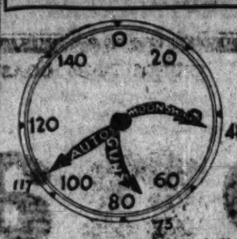
Deputy for Each County.

The Glackin bill seeks to create the office of registrar of motor vehicle operators, with a deputy in each county of the state. The certificate of competence would be issued the first year without an examination, but on affidavit only. Those driving without such certificates would be sent to jail without the alternative of a fine.

After the first year examinations would be held before renewal of the certificates.

"What we really need and will eventually have," said the coroner, "is a state commission in charge of highway regulation and all speed laws. The laws are such a mess now that even the judges do not know what they are. The driver of an automobile finds one meaning in a red light in one part of the city and another meaning in another part. The city ordinance says, for instance, that an automobile seeking to pass a wagon on street car streets must go to the curb side. The state law provides that such passage must be to the left. The park regulations differ. The state laws should be made rigid and the commission should make the ordinances conform."

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1. Yesterday was the seventy-third day of 1925.

WIDOW IS GIVEN $10,000 AWARD IN SPEED SUIT

Husband Lost Life in a Taxicab Crash.

Yellow taxicabs had a bad day in regard to motor casualties yesterday. One Yellow chauffeur was arrested after he shot his cab past a standing street car, severely injuring a young woman who had just alighted; a man died of injuries received when struck by a Yellow cab; a widow whose husband was killed in a Yellow cab accident was awarded $10,000 damages by a jury.

Edward Trinze, 1124 North La Salle street, the driver whose cab struck Miss Mollie Cphen, 20 years old, 2018 West Taylor street, was booked by the police on four charges. They were assault with an automobile, reckless driving, failing to stop ten feet behind a halted street car, and failing to stop after an accident.

Shouts at Taxi.

Witnesses to the accident, which occurred at Roosevelt road and Robey street, declared Trinze, after his cab knocked the young woman unconscious, sped on. A policeman fired a shot at the cab, but the driver refused to stop. Several hundred feet further a group of men rushed in front of the cab, and Trinze stopped. Miss Cphen was taken to the county hospital, where it was said she would recover.

Peter Gross, 56 years old, of Mount Greenwood, was the victim who died. He was injured a month ago when struck, while at Sacramento avenue and 111th street, by a Yellow taxicab driven by George Goehst. Gross died in St. Francis hospital. His death raised Cook county's motor death toll since Jan. 1 to a total of 117.

Jury Awards Her $10,000.

A jury in Judge Marcus Kavanaugh's court awarded $10,000 damages to Mrs. Hannah Dooley, 4345 West Harrison street, whose husband, Simon Dooley, was killed in a Yellow cab accident. Mrs. Dooley and her two daughters also were passengers in the cab, and each has begun suit for $30,000 damages against the cab company.

Mrs. Ruth Anderson, 875 Cornelia avenue, was severely injured when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into a signal light pole in Lincoln park.

Deputies Give Mussolini Two Votes of Confidence

ROME, March 14.—[By Associated Press.]—The chamber of deputies gave the government of Premier Mussolini two votes of confidence today. Supporting the government's internal policy, the chamber voted 215 to 12, while the second vote, on the colonial policy, was 211 to 15.

RENEW SEARCH FOR MISSING WHITEHEAD BOYS

The family of Joseph and William Whitehead, brothers, who disappeared in Glacier National park last summer, has sent out 25,000 posters, renewing the hunt that slackened when the great park was combed without trace of the two brothers.

"If they are alive they are held prisoners. They would never stay away from us of their own will," the mother and sister declared yesterday in denying rumors from Montana that the boys have gone away with a trapper to his lonely mountain home for the winter to cause a sensation by their disappearance.

William, 22, the younger, had another year before graduation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and had bought a round trip ticket to the park from Boston last June. He stopped over here where his brother Joseph, 29, who had a $400 a month position, joined him on a vacation trip to the park. They were last heard from on August 22.

ROB CLOTHIER OF $55.00.

Jerome Lazarontvitz, 7547 Burnham avenue, was held up in his clothing store at 3406 East 92d street last night and robbed of $55.00.

VICTIMS OF SPEED

MRS. LOUISE M. KUHN. MRS. MARY KLANDA.

DIES TRYING IN VAIN TO SAVE HER MATE FROM WIRE

Santa Rosa, Cal., March 14.—A tragedy, which took two lives and was marked by the desperate attempt of a wife to save her husband from electrocution, was enacted late today on a ranch at Glen Ellen, twenty miles east of here. The victims were: Peter Oehler, 54, and his wife, aged 50.

Oehler had been boring a well on his ranch. A section of pipe came in contact with a high voltage wire as Oehler touched it and dropped lifeless with his body pinned under the pipe.

The screams of his son and daughter, who had witnessed their father's fate, summoned Mrs. Oehler, J. H. Murray, district fire warden, and T. Meglan, a rancher.

Murray and Meglan attempted to remove the charged pipe from Oehler's body, and, unconscious, were hurled several feet.

Then Mrs. Oehler, disregarding the pleas of her children, grasped the pipe in both hands and crumpled beside the body of her husband, dead.

CORONER'S JURY ACCEPTS STORY OF DYING OFFICER

Choosing to believe the death-bed statement of Motorcycle Policeman James E. Scott rather than the testimony of his widow and mother, a coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict finding that Scott accidentally shot himself following an all night liquor party Feb. 21, at 714 Buckingham place.

The dead patrolman's widow and his mother gave testimony that led the police to hold Miss Grace Fletcher, a vaudeville actress, who lived at the Buckingham place apartment. She was charged with the shooting of Scott.

However, the coroner's jury decided that, since no one saw the shooting, the policeman's dying statement that he accidentally shot himself should be believed.

16 DRY AGENTS RAID SALOONS NEAR JOLIET

Sixteen prohibition agents under Chief Enforcement Officer Charles W. Vursell late yesterday raided the saloons and roadhouses of Joliet and Channahon, near Joliet, seizing large quantities of beer, wine, alcohol, and moonshine.

In Channahon the road house of Joseph Nelli and Albert Wills was raided, the two proprietors and quantities of moonshine, beer, and wine were seized.

Three saloons in Joliet also came in for the agents' action. They were those of Romano Castafland, 629 South Chicago street, James Byrne, 1400 North Collins street, across from the penitentiary, and Joseph Koschawar, 1151 Broadway. Beer and liquor also was seized in these and the keepers arrested.

EARLY INCOME TAX PAYMENTS SHOW INCREASE

Gain $380,948 Even with Rate Cut.

Income taxpayers in the first Illinois federal district at 1 o'clock yesterday had paid $380,948.70 more than they had at the same hour a year ago.

This was true despite the fact that net incomes of less than $5,000, this year paid on the basis of 2 per cent instead of 4 per cent of their net incomes, with an additional 25 per cent allowance on earned incomes.

Comparative Figures.

Here are the figures announced yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, after the last bank deposit of the day had been compiled:

	Number of returns.	Amount collected.	Number of fully paid returns.
1925	172,300	$5,223,786.09	150,600
1924	195,900	4,842,837.39	68,700

The big rush, however, is to come Monday—a day of grace granted because March 15 is on Sunday. Last year the returns jumped from the total of $4,842,837.39 on March 14 to a total of $18,809,776.75 at midnight on the fifteenth. Mrs. Reinecke stated yesterday that collections several millions in excess of last year's March 15 total, are expected by midnight tomorrow.

Clear Up Early Checks.

Two hundred and fifty clerks were assigned to work in the internal revenue department all day today, although the office will not be open to the public. This action was taken by Mrs. Reinecke in order to have all checks received in the last Saturday and Sunday mails ready for bank deposit the first thing tomorrow morning, thus gaining the government an additional day's interest on deposits.

Persons eager to peruse the new tax figures under the publicity clause of the revenue act are to be disappointed for several months, at least, it was made known yesterday.

The law states that tax payments may be viewed from index cards, while secrecy continues to govern the handling of the detailed schedules. There won't be complete sets of cards until some time late in June or in July, according to Mrs. Reinecke and unless new regulations become effective in the meantime, no tax information will be given out until that time.

Compute Publicity Effects.

Experts who have been attempting to determine the effect last year's publicity had on the filing of this year's returns yesterday expressed the opinion that payments have been stimulated by publication of the tax lists.

Fear expressed at time of publication that small taxpayers would conclude they shouldn't pay full taxes because they supposed rich citizens were evading some or all of their taxes, has not materialized, it was said. On the other hand, neighborhood rivalry has inspired many new taxpayers to get on the list with sizable schedules, the experts reported.

Delinquent taxpayers will be subjected to fines, if payments made direct are not on hand by midnight tomorrow night. No punishment will be made for letters appearing with postmarks stamped before 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

$8,000,000 TO PAY TAX

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[United Press.]—Eight million citizens will have filed their income tax returns by Monday midnight, internal revenue bureau officials estimated today.

The new returns are the first filed under the 1924 revenue act—the tax reduction bill passed by congress last spring.

The number of individual returns filed in 1923, the last year on which complete compilations are available, was 6,787,481. The income reported was $21,336,212,530 and the total tax paid was $861,057,308.

CALLES CLOSES REBEL CATHOLIC CHURCH TO ALL

Mexico City, March 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Soledad church has been closed to worship by orders of President Calles in settlement of the conflict created by the Knights of Guadalupe, followers of the Mexican Catholic Apostolic church, who recently took over the building by force and ejected the Roman Catholic priest, Father Silva.

President Calles declared Patriarch Perez of the new sect and his followers had broken the constitution by taking national property under the keeping of the Roman Catholic church without fulfilling the requirements of the law.

On the other hand the president found the Roman Catholic clergy had declared themselves in open rebellion against the constitution, "despising the authorities through their most prominent spokesman." The Roman Catholic clergy, the statement continued, refused to recognize state ownership of the church buildings and the government's right to exercise control over church worship and practices.

Third Woman Sues Printer for Breach of Promise

Miss Bessie Fisher, 931 Eastwood avenue, yesterday sued Hugo Attenberger, 830 Eastwood avenue, a printer, for breach of promise, asking $100,000 damages. Her attorney, J. J. McCarthy, says he has learned Attenberger is being sued by two other women on the same charge.

TOLERANCE IS STRENGTH.

The two great empires of the world were erected on tolerance. The short lived powers have been intolerant.

Rome required the military submission of the peoples added to the empire. It demanded obedience to the legatus or proconsul who commanded the troops and kept order and to the procurator who collected the taxes and duties. The habits and customs of the people were not molested unless they threatened order.

The Pantheon at Rome is still a testimonial to the politic world wisdom of these rulers. It was the temple of all the gods. A subject of the empire might come from the Aegean sea, the delta of the Nile, the hills of Persia, the grain fields of Africa, the valleys of Gaul or the estuaries of Britain and if he had gods or a god he would find a shrine to his belief, in the spirit if not in fact, under the wonderful dome of the Pantheon.

It was probably the greatest tolerance the world ever knew, extending to the beliefs, opinions and habits of the people ruled by Rome. The early Christians were not persecuted because they had a religion, but because it was feared that another slave insurrection was coming up from under ground and that the belief of the Christian would destroy the state. The slave rebellion of Spartacus was put down with just as much severity as was visited on the Christians and blazing human torches had illuminated the Appian way for miles out of Terracina.

The Roman was ferocious in his amusements and for purposes of state, but it was only after the Gothic Romans had Rome with one idea of Christianity and the Graeco-Romans had Byzantium with another that opinions and beliefs made wars.

The greatest empire since the Roman is the British and they are since the Romans the greatest respecters of opinion, habit and custom. They stopped the suttee in India and the widow of a high caste was not allowed to throw herself on his funeral pyre. They also stopped the juggernaut.

With these emotional differences they are as the Romans. Hundreds of the subject race may be sacrificed to reasons of state. The slaughter at Amritsar was an ordinance of empire, but when people are submissive and orderly they may have their beliefs and customs, except when they include the suttee. The Roman proconsul would have seen the widow burn and might have said there was no accounting for taste, but it was otherwise with a British general. The suttee was too different from the home life of the dear queen.

England itself had almost as hard a time getting to Roman tolerance as the other nations of Europe had. There were persecutions for beliefs and there were regulations of customs, dating back to the first written laws of England, the "Dooms" of the Saxon kings. But an Englishman is free today to a much greater extent than the citizens of this republic are. His habits, speech and his customs have a good deal more latitude than the American's.

There are many regulations. The war brought most of them in under the defense of the realm act and some have stuck, amusing or irritating an American who found that he could not buy cigarets after 8 in the evening except at a slot machine in a railroad station, but these were regulations and not prohibitions. The British government does not give the British citizen the multitude of restraints which American governments, federal and state, impose on their inhabitants.

Our republic began by recognizing the political philosophy of freedom and tolerance. The country began with experience in intolerance. The history of Massachusetts bay is a sad and rigorous chronicle of cruel control of opinion, belief, and habit. When the various states came together as a nation the founders knew that the foundation must be tolerance and this promise of liberty was written into the constitution as a guaranty to the people.

A good deal of that spirit has been lost. The liberty of the individual is not regarded as the most cherished possession of American citizenship. It has been oppressed by many other ideas of a greater good. Coercion has been justified as a means to a beneficial end.

The intolerant nations have not endured. The coercion of opinion and habit has been fatal. It has been a weakness and it has not produced the strength which lived. It cost France her American possessions which might have been held by the Huguenots if they had been allowed the freedom of the English nonconformists. It ruined Spain.

Intolerance is fear, weakness, and stupidity, and nations do not grow great on these attributes.

OUR INVASIONS OF ENGLAND.

England now is overrun by what it knows as the third pernicious American invasion, that of the crossword puzzle. The first was jazz. The second the horn rim spectacle. There have been other invasions accepted as beneficial. One was the cocktail. It went in with jam, and although the English cannot get rid of either they are reconciled to the cocktail. The moving picture invasion was accepted. Chewing gum made a try, but was beaten off at Dover. Even Boadicea came to life again at that alarm and Canute, Harold, and William were side by side.

How the horn rim got in we do not know. Probably with the Rotarians in 1921. It was not regarded as dangerous, but later could not be shaken off. Against the crossword puzzle the island had no chance. It developed a virulence unknown even in the United States. The sea voyage did it good. Napoleon could not have been any worse.

Some of the English are reconciled. It's one American wave after another, and they will continue to hunt for a town in Tasmania and a moth ball eating bird of Hudson bay in six letters until we send them something else. That probably will be worse. Maybe it will, but we'll be a long time in paying them back for the English sparrow.

THE AMENDMENT MANIA.

Judge John C. Pollock of the federal District court in Wichita, Kas., instructing a grand jury in its duties, said that its function was to bring action against citizens for crime and also to stand against the increasing interference of the federal government in the private affairs of the citizens and the powers of the states.

He said it would have been better if the last four amendments to the constitution had not been adopted and if the government had been allowed to remain more nearly what it was when it came from the founders.

The four amendments were the sixteenth, which permits the income tax; the seventeenth, for the direct election of senators; the eighteenth, for the prohibition of alcoholic beverages, and the nineteenth, extending suffrage to women.

We regard the income tax amendment as a means of revenue at least made necessary by the war which followed its adoption. The right to raise revenue is a requisite of government. It would have been a problem to fight the war and carry its subsequent burdens without the income tax.

The amendment for the direct election of senators now seems to us a mistake. The election by legislators was thought at the time to promote autocracy in the senate. That was thought not to be responsive to popular will. The senate was intended to be less responsive than the house of representatives, a greater check on transient opinion. We are certain the character of the senate has not been improved by the popular election. Greater men came from the old system than from the new. The old had its abuses. So has the new.

Of the eighteenth amendment we need not say much. Our opinion is firm. It is the furthest remove from the old principles of the American republic, an overturning of state authority and an extreme of draconism. The states could have had prohibition if they wanted it.

We would not disfranchise the women granted suffrage under the nineteenth amendment. They had a way of getting suffrage through the states. Women had partial suffrage in Illinois and were voting for presidential electors. They could vote for congressmen in any state in which they could vote for members of the house of representatives of the state legislature. They could vote for state and city officers in any state which granted them suffrage. The nation had forbidden disqualification for religion or color. It was represented that the constitution which had the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments ought to have the nineteenth. Probably so. Anyway, there is no protest now.

The warning is to call a halt. Amendment to the constitution has been proceeding as if it were change in statute law which could be made from year to year. We have had enough amendments to the constitution except for the amendment needed to prevent the interregnum in government from election to inauguration and to give a new congress life soon after an election instead of possibly a year after it.

Otherwise the states should work out the development of American life as they did before the amendment mania got possession of the people.

A CORRIDOR OF WAR.

The Danzig corridor is causing another flareup in Europe. It gives Poland access to the sea through the free port of Danzig and it divides the people of East Prussia from the rest of Germany by a broad strip of territory under alien control.

It is virtually as if the Hudson ran to Montreal and the United States had been forced, as the result of defeat in war, to accept an alienation of its territory providing the English, French, or whoever might have Canada a waterway to the free port of New York, splitting New England off from the rest of the country. The cradle of the nation in the north would be cut off from the rest of the land, a great port taken away, and an alien strip driven through the heart of the east.

That is what the treaty makers did to the eastern part of Prussia. It is such a thing as makes wars, but it is not a thing which endures unless the defeated nation has forever lost its strength. The victors decided that Poland must have a port and that there must be an open route by which Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, and Roumania could be supported, reinforced, and supplied in case Russia attacked. That would have to be either across German territory, which the Germans resist, or by the sea to Danzig.

Germany naturally wants to reunite to it the separated part of East Prussia, the New England of the country. The Poles are prepared to use force to keep the corridor and even to seize the free town of Danzig.

We used to say "The Mississippi shall flow unvexed to the sea." The mouth of it could not be French or Spanish. Its banks could not have French or Spanish posts or garrisons. A vexed river will cause wars. If a vexed river had New England cut off from the rest of us there would be a war here, sooner or later, to drive the invader out.

THE NEW ARISTOCRACY.

Aristocracy, says Count Keyserling, is resurgent. It has ridden in over the wreckage of ten years past. It has returned persistently from a long way off, but its face is new and its costume is changed. Fascist Italy, bolshevik Russia are extreme aristocratic systems, says Count Keyserling. Germany turns that way; England and Spain France and Hungary show signs of the resurgence. And in America the eugenic impulse, the immigration law, the intelligence tests make new accent on the quality idea.

With war and weakened majorities, with old dogmas under question and with new ones biting deep into our popular recipe, it is not hard, says the philosophic count, for firm and coherent minorities to win to power. Just that is taking place, and the age old drive towards inequality and power over fellow men surges for the moment over the equally ancient reaching for equality and freedom. The conflict is characteristic of humanity and of all life. In all society there is and always has been an aristocratic principle of some sort. And there has always been more or less its counteraction.

One feature of the American income tax returns is the large number of "juniors" among the heavier taxpayers. There is Rockefeller Jr., with his seven million dollar tax. There is George F. Baker Jr., Edsel Ford, some Astors, and others paying big taxes on incomes built by their fathers. It is our march down the road towards Europe. It is our approach to a system in which the creation of great fortune is promoted by a generation or more from the administration, manipulation, and consumption of it. It is a critical test for America. The nation gave strong men an opportunity to work and to build up power. Can it keep the heirs to that power at work? Can it use them in the building of a nation as it used their fathers?

That is the test. For an aristocracy that does not work is doomed. Without a constructive function in society worth its cost and more, the pride of power and privilege is but a whiff of smoke and an acrid smell that the wind will blow away. There is nobility in the old German motto, "Ich Dien," written on aristocratic shields. It means "I serve." Without it no aristocracy can survive; the crash of old systems from the Urals to the Pyrenees proves it.

America is fortunate. It has not learned to loaf. Its "juniors" and its sons still are active to a large degree in the fields their fathers tilled. Its classes are flexible, and the drift up and down is relatively free. Its men are used to work and to being judged by their work. All classes in America are working classes. Individual exceptions there are, of course, fools and snobs and fops, but they do not predominate. America knows how to work. Productive power is the foundation of all power and fortune.

THE START OF A NEW CHICAGO.

The people of Chicago seem to have snapped out of their indifference to transportation. For years they have been so drugged by politics that their case seemed hopeless. The gas was turned on and the city did not have the strength to get up off the floor.

The Dever plan is being indorsed wherever an understanding of it and what it means to the city prevails. The best argument for it is the map. That shows every ward what it would get in increased car service.

An analysis of the ordinance shows that $153,455,000 in added traction facilities is to go into fourteen of the outlying wards now poorly served in transportation and retarded for that reason. These extensions mean added wealth to the region. The construction not only means a boom in all building trades but that means new wealth in the sections affected. That is virtually the whole city. Rapid transportation means a new prosperity in a new city. It means a rebuilding of the city. We think of Chicago as growing after the fire and with the World's Fair. The greatest growth is yet to come. It can date from the adoption of the Dever plan.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The meadow lark is about to sing, but what of that? Spring with a trillium in the lips and a wild rose in the hair, with sparkling feet along paths of flowers, with the wood thrush in the thicket singing to the sundown. For that we give up the short gray days and the long evenings when the world, a contentious, striving thing, with feather preying on feather and fur on fur, was shut out.

There was the door barred against the wind and the roof sound against the storm. The snow swept by the window. There was the sense of shelter and of comfort within walls. There was an intensive life wider than the fields which spring opens and summer uses. The cloister can have wider horizons than the plains. Winter incloses the senses but broadens life. The lark sings and the cloister walls go down and dryads dance over them.

Editorials of the Day

SEED CORN ENOUGH.

[Decatur Herald.]

Assurances given by the department of agriculture that there will be enough seed corn this spring despite fears to the contrary, recall the spring of 1918, when we raked and scraped to get a supply.

That season of 1917 was one of the most peculiar ever known in the corn belt. The plants, late in getting a start on account of rain, stood high and well laden with ears late in August. A bumper crop was expected. In September began to come those reports that the corn was not maturing. The reports continued in October up to frost time, when thousands of acres were caught by the cold. The corn didn't mature and its germinating power was destroyed.

We were in the war and fortunately were organized to cope with the situation the following spring. The council of defense took on the duty of supplying seed corn. Farmers hereabout forgot their favorite choice strains. The idea was to get anything that would grow.

By great good luck a farmer up in the Warrensburg "pollywog" had some corn of a hard flinty grain, the seed of which had come from Lake county. It was real ninety day corn, the kind grown in the north part of the state. The whole contents of the crib was bought and distributed. Meanwhile a careful watch was kept upon seed sent in from outside and handled by private dealers and speculators. Especial pains were taken to guard against southern Missouri corn, however excellent. A hard northern strain with a small cob was held to be essential.

Although the season of 1924 was a bad one, due to unusually heavy and prolonged rains in May, conditions are not as bad as they were seven years ago, thanks to delayed frosts last fall.

Strangely enough farmers are inclined to be lax on germination tests. One admitted only the other day that his second planting last spring was almost a total failure because he had taken somebody's word that he had germinating seed instead of making his own tests, on a purchased supply. The seed scarcity is not serious, but care will be needed if disappointments are to be avoided.

MAKING IT ATTRACTIVE.

"Tommy," said a young woman visitor at his home, "why not come to our Sunday school? Several of your little friends have joined us lately."

Tommy hesitated a moment. Then suddenly: "Does a red headed kid by the name of Jimmy Brown go to your school?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the new teacher.

"Well, then," replied Tommy with an air of interest, "I'll be there next Sunday, you bet. I've been looking for that kid for three weeks, and never knew where to find him."—Cassell's Saturday Night Journal, London.

ILLNESS IN INDUSTRY.

As this is being written, a driving rain has been falling all day and, in consequence, contacts are few. Besides, it is a holiday. Between the rain and the holiday nobody is around with any ails to complain of, the library is inaccessible, and the moisture makes visibility low.

Looking around, I find a copy of Manufacturers' News, and read the articles relating to health. The first tells the experience of metal trades' factory employing 2,000 men in December, 1924. A careful checkup of the illness of employes that month shows that if minor illnesses are taken in hand early sickness absenteeism is saved.

"Two hundred and five reported early in their sickness and lost no time; five men reported early in their sickness and lost a total of seventeen days; two men reported late in their sickness and lost 135 days; thirty-nine men did not report at all and lost 365.5 days; five men reported at the shop hospital with complaints in which no prophylactic treatment was possible and lost forty-nine days. Nineteen per cent of these sick did not use the facilities offered by the company and they lost 89 per cent of the time lost from sickness."

The conclusion reached was that it paid both the company and the men to have good health care for the men and to have it used promptly. This is worth while knowing in this season when simple colds are developing into pneumonias.

The second article told the value of good posture such as those of Gen. Pershing and Secretary Hughes.

Dr. W. G. Anderson of Yale is quoted as advising desk workers to straighten themselves against the edge of a door twice daily. Stand with the back against the edge of the door, grasp the door knobs with the hands. Try to touch the edge of the door with the head, neck, all levels of the back, legs, and feet. The object is to take the curves out of the backbone as much as possible for a few minutes daily. In sitting at the desk he advises that the body be bent at the hips and that the backbone should not be curled up.

The third related to ventilation of garages. A certain company recently posted a notice warning its men against carbon monoxide poisoning due to inhaling exhaust gas from automobiles. They quoted the following from the bureau of mines: "In the ordinary one car garage an engine running at idling speed will produce a gas of sufficient concentration to cause unconsciousness and death in three to five minutes.

"The fact that the engine continues to operate is no indication that the air is safe; the engine will continue to run six times as long as a dog will retain consciousness. There is no warning whatever to a person entering a garage and there is great danger to a person entering a closed garage for the purpose of shutting off a motor. Each man should make an ironclad rule never to start nor to run an automobile engine in a closed garage."

These warnings relate to dangers from acute carbon monoxide poisoning. It is worth while knowing that there is also chronic carbon monoxide poisoning.

LUMP PROBABLY IS TUMOR.

A. G. writes: 1. Is diabetes hereditary?

2. My father is a man almost 70 years old. All his life he has been doing work which required him to keep his right arm in motion constantly. For the past four or five years he has a very large, hard lump near his right shoulder. It is very evident that this has developed from using his arm so much. Do you think this is a cancer? If not, what can it be?

REPLY:

1. It is to a limited extent. Diabetes runs in families.

2. I do not think it is cancer. Cancer would not have remained there so long giving no little trouble.

Have a physician see him and decide what form of tumor this is.

NEW PLANKS LAID.

Chicago, March 6.—[Friend of the People.]—Some time ago the city laid a plank over the crossing from Lovejoy to North Parkside avenue. It was broken recently and taken away and now we have to wade through mud when we pass this corner. E. J. M.

The plank cross walk at the intersection of Lovejoy and North Park avenue has been replaced. These thoroughfares are unimproved.

PETITION FOR PAVING.

Chicago, March 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A private contractor is going around soliciting signatures of property owners in the block, on a petition for paving the alley. I refused to sign simply because the solicitor seemed too anxious, even offering to split his commission for getting my signature. If I do not sign, can they sue me for the work done in the alley back of my property? A. J. M.

You are not legally liable unless you expressly or impliedly undertook to pay. Your chance of convincing a court that you did not impliedly promise would be improved if you serve written notice when the work is begun that you are unwilling to pay.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONCEALED WEAPONS.

Madison, Wis., March 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Definitely, what is meant by carrying concealed weapons?

2. Can one be within the law by carrying a dismounted pistol, that is, one with the magazine, barrel, slide, and cartridges removed?

3. How about carrying it in a visible open or closed holster?

4. Also, carrying it in a box sealed for mailing? I. J. N.

1. Too general for answer.

2. If the weapon were so dismounted as not to be ready for substantially immediate use, we would not consider it a weapon within the meaning of the statute.

3. If the holster were visible we would not consider the weapon concealed.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 15, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Schofield reported from Kinston, N. C., that on the night of the 10th, near Southwest Creek, Gen. Bragg's rebel forces were decisively defeated and retreated across the Neuse river.

NEW YORK.—The Herald's correspondent at Kinston, N. C., gives details of some furious fighting on March 8, 9, and 10 between Gen. Bragg's rebel forces under Hoke and Gen. Schofield's Union troops. On the first day the Union troops suffered some reverses, but on the night of the 10th regained all lost ground. The battle raged throughout the night, the rebels making one desperate charge after another, but they were repulsed.

FORTRESS MONROE.—The base of supplies of Gen. Sherman's army, in view of his rapid movements northward, is to be established at Wilmington, N. C. All transports and other vessels laden with supplies have been ordered from both Charleston, S. C., and Savannah to report at New Inlet, N. C.

NEW YORK.—The Richmond papers are filled with doleful comments on the condition of affairs, which they represent as being desperate. Sheridan, they admit, has played the mischief with their avenues of supply and fears are expressed that he will destroy the last link between Richmond.

NEW YORK.—The Herald's Army of the Potomac correspondent gives an account of the presentation to Gen. Grant of the gold medal voted to him by congress. The presentation speech was made by E. B. Washburne of Illinois.

NEW YORK.—Gold touched 183¾, but on receipt of news of Sherman's progress fell to 178¾.

CHICAGO.—The Young Men's association's nominating committee selected George M. Kimbark for president for the ensuing year.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 15, 1900.

LONDON.—Bloemfontein, the capital of the Orange Free State, is in the hands of Lord Roberts and the British flag flies over the statehouse. Lord Roberts announced the capture and the flight of President Steyn.

TOPEKA, Kas.—The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, who has undertaken to edit the Topeka Capital as Christ would do it, announced that his policy with the newspaper is only a step in the direction of a gigantic project to build a new religious system for the Christian world. His plan is to unite all churches in a movement for "practical Christianity" along socialistic lines and he will tour the United States and Great Britain preaching his crusade.

CHICAGO.—Rice showered on Miss Mabel D. Freeman, daughter of Judge Henry V. Freeman, 5760 Woodlawn avenue, and her newly wedded husband Henry Coe Culbertson of Cincinnati as they left the Freeman home after the ceremony almost cost the lives of both. The rice frightened their team, which ran away and dashed through numerous streets. A policeman took the couple for fugitives and fired several shots at them. A squad of police stopped the team at 35th street and Lake avenue. Neither the bride nor bridegroom was injured.

LONDON.—Lady John Scott Spottiswoode, author of the song, "Annie Laurie" is dead at the age of 91.

ROME.—Nansen, the Norwegian explorer, has acceded to a request that he organize a polar expedition to go in search of the Duke of the Abruzzi, who sailed for the polar regions from Christiania on June 12, 1899.

CHICAGO.—The Rev. Edwin A. Schell, D. D., has brought suit for $35,000 against the Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst of Boston and the Rev. Joseph F. Berry, D. D., and the Rev. Dr. H. C. Jennings of Chicago. Dr. Schell charges a plot was formed by the trio by which he was driven from the general secretaryship of the Epworth league.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 15, 1915.

LONDON.—Desperate battles are being fought all along the west line and the victory is with the allies. The advances of the British are regarded the most important in months. It is reported that the German headquarters moved on March 12 from Lille across the Belgian border to Tournai.

LONDON.—A dispatch from British headquarters in France says that the prince of Wales is now attached to one of the armies and is kept busy from morning to night. The prince is perfectly happy, for he feels he is sharing in the actual life of the soldiers, the dispatch concludes.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Lincoln Beachey, whose sensational flights had won for him the title of foremost aviator in the world, dropped 2,000 feet, in sight of thousands, into the waters of San Francisco bay near the Panama-Pacific exposition grounds, and was killed. A new monoplane failed to stand the strain of glides, somersaults, and other tricks he was doing.

CHICAGO.—Russell Thompson, who worked for the Merriam crime commission as an investigator under the name of H. R. Saulter, was arrested on a charge of being a skyscraper burglar. He, with Russell Edwards, was found hiding in a closet in an office in the Transportation building which had been ransacked. Both men were armed.

PEORIA, Ill.—Jule Lellinger, secretary of the North Avenue league, put Chicago in the first place in the singles of the American bowling congress here with a score of 671. Chicago landed first in the doubles also, with Stanley Meyers and Wallie Peters pounding out 1,170.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Russell Tyson, 20 East Goethe street, will open her home tomorrow for Count Spagiari's Italian lecture.

THE DESCENT OF MAN

[Punch (Copyright).]

Picturesque Person (in answer to question of keen student of humanity)—"No, sir, I was not always a sandwich-man" (delight of K. S. of H., who scents a story of real human interest); "for years I 'anded out circulars." (Collapse of K. S. of H.)

STERILIZATION OF DEFECTIVES.

Oak Park, Ill., March 7.—The ideas expressed in today's editorial on "Rotten Apples" (i. e., sterilization of defectives) are directly controverted by the following facts:

There is no proof whatever that mental and moral characteristics are inherited. At least 98 per cent of so-called defectives are born of normal parents.

The unchallenged findings of Weismann show that sex cells are thoroughly segregated from body cells at the beginning and therefore cannot transmit acquired characteristics.

A careful analysis of results in communities where the practice of sterilization has been followed will show that the percentage of new defectives has not been reduced one iota.

The editor ignores the major causes of insanity, which are principally: (a) Syphilis, where the disease has been suppressed but not cured by the use of mercury, salvarsan, or other dangerous drugs; (b) the use of alcohol and other stimulants, narcotics, or of drugs and serums; (c) the effects of operations, especially on women; (d) uncontrolled mental and emotional processes.

In this connection and as a result of years of observation, study, and experience, I respectfully and sincerely suggest that those who really wish to help or prevent defectives carefully investigate the latest information on the laws of heredity and also modern systems of healing, checking the accuracy and value of both the old and new ideas by the acid test of logical reasoning and practical application to the facts of daily life.

WHAT THE BOLO CLUB THINKS ABOUT CONSCRIPTION OF WEALTH

Chicago, March 2.—Your recent editorials on conscription of wealth in war times strikes a responsive chord in this organization. We have been committed to that policy since 1920.

Before this nation can ever dream to conscript wealth in the same manner as they conscript men's bodies and souls there is a lot of preparatory work to be done. This thing is too big and too vital to civilization to be entered into haphazardly. Unless we approach the subject in the right manner we are not going to have conscription, but confiscation. Not a nation in a state of defense but a commune torn people—a prey to any invader. D. R. Mussens,
President Bolo Club of Cook County.

SOME WOMEN WANT TWELVE HOURS.

Ottumwa, Ia., March 6.—Laws in regard to hours and conditions of labor which restrict women more than men in the same line of work may be a serious disadvantage to women.

Women do not often choose work beyond their physical strength. If ten hours is too long for a woman to work, it is too long for a man. Occasional overtime will hurt neither.

At one time the legislature in my state tried to pass a bill limiting women to eight hours in my line of work. Twelve hour shifts were the rule at that time.

My twelve hours were easy and good paying. I had time to rest, read, and study. Had this bill passed I would have lost my easy position and been obliged to work much harder at less pay.

Let all conditions apply equally to both sexes.
ELLA PERET.

THIS IS NOT AN AGE OF IGNORANCE.

Chicago, March 2.—Theaters, movies, and newspapers are being severely criticised by many who believe in the old adage, "Ignorance is bliss," for the reason it is strongly believed that anything not strictly or rigidly censored has an immoral influence upon the general public.

It surely is too bad that the great majority is comprised of weakminded characters of inferior mentality, who are so easily influenced and debased by hearing, reading, or viewing something not exactly clean, sweet, and pure, either in the way of newspaper scandals, bare limbed chorus shows, movies involving divorce triangles, cabaret scenes, murders, etc. (Also I note a great many people object to bathing girl photographs.)

We are no longer living in an age of ignorance. We must be aware of the dangerous evils and pitfalls seething around us. A normal, healthy minded person is benefited by the "stop, look, and listen" method of acquainting them with the aforementioned evils, heeding same as a timely warning, and by so doing escapes probable personal contact or experience, etc. M. SWEENEY.

EUGENICS FROM THE PYRAMIDS.

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 2.—Standing between the Sphinx and the pyramids, one ponders about the low power Egyptians of today compared with the brainy men of, say, the eighteenth dynasty, or even those who built these pyramids. In those days the Nile valley contained many intellectuals. These ancients, if here today, could compete successfully in art, in mechanical engineering, in military or political strategy with America's best.

Why have these high-powered not left similar high-powered descendants?

Studying the problem here on the ground, one becomes convinced the remedy lies in a nation-wide grasp of race eugenics. These brainy ancients, for example, crossed their blood too often with low-powered immigrant women, female slaves gained by conquest or purchase. Thus commenced race deterioration.
C. M. GALTON,
President, Immigration Study Commission of America.

STOKES ON WAY TO FLORIDA; WIFE JOURNEYS WEST

Principals at Trial Off for Rests.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

W. E. D. Stokes, the New York millionaire, whom twelve Cook county jurors Friday afternoon voted not guilty of conspiring with others to defame the name of his wife, is on his way to Miami, Fla., to enjoy the fruits of the Chicago victory and to recuperate from the effects of the Chicago weather.

Helen Ellwood Stokes, his wife, is on her way to Denver, to return to her children at her mother's home, and to reflect on the Chicago decision, which she characterizes as a "shocking surprise and disappointment."

Judge at Home with Child.

Robert Lee, the capitalist's colored co-defendant, who was also given a not guilty verdict, is out on the south side of the city, exercising his favorite dog, just the way he testified he did every time anybody near him began to make an affidavit in the Stokes case.

Judge William N. Gemmill, who presided at the five long weeks of the trial, is at his apartment in the Hyde Park hotel, nursing a cold from which he has been suffering for the last two weeks.

Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, who won victory for his client by calling him a "silly old fool, not a criminal conspirator," is on his way to Orlando, Fla., to visit his wife and baby, who have been spending the winter there.

State Turns to Other Cases.

Assistant State's Attorneys W. W. Smith and Milton D. Smith, who were in charge of the prosecution, are busy on some new case.

And the twelve jurors, eleven of whom voted not guilty on the first ballot. Well, even shoveling snow and putting coal in the furnace looks good to them today after having been locked up for five weeks.

HOLD FUNERAL TOMORROW FOR MRS. SEYMOUR

Funeral services will be held in Graceland cemetery chapel tomorrow afternoon for Mrs. Kathryn Seymour, 54 years old, who died on Wednesday in Atascadero, Cal., where she had been passing the winter. She was the widow of Claude Seymour, until his death president of Otto Young & Co., wholesale jewelers.

Mrs. Seymour was a member of one of Chicago's pioneer families. Her grandfather, Jacob Harris, came here in 1833 and was a prominent builder. Mrs. Seymour was a daughter of John H. Ross, who helped to establish the firm that afterward became Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. T. Thomas Morris, Evanston, and Mrs. Earl Wharton of Houston, Tex.; two sisters, Mrs. John Dickinson, San Francisco, and Mrs. Herbert A. Goddard, New York, and four brothers, Judge K. George H., Walter F., and William M. Ross, all of Chicago.

New York, March 14.—The body of Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, who died yesterday of injuries received in an automobile accident Thursday, started tonight for St. Louis in a private car, accompanied by her brothers-in-law, Ralph and Herbert Pulitzer.

Her husband, Joseph Pulitzer, left Jacksonville, Fla., tonight for St. Louis. He is the second son of the late editor for whom he was named, and is the editor and publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and secretary of the Press Publishing company, which publishes the New York World.

The train bearing Mrs. Pulitzer's body will arrive in St. Louis tomorrow evening. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the Pulitzer home, St. Louis.

554,978 AIDED BY NEAR EAST RELIEF IN 1924

Washington, D. C., March 14.—The near east relief gave aid to 554,978 persons, mostly women and children, in the last year, Charles V. Vickrey, general secretary, said today in a report to congress.

Total disbursements were $3,968,829, leaving a balance for the year of $298,995, which was applied to the deficit resulting from operations after the Smyrna disaster.

Expenditures by the organization since its beginning, the report shows, have been $90,337,820, of which $24,000,000 was spent in Armenia, $20,000,000 in Turkey $11,000,000 in Syria and Palestine, $7,500,000 in Mesopotamia and Persia, and $3,000,000 in Greece.

More than 1,000,000 Americans contributed $4,265,322 to the relief during the last year, the report shows.

OLD INDIAN ALTAR FOUND IN BURIED CITY OF YUCATAN

Washington, D. C., March 14.—A brilliantly painted altar, supported by more than a score of handsomely sculptured human figures, on which priests of the ancient Mayas once performed their mysterious rites, has been unearthed in Yucatan by the staff conducting excavations in Chichen Itza for the Carnegie institute of Washington.

The altar, which had lain buried for untold centuries in a pyramid temple in the heart of the destroyed city, the institution has been informed, represents the most important discovery made by the archaeologists since they resumed their excavations about the 1st of February.

ECONOMY STRIPS DEFENSE ARMOR OFF UNCLE SAM

Guns and Planes Obsolete, Experts Declare.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.] — Observers of the joint army anti-aircraft air service demonstration at Fortress Monroe, Va., last week, saw more than the failure of the ground defenses in the tests. In their opinion the failure was due not entirely to the lack of skill on the part of the gunners behind the three inch anti-aircraft rifles, but to a rigid application of the economy policy.

In other words, experts said that the admitted poor showing of the ground defenses was due at least in part to economy. The remarkable demonstration of the air officers, viewed in the same sense, was all the more remarkable because they put on an up to date demonstration with machines just as far behind the times as were the guns which fired at their targets.

Only Two Guns Used.

In the first place, it is pointed out, the reduced personnel of the anti-aircraft forces at Fortress Monroe, decreed by congress for economy, permitted only two guns to be used in the fire tests against the targets.

It seemed that at least the usual four gun battery would be used for an occasion of the importance of that test. But, although the exhibition had been ordered by the secretary of war only two guns could be put into action. There were not gunners enough to man more.

Failure to hit the targets in comparatively easy ranges was traceable to many other factors, all bearing a close relationship to economy. The guns themselves were 1918 models. They fired ammunition seven years old. The fuses were erratic. Some of the shells proved to be duds.

Only One New Gun.

The 1918 models were used because modern patterns were not available. Congress had provided for a post-war model. It has been developed as a pilot. It was shown to the visitors and they were told what it would do against hostile aircraft. But there was just one. Economy policies had prevented the making of them.

Officers of the anti-aircraft defenses of Fortress Monroe did the best they could with the equipment they had. They attempted to stage a modern demonstration with near antiquated equipment and with one-half the required number of men. That they failed was no surprise. The surprise lay in the condition of unpreparedness, which was all too obvious to the spectators.

Tests Uphold Mitchell.

Statements made by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, that anti-aircraft fire could not be depended on to protect a city from enemy air raids, were supported 100 per cent by the tests.

Of course, it is admitted that better results will be had when the post-war weapons are made available and new powder and shells are provided.

Just how this development will compare with the progress of air power, however, still is as uncertain as it was before the tests were held.

"HIP, HIP!" BLITHELY CRIES GRACEFUL MARY, OFF TO MONTE CARLO

MARY GARDEN.

New York, March 14.—Mary Garden, grand opera diva, sailed on the Aquitania today for her villa at Monte Carlo, to remain until next season, when she again will dil operatic engagements in Chicago. Miss Garden disposed of rumors that she might manage the Monte Carlo Opera company by saying her American contracts had two more years to run.

The famous soprano answered compliments of retention of her graceful figure by improvising a yell, college fashion:

"Hip-hip-hooray!"

"If women did more 'hip-hip-hooraying' there would be more happiness."

SUES MATE WHO REFUSED TO WED HER SECOND TIME

Once Marguerite L. Sofield decided her husband, Armand J. Sofield, president of the American Sash and Door company, 923 South Western avenue, was a poor mate, so she divorced him.

But they became reconciled, she fell in love with him all over again, and, now that he refuses to carry out his alleged promise to remarry her, she has concluded that he is worth a great deal.

This is all according to Attorney John R. Nicholson, counsel for Mrs. Sofield, who yesterday filed the praecipe in a $50,000 damage suit against Sofield. The charge, Mr. Nicholson said, is breach of promise to marry.

MUSSOLINI'S AID BACKS STRIKERS IN NORTH ITALY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, March 14.—Several independent manufacturers surrendered to the striking metal workers in north Italy today, but the Manufacturers' association refuses to treat with the 100,000 strikers engaged in the first big strike under Premier Mussolini's government. The Fascisti workers who used their famous club against the communist strikers two years ago, using their clubs to prevent any strikebreakers from entering picketed plants. They have induced the Socialist and communists workers to join them.

Deputy Farjinacci, secretary general of the Fascist party and Premier Mussolini's spokesman, issued a statement today saying the strikers are right and have the entire support of the Fascisti.

The veteran premier said the ousters will be ordered under the law for the protection of the kingdom.

ALLIES FAIL TO KEEP DISARMING PLEDGE—GESSLER

HAMBURG, March 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Otto Gessler, the war minister of the reich, speaking before the Overseas club today, declared that the Versailles treaty allowed a German army of 100,000 men as a frontier protection, with a simultaneous promise that Germany's disarmament was to represent the initial stage of universal disarmament.

"This promise has not only not been fulfilled," the minister said, "but today there are half a million more men in arms in Europe than before the war. It is said abroad that Germany has disarmed technically, but not morally. This reproach is justified in part, inasmuch as the promise of universal disarmament has not been kept."

Dr. Gessler expressed the conviction that the moral disarmament of Germany will progress rapidly if Germany is treated morally.

YANKS IN CHILE WANT MORE U. S. BANK FACILITIES

Have Difficulty Now in Getting Credits.

BY JOSEPH PIERSON
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 11.—[By mail.]—Along the west coast of South America generally a visitor finds American interests fairly well satisfied with the trade situation. In Chile, however, the American firms are critical of the absence of adequate American banking facilities. The only American bank in Chile is said to be absorbed in the great wave of exchange speculation in which Chileans are engaged, and American commercial business is done to a large extent through German and British banks.

One large American contractor for the Chilean government with first class standing in the United States and Chile was called on by the authorities to put up the usual guarantee in cash for the performance of his task. He says the American bank reluctantly quoted him a rate of one-half of 1 per cent for the money. The German and British banks quoted a rate of one-quarter of 1 per cent.

Customary Credits Refused.

Commercial firms are unable to get from American banking sources, they report, the usual credits on shipments and commissions in transit or in warehouse regarded in the United States as first class banking material. The result is said to be that the bulk of the American banking business in Chile is done by British and German institutions. Americans are said by one Chilean banker to provide for Chilean banks their largest patronage from among the foreign population of Chile. British and German merchants almost invariably patronize banks of their own nationality, owing to the assistance these banks give them at the source of their supplies.

There is considerable business advantage in being able to bank through an institution with close connections in the country from which you receive your goods. Consequently the importation of American manufactures into Chile, notwithstanding their present dominance, is continually handicapped by the activity of banks of other nationalities.

Fruit Trade Feasible.

One large American importing house relates that it would like to help the Chileans develop their fresh fruit trade with the United States. Since this fruit arrives in New York during the American winter it would, from the standpoint of the consumer at least, nicely complement the table with a supply of fresh fruit during a time of the year when a local American supply is not available. It would help the American manufacturer by linking Chilean trade at another point with the United States. It also would help American prestige generally in Chile. The fruit companies of the Caribbean sea with their large capitals and surpluses illustrate what the fruit consumption of the United States could mean to Chile and to American shipping by giving it a cargo of first class freight home bound.

An appreciable number of the large American importing firms extend an invitation to a Chicago bank or group of banks to establish a branch in Chile. More than half the imports into Chile come from the Chicago district or further west.

EX-LEGION CHIEF WED BOYHOOD SWEETHEART ON FEBRUARY 20 LAST

Mason City, Ia., March 14.—[Special.]—Hanford MacNider, former National American Legion commander, this afternoon admitted that he had been secretly wedded on Feb. 20 last to Miss Margaret McAuley of Mason City, his boyhood sweetheart. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. F. Hinton in the Episcopal church.

"LADY ASTOR" OF GERMANY QUITS PEOPLE'S PARTY

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, March 14.—Kathrina von O'Heim, the "Lady Astor" of German politics, today severed her connections with the people's party. She is one of the leaders of the industrial group, a modern business woman, owner of a factory, and the first woman editor and publisher of Berlin's only picture paper, A. B. C., modeled after the New York Daily News. She declared that she believes Gustav Stresemann's knifing of Otto Gessler's candidacy was a great blow to the Republican movement, preventing and delaying the building up of a right republican coalition. She will no longer associate with a party of which Herr Stresemann is spokesman.

Strong for Republicanism.

Miss von O'Heim, one of Herr Gessler's closest friends and warmest supporters, saw in his candidacy a chance to bring Germany from the political slough to solid ground, with a strong party capable of defeating the monarchists and socialists. Her resignation may preclude the secession of others, who will attempt a right republican group independent of the people's party.

Herr Stresemann's attitude also has driven the Bavarian people's party—southern Catholics—from the coalition presented by Karl Jarres' candidacy, leaving only the nationalists and people's party behind Herr Stresemann.

Bavarians to Offer Held.

The Bavarians will present their own candidate, Dr. Heinrich Held, premier of Bavaria, the Munich committee declaring they have no hope to elect him, but they will be able to swing into the coalition in the second election when they hope to see a united right.

Herr Stresemann was attacked by the extreme nationalist "Pan-Germany Union" today for his suggestions of a security pact with France and England.

Marguerite Namara to Seek Separation, Not Divorce

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

The singer wishes to avoid a divorce, if possible, on account of her two children. Miss Namara is now at the Riviera filling engagements at the Monte Carlo, Nice and Cannes operas.

PANAMA EXPELS U. S. DISCOVERER OF 'WHITE INDIAN'

PANAMA, March 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—A presidential decree issued today declares Richard O. March, an American explorer, who discovered the "white Indians," expelled from Panama and prohibits his return. The decree states that the findings in the case do not justify a request for extradition, and that there is proof Mr. Marsh abused Panama's hospitality and the permit granted him to conduct scientific researches, by aiding the San Blas Indians in an attempt to establish their own republic.

REFUSE WARRANT ASKED AGAINST JUDGE WALKER

Ald. Adamkiewicz Seeks Arrest in Vain.

Ald. Stanley Adamkiewicz, who became aroused when he was ejected from the East Chicago avenue courtroom of Municipal Judge Henry M. Walker last week and introduced a resolution into the city council asking a test of Judge Walker's sanity, was yesterday refused a warrant for Judge Walker's arrest by Judge Immenhausen, also of the Municipal court.

The alderman, together with Titus Haffa and Ald. Arthur Albert, who are backing him in the case, were referred to Chief Justice Harry Olson by Judge Immenhausen. Judge Olson also refused the warrant, stating that if any criminal action was started against Judge Walker he preferred it to be in either the Circuit or Superior court.

Censure Would Be Punishment.

"If any criminal action is instituted upon," said Judge Olson, "I should prefer that prosecution be made through the Circuit or Superior court rather than have a judge of the Municipal court try one of his colleagues.

"However, I am of the opinion that more could be accomplished in this particular matter by bringing it to the attention of the Municipal court judges. A censure from them, if one would be forthcoming, would be very severe punishment."

Impossible to Advance Meeting.

Ald. Adamkiewicz said he did not wish to wait until the next meeting of the Municipal court judges on March 27, but Chief Justice Olson said it would be impossible to advance the date of that session and that he would consider the matter for several more days before taking further action.

The courtroom row came when Ald. Adamkiewicz asked the bailiff to give preference in calling a case in which he was interested. Judge Walker yelled that "Alderman and bums are all the same in my court" and had him removed to the rear of the room.

MRS. J. V. CONVERSE SUES FOR DIVORCE; SAYS HE'S TOO GAY

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—[Special.]—Thelma Morgan Converse, twin sister of Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt and daughter of Harry Hay Morgan, former American consul-general to Belgium, today filed suit for divorce against James V. Converse. William H. Sheldon is her attorney. The papers are filled with allusions to gay life in Palm Beach and New York. High lights are:

MRS. THELMA MORGAN CONVERSE [P. and A. Photo.]

Married at Rockville, Md., Feb. 16, 1922.

Disillusioned at Palm Beach two weeks later, when "Mr. Converse began to absent himself on his honeymoon, returning at all hours of the night with taunts of his escapades."

March, 1922, she was informed that "she was stupid and a fool, and no woman could affect his mode of life."

In May, 1922, a formal dinner party in their home, Mrs. Converse alleges, was marred by curses, addressed to her before their guests. She was rescued by guests in her room when molested by a heavy bottle in Converse's hand.

In Sept., 1922, the petition recites, the couple went to a New Jersey country club and she had retired to her room in negligee, when Mr. Converse brought his men friends, accusing her of insulting intimacies.

Mrs. Converse came to Hollywood early last year, and has played minor parts in a number of motion pictures.

U. S. and Mexico Agree on Treaty to Curb Narcotics

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Mexico, March 14.—The narcotics treaty between Mexico and the United States is acceptable to both countries. It awaits only reference to Washington of an additional clause, asked by Mexico, in order to provide for a more effective handling of contraband, before being signed, Ambassador James R. Sheffield said today.

CITIZENSHIP FREE FROM TRAMMELS, CARLSTROM PLEA

Attorney General Speaks at Banquet Here.

A citizenship beyond selfish purposes, associations and blocs, beyond politics and faiths that divide, rededicated to the fundamental meaning of the American national adventure, was the plea made by Attorney General Carlstrom in an address yesterday afternoon to the German club at the Morrison hotel.

For many it was a first glimpse of the new attorney general. It was the little things in his address and manner, perhaps, that carried the greatest significance and reassurance, the way he snapped out the word "character," his loving reference to the American flag that gleamed in electric lights over the banquet table, his appreciation of the colonial heritage and his creed of the divinely appointed way for America.

Tells of His Army Career.

Capt. A. F. W. Siebel, president of the club, told of the services of Mr. Carlstrom in the army of the Philippines during the Spanish-American war, his election as state's attorney of Mercer county, his service in the war as captain of artillery in the 33d division, and predicted that some day Illinois would put him at the helm of state as governor.

"The privilege of American citizenship," said the attorney general, "exceeds that of any great nation of the earth. God Almighty had something to do with the fact that this land remained undiscovered through the centuries until people came who were ready to inherit it. What a story of courage and purpose that of those inspired original settlers on the rock-bound coast of the Atlantic!

America Leads the Way.

"They established through eight long years on the battlefield that the citizens of America were ever to remain untrammeled, in a liberty never to be curtailed except as the individual must submit to the good of society. In this development of God's plan for the ages America has become the center of a moral force that will impress itself upon the whole world, that shall open the gates of a new day to civilization.

"When this chapter of American history is closed forever what will be written as to America's chief contribution? Greece gave beauty, Rome the code of law, England the common law. In all the activities of America there has been the governing spirit of international humanitarianism. Those who formed the constitution were unselfish and had the vision not to limit its blessings to ourselves, but to include posterity.

Calamity If We Sidestep.

"There never was a time in the history of America when the exercise of the rights and privileges of citizenship were demanded so completely. Unless we hold to these things, these fundamentals upon which liberty and character depend, calamity may come. Those who have contributed to America by immigration, the Germans, Teutons, and Scandinavians, believe in the sacredness of the law. They are an anchor and safeguard and have helped to carry America to this day. Sober, industrious, clean, believing in God and country, supporting the constitution, we can well be proud of their contribution to American life.

"As an aftermath of the war it seemed as though the world was torn asunder, mental processes shattered, and there came years of disintegration in individual and group selfishness. In congress and in legislatures groups and blocs were seeking advantages without regard to the whole.

Must Protect Citizens' Rights.

"Citizenship can only live when a unified nation stands back of the rights of the individual citizen. There has been disregard of the law, an era of crime. I believe that whenever we unite as a common body politic, without selfish purpose, behind law and government, then will the law be vindicated, justice upheld, crime forced down or dissipated.

"O, if we could have an awakening, if we could build a united sentiment behind our officers who have courage and purpose, if every citizen regardless of associations, faith, politics, would unite to life the government to a better plane, giving confidence to the people that at all times their rights would be protected.

"Whether we live outstate or in the city, good men and women are actuated by the same sentiments, the same desire to be kindly and good. I found it out when I came to this great city, a stranger from outstate.

Child Life Is Our Treasure.

"We are proud of our material achievements, our great buildings, banks, transportation, but back of all these lies the rich treasure of the nation, the child life. If we forget to build into the child life, heart and soul, faith in American institutions, confidence in law, integrity, and character, these material things will come to dust."

He closed by repeating Henry Ward Beecher's peroration to the flag April 14, 1865, at Fort Sumter.

EXPRESS DETECTIVES TAKE SUSPECTS.

Edward Cohen and Adolph Ansonia, suspects, stopped their flight from American Railway Express company detectives at Roosevelt road and Canal street when a load of buckshot was poured after their racing car.

BOND HOUSES MAKE UP LOSS CAUSED BY WHITE

The disappearance of Benjamin H. White, 1138 Farwell street, La Salle street broker, will not hurt the finances of the Modern Woodmen of America, it was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the Woodmen in Rock Island, Ill.

The bond houses which sold the Woodmen the $150,000 worth of Christian county bonds, after buying them from White, voluntarily declared they would stand the losses. White is alleged to have forged the bonds.

Of the total sum involved $100,000 of the loss, representing South Fork township bonds, will fall upon Sterns Bros. & Co. of Kansas City, Mo., while the remainder, of which $20,000 was in Stonington bonds and $20,000 in Assumption bonds, will be borne by Fred Emert & Co. of St. Louis.

SEEK $1,000,000 FOR PASSAVANT HOSPITAL FUND

Passavant Memorial hospital, serving the poor of the near north side at 149 West Superior street, since it was established in 1865, will be rebuilt soon at a cost of $1,000,000, it has been decided by an executive committee which plans a campaign for building funds.

The number of beds in the new hospital, which probably will be built on the same site, will be increased from 75 to 200, according to the plans drawn up at a meeting of the committee.

The first Passavant hospital was established in 1865. It was destroyed by the fire in 1871 and restored in 1865.

We Guarantee to Stop Falling Hair In 3 Weeks!

Van Ess Scalp Massage is preventing baldness and growing new hair; used by 800,000 men and 600,000 women

Nampa, Idaho, November 24, 1924

When I began use of Van Ess my scalp was practically bare. Used switches ten years to conceal baldness.

Applied Van Ess daily last thirteen months. My hair has uniformly increased in thickness and now ten inches long. Discarded all false hair last July. When dressed, my natural hair appears abundant as when I wore switches.

The toothbrush removes foreign matter from the teeth and gums and prevents premature decay. Comparable with the toothbrush, Van Ess used as directed, excites the scalp to normal action, restores hair lost through disease and promotes vigorous growth of the hair.

New Results You Can See and Feel —Performance You Know Will Last

Just imagine Paige-Jewett performance—already famous—now improved even further! The new results our engineers have achieved in the New Paige and New Jewett are almost unbelievable. They cover the entire range of car action—hill-climbing ability, getaway, slow pulling in high, riding comfort, handling ease.

And better than that—these remarkable new abilities are lasting. The fine performance of these new cars stays fine! A long life of trouble-free service has been built into the New Paige and New Jewett.

Our engineers have achieved what we can justly call—

PERMANENT . . . PERFECTED . . . PERFORMANCE

Jewett and Paige Silent Chain Drive

Both Jewett and Paige motors are built with silent chain drive for pump and timing shafts. Note the automatic takeup sprocket. By a spring and cam arrangement this sprocket keeps a constant tension on the chain, completely offsetting the effects of wear (stretch), preventing backlash, retaining timing accuracy. Silence is permanent.

New Power Results

First—our engineers increased power in the New Paige and New Jewett motors. Increased it without enlarging the motors or speeding them up. The result in silent, smooth power is amazing. In a fast getaway or in pickup—their action is silken smooth.

We accomplished this by many improvements. Lubrication was increased—improved. Cooling system enlarged. Refinements to valve gear and bearings. Costly balanced crankshafts were introduced in these new motors. A silent chain, with an automatic take-up, drives cam, pump and timing shafts.

Thrilling New Action

Such increased power gives the New Paige and New Jewett performance ability that sets new records. On hills or straightaway—they're out in front. They get away first in traffic and stay away if you wish. Accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. On a bad stretch where the pull is hard, they take you smoothly through at a crawl in high. And so flexible is this power that you can drive from 2 miles an hour to top speed without shifting from high!

Next—Paige-Jewett engineers worked on handling ease. The result is finger-touch guidance in the New Paige and New Jewett with ball-bearing steering spindles and special gearing for balloon tires.

It's practically impossible to jerk or stall the cars, thanks to the Paige-Jewett clutch of saw-blade steel. And gears shift so quietly and easily with the improved transmission that you can shift from high to second at 30 miles an hour—with barely a sound.

And hydraulic four-wheel brakes (Lockheed type) are now optional on all models at slight extra cost.

New Riding Comfort

Then comfort was considered. The result is riding ease that you would expect only in cars costing thousands more. For spring suspension was completely redesigned to get the fullest comfort from balloon tires.

Another thing—we secured all the advantages in roadability and appearance of a low hung car. Yet we retained the 9½-inch clearance so essential in driving over bad roads. We did this by changes in frames, axles, and bodies.

Long Life

And lastly, Paige-Jewett engineers worked to make these remarkable new qualities lasting—permanent! Old features—proved right in our years of use—have been retained. Where possible, they have been improved. New features—proved in exhaustive testing—have been added for still finer performance and service. No untried theories have been employed to cry "new."

And the New Paige and New Jewett are sixes. Sixes—because our years of experience indicate a six as we build it to be closer to perfection in efficiency, economy and fine performance, than any other type built today.

Try Them Out

We call this new quality—Permanent Perfected Performance. Both the New Paige and New Jewett offer it to you at the lowest price in our history for such quality. We'll gladly arrange a demonstration at your convenience.

GERMANY URGED BY COUNCIL BODY TO JOIN LEAGUE

Reich Not Expected to Furnish Many Troops.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, March 14.—The thirty-third council of the league of nations ended this evening with a reply to Herr Stresemann's memorandum concerning military measures Germany might be forced to take against a covenant breaker, and expressed the hope that Germany would apply for membership at the September assembly.

The council's message to Berlin ignored Wilhelmstrasse's refusal to permit any foreign troops to be transported across German territory by a member to aid some state attacked by an aggressor, but explained away the objections as to Germany's impossibility to participate in military sanctions because it was disarmed by the Versailles treaty.

Troops According to Capacity.

The league's letter pointed out that members are only expected to help militarily according to their capacity, and if Germany's armaments were reduced to a minimum, it would not be expected to provide any appreciable armed forces. The letter reminds Wilhelmstrasse that members are expected to advise the secretariat what forces they are ready to furnish the league in case of emergency.

The council, however, warned Germany that it was expected to take part fully in all economic measures the league may institute against an aggressive state wantonly attacking a member, insisting that this was one of the fundamental points of the covenant and nobody could possibly be exempted. Germany has expressed fear that it might be attacked if it attempted an economic blockade.

Urges Germany to Join League.

The note ended with a fervent wish that Germany would apply for membership immediately for action by the next assembly.

The council referred Turkey's expulsion of the Greek patriarch from Constantinople to the international court of justice to decide whether the council is empowered to discuss the dispute between Greece and Turkey, and postponed the examination and institution of a league commission to superintend Germany's disarmament until the June council meeting, when it is expected the Cologne question will be settled.

M. Briand will leave for Paris tomorrow noon, and Mr. Chamberlain Sunday night, remaining in Paris to confer with Premier Herriot until Tuesday morning, when he will leave for London.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland did not attend the closing session of the council of the league of nations because a question relating to Germany was discussed, and she considered it politic as a neutral to abstain for the present when subjects prejudicial to Germany might come up. The council offered to postpone discussion of German problems until the special session on Sunday morning, in order to permit the Dutch queen to witness a league session, but she refused to disturb the agenda.

School "War" Begins

Alsace and Lorraine, where a three days' strike of Catholic school children, ordered by Bishop Ruch, begins tomorrow as protest against the demand of Premier Herriot of France for interconfessional schools.

FALL TO APPEAR AT TEAPOT DOME TRIAL ON MONDAY

Denver, Colo., March 14.—Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, who has been subpoenaed as a witness for the government in the Teapot Dome trial, and who has been living quietly this week in Denver at a hotel, will leave for Cheyenne tomorrow to appear before the court in response to the summons Monday morning, he said here today.

He will make the trip by train, he said, unless informed in the meantime by his counsel, Henry A. Wise of New York, that he will not be wanted until later in the week.

When asked if he would refuse to testify, standing on his constitutional rights on the ground that what he would say might incriminate him, he said he could not discuss the matter.

GLORIA SWANSON MAY SAIL HOME IN TWO WEEKS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 14.—Gloria Swanson, the Marquise de la Falaise, probably will sail for America in a fortnight. A physicians' consultation Monday will decide exactly when it will be safe to make the voyage. Although up and walking about and taking buggy rides in the environs of Versailles with her husband, Gloria still always wears an ice pack strapped to her stomach and the doctors warn her that it is dangerous to leave off the freezing process until she is entirely recovered.

"We have abandoned our trip to the Riviera and my wife is anxious to return to California to attend to her film interests as soon as possible," Marquis de la Falaise said today.

FRENCH SENATE BODY VOTES FOR VATICAN envoy

Bishop in Alsace Orders School Children Strike.

BY VINCENT SHEEAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 14.—The senate finance committee after hearing Premier Herriot this evening voted 17 to 14 for the maintenance of the embassy at the Vatican.

M. Herriot pleaded in vain for the government's policy of breaking off diplomatic relations with the Vatican. The senators asked many questions and the premier responded to all with the declaration that the government does not intend to touch religious liberty in any way.

The committee's affront to the government will be followed by a demand for a vote of confidence in the senate at the earliest opportunity. M. Herriot plans to take up the whole religious question in a speech at Castres tomorrow. He will deal both with the cardinal's "formal declaration of war" Thursday night and the Catholic children's school strike in Alsace and Lorraine which is scheduled to begin Monday.

School Strike Tomorrow.

Mgr. Ruch, bishop of Strassbourg, has directed all Catholic families in Alsace and Lorraine to declare a school strike on Monday as a result of Premier Herriot's decree opening "interconfessional" schools. M. Herriot, in turn, has ordered all the mayors in the "regained provinces" to prosecute parents who keep their children away from the schools.

Mgr. Ruch demands that Catholics refuse to send their children to school at all for three days as a warning to the government of what will happen if the policy of nonsectarian education is pressed.

Meaning of "Interconfessional."

The so-called "interconfessional" schools which M. Herriot is introducing are midway between the Catholic parochial schools which now control primary education in the recovered provinces and the ordinary public school system of France. The interconfessional method is to group all Jewish, Catholic, Protestant, and Free Thinkers' children in one school with special instruction for each group, according to the parents' wishes. The Catholic authorities fear that this will be the first step towards the introduction of the public school system into Alsace and Lorraine.

ROW IN BRITISH CABINET LIKELY OVER SECURITY

Chamberlain Threatened to Resign Office.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 14.—The return of Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign minister, from Geneva next week is expected to mark a renewal of the acute division in Prime Minister Baldwin's cabinet over the policy of French security. THE TRIBUNE learns that there was a violent row two days before he left for Geneva, during which he threatened to resign.

The trouble arose over the secret memorandum which was published exclusively by THE TRIBUNE. Mr Baldwin was absent visiting his sick mother, and Mr. Chamberlain, who presided, was bitterly attacked by Winston Churchill and Lord Curzon.

Feels Attack Keenly.

Mr Chamberlain, who is extremely sensitive, felt the attack keenly, and he protested that he was being sent to Geneva empty handed, or at best in the rôle of executioner of the protocol, without an alternative offer. The cabinet, however, insisted, and the speech which was delivered at Geneva really was prepared by Lord Balfour, inasmuch as it was based on the Balfour memorandum and followed it almost textually.

It is stated that only the influence of Mr. Baldwin the next day induced Mr. Chamberlain to withdraw his resignation and go to Geneva to carry out his unpleasant task. He is still of the opinion that a negative policy, or even a positive isolation policy, is not enough, and he is said to be returning determined to fight for a positive policy of intervention in European affairs.

Protocol Dead in Japan's Eyes.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, March 14. — Japan regards the Geneva peace protocol as dead, thus requiring no further consideration, says the foreign office. Japan was not committed to it, but with Great Britain out and Italy following suit there is no necessity of a decision. The next serious consideration is the question of a second Washington conference which Japan will welcome provided the agenda is outlined.

Jury Is Deadlocked in Kid McCoy Holdup Trial

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—[United Press.]—The jurors in the assault and robbery case of "Kid" McCoy were still deadlocked tonight, with indications the deliberations would continue until Monday morning, when they will be asked for a report by Superior Judge Charles Crail. If the deadlock continues, the court probably will be compelled to declare a disagreement and order a new trial. The jury has been out since Friday night.

INSIDE LIFE.

Select or see carpets and rugs before you adopt a decorative scheme. Sometimes the fashion in carpets is for what is called medallion patterns. Oft times it is for plain effects; other times other effects. Those patterns which are inspired by antique oriental carpets remain always the very best to live with.

This, of course, is only a hint. The hint contains this fundamental: When furnishing a home or apartment, build around something that is underlying. There is no better beginning, to furnish either utility or charm, than floor coverings.

PLAN SALE FOR SHUT-INS WHO DESIRE WORK

Their Products Pile Up in Little Shop.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

A quaint old doorway, at 112 East Walton place, leads into a shop that tells a story the fabric of which is spun from the threads of many lives. Operated by the Vocational Society for Shut-Ins, everything from dainty handkerchiefs to brightly patterned rugs is on sale at the shop. They are the handiwork of incapacitated people of all ages, whose skill is acquired from teachers sent out by the society.

The wearily dragging hours in the lives of cripples who are confined to their homes have been turned into recreation and remuneration by the little shop. Checks totaling $8,594 were tucked into their pockets last year, paid to them as soon as their work was finished. So quickly has the stock accumulated that funds are running low, and until a clearance is effected, no more material can be furnished for the idle hands.

Stricken by Paralysis.

There's Julia, the blithe little housekeeper for a family of six, whose Italian drawn work is a marvel of beauty. Infantile paralysis left her with a pair of crutches instead of two strong limbs, yet to her, laughter is as natural as breath, and life a wonderful lark.

And Margaret, crippled by a fall in her babyhood, who in all her thirty-odd years of life, has never taken a step. Her specialty is handkerchiefs—so fine and sheer no débutante would scorn to display them at her gayest party. From the couch where all her days are spent Margaret sent a message that she had nothing to do except gaze through the window. Was it the fault of her work?

Plan a Sale.

There are orders for old Mr. R——, whose feet are useless, but whose hands are earning the living for himself and his wife, pulling colored strips through heavy goods to make hooked rugs.

Wednesday the little shop in East Walton place will inaugurate a sale, continuing Thursday and Friday, so that the stock may be moved and more materials provided for Margaret and Julia, Mr. R——, and more than a hundreds other shut-ins. Prices will tumble, and the public is invited. Tea will be served all three days.

MORE GOOD THAN EVIL, TOM MARSHALL'S VIEW AFTER 71 YEARS OF LIFE

TOM MARSHALL.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—Easy going views on many modern economic and political problems were expressed here today by Thomas R. Marshall, former Vice President, who is celebrating his 71st birthday.

"Seventy-one years I've lived today," he said. "I've made lots of mistakes; have regretted all of them; I've seen and known many people, good and bad; have had varied experiences, but the sum total of all my observations is that there's more good in the world than evil."

Leaning Tower of Pisa to Lean for 1,600 Years More

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, March 14.—A report on the condition of the leaning tower of Pisa issued today shows that the tower, which has been leaning for seven centuries, has tilted over five millimeters since 1923. The thousands of Americans who are rushing to Pisa to see the famous structure fall will have to wait just 1,600 years for the accident, Prof. Canevari, who made the report, said. Earthquakes, he said, have had no effect whatever, but water infiltration underground is affecting the base.

CHICAGO OPERA SINGERS NEAR END OF TRAVELS

Tour of Almost 5,000 Miles Successful.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 14.—With the present week-end at the Milwaukee auditorium the Chicago Civic Opera company will call it a season and go back to headquarters to arrange contracts, casts, and costumes for next fall.

Chaliapin and Edith Mason sang in "Boris Godunoff" last night. Tonight's performance was "La Giaconda," with Rose Raisa, Flora Perini, Angelo Cortis, and Giacomo Rimini. The tour will close tomorrow afternoon with "Rigoletto," in which Florence Macbeth Charles Hackett, and Joseph Schwarz will have the principal parts. Then home for everybody.

Rehearsal Drudgery at an End.

There is a noticeable difference in atmosphere between the tour and the home performances of the opera company. In some ways the tour cities have the better of it. For one thing, the drudgery of rehearsals is over. There is nothing to do but give performances, get on the train, and be moved to the next stopping place.

For the Chicago Civic Opera company travels luxuriously in its own private trains, with meals served in the dining car at any and all hours of the twenty-four. Consequently there is an air of cheer about the company that gets into the performances and reflects across the footlights to the audiences. The only bit of complaint so far came from Miss Raisa when she went to a hotel in Washington and was charged $7 a day extra because of the presence of her two pet dogs.

Tour Nearly 5,000 Miles.

It has been quite a trip. Since the company left Chicago seven weeks ago tonight, it has visited twelve cities, traveled just short of five thousand miles, and by tomorrow afternoon will have given fifty-two performances. It went to Boston for its first and longest stop of two weeks, then to Washington and Baltimore and in a generally southwestern direction as far south as Dallas, Tex., and on the last part of the journey up through Tulsa, Okla.; St. Louis, Cincinnati, and finally Milwaukee, giving two, three, and four performances in each place.

The cost of the undertaking has been $760,000, all met by groups of guarantors in each of the cities visited, an average of something like $14,600 for each performance.

It means that in each community a group of citizens has been willing to back its own judgment to that extent that the community would like the opera company well enough to pay for it. In the majority of cases the groups won their bets, in a few they lost in part.

Milwaukee, for instance, has had luck. The blizzard of the last two days cut off a large delegation of automobile visitors from a radius of fifty or sixty miles north, south, and west, an element that every year is more important in the patronage of the company's tours.

But even when guarantors lose part of their subscriptions, they remain cheerful in the consciousness that they have done something for their home city.

In cases where they come out even or better than even, they are more than cheerful. Chattanooga already has subscribed considerably more than enough money to bring the company back again next winter.

Travel weary, but contented, the company will now begin plans for another season.

SHOOT AND ROB CAB DRIVER.

Resisting two robbers who held him up at 91st street and Commercial avenue cost Paul Berille, 22, 8838 Commercial avenue, taxicab driver, a bullet in the left shoulder last night. After shooting Berille, the robbers took $7 from him and drove away.

RESTAURANTS IN PARIS FEATURE REDUCING DIET

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 14.—Lamb chops and pineapple are featured on every menu in Ciros, Café Paris, Maxims, and other well known restaurants frequented by Americans to cater to a new reducing diet most American women are undergoing here. In the leading restaurants there are so many orders for these dishes that it has been decided to offer them for luncheon and dinner daily.

"Nearly half our lady customers restrict themselves to lamb chops and pineapple at least one meal daily," said Maurice, the head waiter at Ciros.

Those taking the cure eschew bread, vegetables, and all liquids except tea, and claim they lose an average of a pound daily after the first week.

Sen. La Follette Leaves Florida for Washington

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 14.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin, and Mrs. La Follette, who have been visiting here for several months, left today for Washington.

One Fraud That Goes On Uncurbed

Profiteers Still Thrive in the Undertaking Business. Read This Fresh Evidence.

Under the law, any citizen who has knowledge of a crime committed by another and who conceals his knowledge is himself guilty of a criminal offense and subject to punishment.

This would be our excuse, if one were needed, for refusing to keep silent, even though by publishing as we have done the crimes against decency and morality of many Chicago undertakers, we have won their bitter enmity and malice.

From the beginning, we have wished that one of them, or anybody else, would demand proof of our charges so that we might present to them the mountain of evidence we have gathered. We are still hoping that one of Chicago's public-spirited civic organizations will appoint a committee to investigate the evil conditions we have described and to recommend a remedy.

500% Profits Still Common

Once more we charge, with no fear of being disputed, that undertakers all over Chicago are mulcting from rich and poor alike the most exorbitant profits—not 50 or even 100 per cent, but from 300 to 600 per cent. One of the many new cases reported to us within the past week was the sale of a casket that was bought by the undertaker for $300.00 and sold by him for $1800.00. Think of that, you readers who are glad to make 33⅓ per cent on the goods you sell.

Sooner or later, our lone fight to free Chicago from the clutches of these conscienceless profiteers will win, because it must win. Today, as never before, the public is rallying to our support. How do we know? Because our own business since the first of January has been much the largest in our 40 years' experience.

Supply and Demand Law Has No Effect

The people are coming to see and understand that burial caskets are one line of manufactured products the price of which is not influenced by the economic law of supply and demand that govern every other kind of merchandise, and that to get fair treatment and honest values they must deal with an honest funeral director.

Caskets as low as $25

So far as we know we are the only undertakers in this city carrying our own stock of caskets, each one plainly price marked.

A visit to either our North Side or South Side establishment will quickly and convincingly prove our claim that our prices are never more than one-half and often only one-third the prices asked elsewhere for caskets of the same identical grade and quality.

We cordially invite your questions concerning every detail of our high-class service and equipment, including our two beautiful free chapels and our high grade limousines and casket coach. All we ask is comparison by anyone interested.

One of our cars will call for you without any obligation at any hour of the day or night.

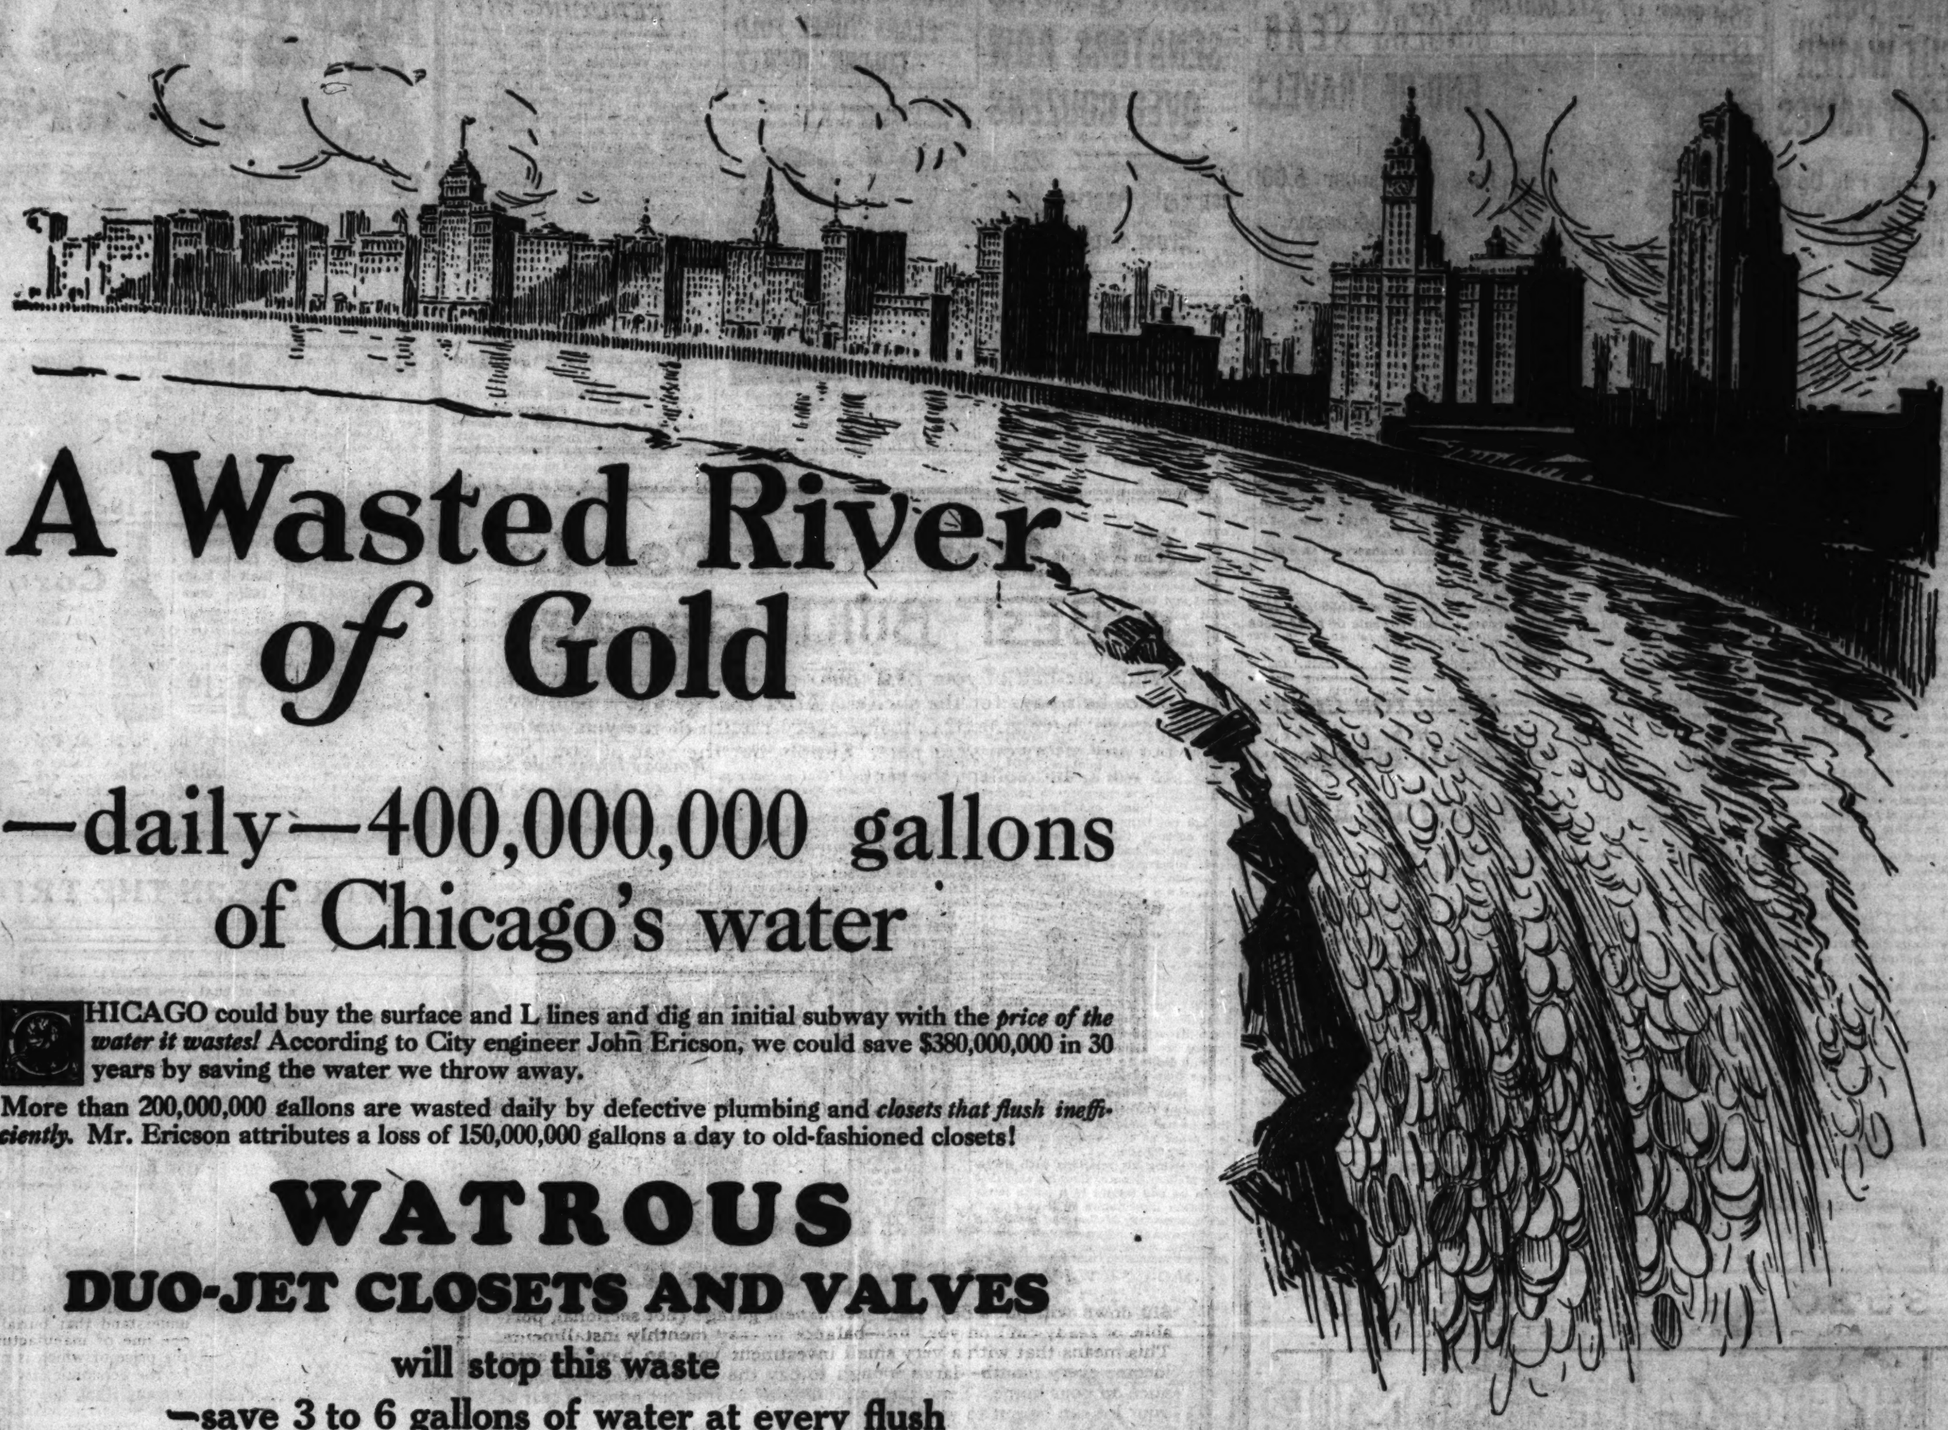
MOSER



A Wasted River of Gold

—daily—400,000,000 gallons of Chicago's water

CHICAGO could buy the surface and L lines and dig an initial subway with the price of the water it wastes! According to City engineer John Ericson, we could save $380,000,000 in 30 years by saving the water we throw away.

More than 200,000,000 gallons are wasted daily by defective plumbing and closets that flush inefficiently. Mr. Ericson attributes a loss of 150,000,000 gallons a day to old-fashioned closets!

WATROUS

DUO-JET CLOSETS AND VALVES

will stop this waste

—save 3 to 6 gallons of water at every flush

Working in combination, the Watrous Duo-Jet Closet and Valve use less than 2 gallons of water for a thorough flush and refill. Most combinations of other designs use 5 to 7 gallons. Many types use more, and some use far more.

The Watrous Flush Valve (A in Figure 1, below) regulates with perfect accuracy the duration of each flush; it permits the amount of water necessary for a complete flush to pass through it—and no more. Its self-cleansing seat makes clogging an absolute impossibility.

In the Watrous Duo-Jet Closet, two powerful converging jets (B and C in Figure 1) produce a complete flush at one-third the expenditure of water usual with closets of other designs. This is explained in greater detail below. Two Watrous types are shown, differing mainly in the manner of installation.

Architects

The bigger the construction work, the more important it is that your clients secure the advantage of economy and efficiency of operation afforded by the Watrous Closet Combination. Write for full details today. Roughing-in drawings for Duo-Jet Closet installations sent on request.

Plumbing Contractors

Your customers will make inquiry about the Watrous Closet Combination. Write today, and get full information, so that you will be prepared to answer all questions completely and in detail.

Prospective Building Owners

Your new building should be equipped with the Watrous Closet Combination. Write us today, and get full information on how and where to secure it.

(Floor Type)

The two powerful jets B and C empty the bowl almost instantaneously. In the commonly used syphon type, most of the water is wasted in starting syphonic action.

Note the wide outlet passage—full three-inch throughout, with the smallest diameter at the entrance of the trap. This type of design eliminates the zigzag outlet and contracted passage beyond the trap which are unavoidable in types which require the establishment of a syphon.

The result is absolute protection against clogging of the passage and overflowing of the bowl. The expense of repairs, redecorating damaged walls in lower rooms, etc., should be added to the cost of the water wasted by other types of bowl.

(Wall Type)

The Wall Type operates by means of the same Duo-Jet action as the Floor Type, and is used in combination with the Watrous Flush Valve in exactly the same manner. The Valve is not shown in this illustration.

The fact that the bowl does not come in contact with the floor makes it possible to keep the bathroom in an absolutely sanitary condition.

The Watrous Wall Closet is extremely popular with building and plumbing contractors, because, in the construction of a building, concrete floors and tile can be laid without leaving provision in the floor for closet connections—saving time, expense, and interference in building operations.

By the use of the Wall Flange D, installation is made at less cost and without the need of special fittings.

METERING DUE TO CUT WATER BILL OF HOMES

Engineers Show Saving for Householder.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Universal metering of Chicago's water is to be taken up by the city council after the traction ordinance has gone to a popular vote April 7, and the engineers are already working out a scheme of installation.

Secretary Weeks' permit for the withdrawal of 3,500 cubic feet per second from Lake Michigan by the Sanitary district makes it obligatory upon the city to adopt a program within six months for the metering of at least 90 per cent of the water service, and to execute it at the rate of 10 per cent a year. Otherwise the sanitary permit may be revoked.

Drowns Old Objection.

Aldermanic leaders pointed out yesterday that this puts the council smack up against the necessity of adopting a metering system and demolishes the old side stepping argument that used to be pulled whenever meter proposals were urged during the last quarter century. The old shout used to be that meters would mean political funerals.

The aldermen used to argue that to measure the water would put them in bad with their constituents by increasing their water bills and cutting down adequate supplies for the kitchen, the bathroom and the lawn.

These arguments have been punctured by the experts. By figures from the water rolls, they have been able to demonstrate that meters reduce the water bills for the ordinary householder.

Two Engineers Agree.

Two statements on which aldermanic interest was focused yesterday were:

By City Engineer John Ericson—"If the system is metered, no further addition to Chicago's present pumping capacity will be required in thirty years."

By Col. Henry A. Allen, consulting engineer for the city — "Without meters the expenditures by Chicago will be about $380,000,000 more in the next thirty years than with universal metering. The question is whether it is best to spend $380,000,000 in thirty years for pumps, equipment, and attendant works, with the result of not being able to get a good water supply service. Or, is it best to pay about $18,000,000 in ten years for universal metering with the result of getting excellent water supply service."

Measured Service Less.

Recent surveys which are getting much attention at the city hall show that one story shanties with a frontage rate in many cases are paying about twice as much for their water as many fine residences with expansive lawns with meters. A survey of Oak Park, Austin, Morgan Park, and Rogers Park indicates the cheaper cost of measured service.

A study of the bills of 500 metered consumers in Austin, 500 in Morgan Park and 200 in Rogers Park showed an average charge per residence of $6.70 in Rogers Park, $4 in Morgan Park and $4.50 in Austin. More than half the residential customers in Morgan Park and Austin paid less than $4 a year and about one-third of them paid less than $3. In Austin a study of 100 two apartment metered buildings showed the average charge to be $5.70.

As against this, the average two flat unmetered building in Chicago, with two sets of fixtures and hose, was paying $12.38. The experts compute that for the ordinary householder, in general, meters reduce the bills 30 to 50 per cent and even higher.

Points in Report.

Other conclusions set forth by Col. Allen in his last report are:

"To limit willful waste, thus insuring a more reliable service, will reduce fire hazards and fire insurance rates.

"Thirty gallons per day per capita for domestic consumption is more than sufficient for personal cleanliness and good health.

"To stop willful waste means a filtration plant can be installed at a great deal less cost.

"The sum of $380,000,000 in the next thirty years, under the present water rate, is the sum which objectors to universal metering in effect are advocating that the taxpayers must pay, so that a number of our citizens be allowed to willfully waste water."

Center of $11,000,000 Tax Wrangle

SENATOR JAMES COUZENS.

The demand of the treasury department for about $11,000,000 back taxes said to be due from the Washington senator for sale of Ford stock five years ago precipitated a row in the senate yesterday.

HAMILTON CLUB INDORSES STATE POLICE MEASURE

The Hamilton club of Chicago yesterday went on record as indorsing the state police bill now before the legislature.

This was announced after a discussion of the merits of the bill by members and their instructions to the board of directors, which then voted to get behind it.

The board not only indorsed the bill unanimously, but it drew up resolutions to be sent to the members of the legislature and to the governor; and it also empowered Alexander H. Fyfe, the president, to appoint a committee to go to Springfield to lobby for it.

Eighteen states now have state police forces and the bill introduced into the legislature by Senator Dunlap, the oldest man in the senate, provides for an Illinois organization similar to those in New York, Pennsylvania and other states.

"LIAR!" FLUNG AS SENATORS ROW OVER COUZENS

Fist Fight Averted When Ernst Explains.

not refer to Senator Glass but that he had reference to a statement made by Senator Couzens earlier in the debate.

Denies Couzens' Charge.

Senator Ernst said that he had not understood what was said at the time but had obtained from the official stenographer a transcript of the remarks in question. Senator Ernst read from a statement by Senator Couzens in which the inference was given that Senator Ernst kept treasury officials informed of the plans of the Couzens committee and that various important documents had disappeared and that in some way Senator Ernst and the treasury had a hand in such disappearances.

"I never heard of a paper disappearing," said Senator Ernst. "These charges are as without foundation as any charges may be."

Attacks Couzens' Inquiry.

Senator Ernst in his address reviewed the history of the investigation of the internal revenue bureau by the Couzens committee. He declared that while Senator Couzens had professed a purpose to conduct his inquiry along constructive lines he had not done so.

He declared that the fact that an investigation had been made of tax cases involving 38 so-called Mellon corporations was proof that Senator Couzens was seeking to uncover something to indicate that favoritism had been shown these companies.

Notwithstanding this effort Senator Ernst declared that not a single fact reflecting on the integrity of Secretary Mellon or any official of the internal revenue bureau had been brought out. Mr. Ernst added that as a member of the committee he had become disgusted with Couzens' atttitude toward Mr. Mellon, which showed an evident desire to "get" the secretary rather than to adduce facts.

Says Mellon Asked Quiz.

Senator Couzens in reply asserted that he had selected the so-called Mellon cases at the written request of Secretary Mellon.

Reviewing his relations with Secretary Mellon, Senator Couzens said that when he had sought in a polite letter to obtain information relative to surtaxes, Secretary Mellon had replied in an "arrogant and sarcastic manner."

Senator Glass criticised both Secretary Mellon and the Couzens investigation.

"It was not my judgment that the so-called Couzens committee should have been continued," said Senator Glass. "Had I been in the senate chamber when it was proposed I should have objected to the continuation of the inquiry because I believe it is not going to result in the return to the treasury of a single dollar of taxes.

"I am convinced that a continuation of the inquiry has produced a state of mind among officials charged with the administration of tax laws that will inevitably result in injustice and hardship to taxpayers. 'In the end the inquiry will result in a greater disadvantage to the taxpayers than in any advantage to the government."

Senator Glass said that while he had a high opinion of Secretary Mellon's ability his estimate of him had been modified by his action in the Couzens tax case.

"I want to say in justice to the senator from Michigan that he had nothing whatever to do with the assessment on the Ford stock, or that he had any knowledge of it," Senator Glass said. "The assessment was not made at his request, but at the request of the majority stockholders. It was an unusual course for the treasury to pursue but it was dealing with an extraordinary case. Great bitterness had arisen between majority and minority stockholders of the Ford corporation.

"It was stated to the treasury that in consequence of the dispute great alarm was being felt in Detroit over the possible removal of the Ford plant. The collector of internal revenue of the Detroit district made a personal visit to Washington and asked that the treasury make an assessment in order to promote this transaction, involving the sale of minority stock.

Experts Valued Stock.

"The treasury department dispatched its best and most experienced experts to Detroit to make the valuation. They spent weeks in the offices of the Ford company ascertaining the tangible values of its stock and its book value and its good name and made the assessment in the accustomed way.

"When the government regularly and without concealment and without any taint of fraud, reaches a conclusion as to taxable valuation and announces that conclusion, it is bad policy subject to immoral use and subject to tyranny, for any officials to undertake to reopen that conclusion.

"It is not just and is a menace for the commissioner of internal revenue with the approval of the secretary of the treasury to undertake to reopen a case six years afterward."

DIVINE WORD SOCIETY PLANS THREE FOLD GOLDEN JUBILEE

Plans for a threefold celebration of the golden jubilee of the founding of the Society of the Divine Word and the silver jubilee of its establishment in the United States are being completed at the institution at Techny, Ill.

REV. BRUNO HAGSPEIL.

A mission play, "Andalouma," to be given outdoors late in June, will be the first feature of the jubilees. An outdoor carnival and bazaar on the grounds at Techny July 3, 4, and 5 will constitute the second part, and a three day religious celebration for the clergy and laity, to be held in September, will form the third part.

Cardinal Mundelein is chairman of the honorary committee for the jubilees. Judge John P. McGoorty heads the active committee on arrangements, and the Rev. Bruno Hagspeil, S. V. D., is in charge of general plans for the celebration.

"Hey, look what my Dad does!

—Pays us what he saves on coal
—That's the kind of a Dad to have Gee Whiz! But we do have fun at our house!"

Every Holland Furnace - - - is a Bargain!

Because Every HOLLAND-User Is Permanently Pleased

Thrift— Real Thrift!

When you believe in thrift the way this boy's Dad does, you will heat your home with a Holland Warm Air Circulating System.

The Average Holland-User throughout the United States saves fully $65 per year on coal, and has it to spend on things that a heart really desires. We do not claim to save "one-third to one-half your fuel," because we do not know how much you are using.

But we can positively guarantee you that the Holland will use at least $65.00 less in coal than the average heating system that can heat your home.

We have proven this in hundreds of thousands of homes.

In Mt. Pleasant, Michigan, in 1918, during Uncle Sam's allocation of coal, it was proven again that the Holland was using less fuel than any other heating system.

And, of course, that was before the invention of the Holland Humidifier and Fuel—Vaporizor.

The New Air Moistener

The Holland burns fuel more efficiently now than ever before.

The simple, new Humidifier not only makes air more comfortable at several degrees lower temperature, but the same device actually steams the fuel as it burns!

And the ashes are automatically dampened to eliminate dust at the same time. Many a Holland System has been purchased for this reason alone.

Thrift does not mean scrimping. Certainly that is not the way any real father or mother tries to maintain the respect of their children.

What is Thrift, if it is not simply the wise use of money?

The Holland is the most popular warm-air heating system because it is the most healthful, and because it does fit in precisely with that sound idea of Useful Thrift.

There is no need of our looking any further for the reason that folks everywhere—lots of folks—are saying—"Holland Furnaces Make Warm Friends."

The Holland is sold on the easy payment plan, if you prefer, or there is a fair discount for cash.

Does your present furnace need a little fixing? If so, let a Holland expert take care of it for you at the fair Holland prices.

The Holland is not a pipeless furnace. It is a complete pipe system, with cold air returns from rooms above the basement.

Read what these users say:

Holland Furnace Company,
Dear Sirs:
It is a pleasure to me to take time to write to you without request, and tell you of our satisfaction with your furnace.
The house is heated perfectly with 50 per cent of what it took to heat it with a stove, and every room has the same temperature. We have used this furnace for three years, and it is in good shape.
Your Mr. Long also installed another furnace for me in another house last fall and it is giving wonderful success.
J. W. Ireland, Peru, Ind.

Holland Furnace Co.,
Gentlemen:
A year ago you replaced my old furnace which consumed $156.00 worth of fuel, and the best we could do was 65 degrees. Last winter with our Holland we spent $70 for fuel and kept the house at 75 degrees, even when the thermometer outdoors showed it to be 18 below zero.
It affords me a great deal of pleasure to be able to advise you that I have found my Holland Furnace to be entirely satisfactory in every way.
Herman J. Adler, Chicago, Ill.

Holland Furnace Company,
Gentlemen:
I want to congratulate you on your success of building and installing a furnace. For economy the "Holland" is unsurpassed. The actual expense for coal burned from October to December 25th, 1923, was $72.00; the actual expense for coal burned for the same period this year was $30.00 or an actual saving of $42.00 for three months. My expenses for coal for the last six years average $210.00 per year. This year the coal bill will be around $100.00, or, in other words, the saving of coal will pay for the furnace in 2 years.
William C. Hermann, Chicago, Illinois.

Yesterday—in costly homes alone

The residence of T. W. Griffiths, Dallas, Texas. Anton F. Korn, Jr., Dallas, Architect. Twenty thousand feet of Celotex used as sheathing, plaster base and insulation

Snow upon the roof of an uninsulated house when occupied melts rapidly due to the heat escaping through the materials with which the roof is built

Snow upon the roof of an insulated house lasts longer upon the roof of an unoccupied house. It stays much longer, because there is no escaping heat underneath to melt it

Today even the simplest home can have this hidden comfort

Three years ago owners of costly homes were enjoying a degree of comfort that few men could give their families.

It wasn't costly furnishings—rich rugs, period furniture, tapestried walls. It was something hidden, built into the house itself.

In winter it gave every room an even, healthful coziness—and saved enough on fuel to run a motor car. In summer it kept the whole house pleasantly cool. It produced a restful quiet.

And so, people in these costly homes were living better, sleeping better, enjoying a healthful comfort denied to most home builders.

Then, suddenly, this hidden source of greater comfort was made available for every home. New possibilities of home construction were opened up. New standards of comfort and healthfulness were established.

The facts follow—facts so unusual that we have waited three full years to tell them.

The secret of greater home comfort

The secret, in a word, is insulation—heat-insulation. There is no mystery about it. Any architect or engineer can explain it to you fully.

Insulation is a scientific means of stopping the passage of heat.

In the walls of your ice-box it keeps heat out. In the walls of your fireless cooker it keeps heat in.

Similarly, in the walls of a house, insulation keeps heat inside in winter and outside in summer.

Hence, in costly homes, architects have for years used insulation to do what wood, brick, stucco and other ordinary building materials cannot effectively do.

With insulation they have prevented an unnecessary 25 to 35 per cent heat loss. (Tests show this heat leakage through the solid walls and roof of homes built without insulation.) With insulation they have made homes that are delightfully cool in summer. Homes free from draughts, quieter, more healthful.

Yet, hitherto, they have been able to do this only at extra cost—a cost prohibitive to most home builders.

The most important building story ever told

Then, three years ago, an amazing new building material was given to the world—a wholly new material, different from anything made, grown or mined.

It was called Celotex Insulating Lumber.

Celotex made it possible for the first time to build a completely insulated house practically without extra cost.

Since it was put upon the market Celotex Insulating Lumber has completely demonstrated its remarkable qualities. It has been built into thousands of homes. In every part of the United States and in many foreign countries it has revolutionized home-building ideas.

What Celotex Insulating Lumber is

Celotex became a reality when years of scientific research ended in the discovery of the remarkable qualities of bagasse (sugar cane fibre), one of the longest and toughest fibres known in any plant or tree in the world.

A way was found to fabricate these fibres into building lumber which contains thousands of sealed air cells—the most efficient form of insulation known to science. Today a mammoth plant in Louisiana is producing millions of feet of it a year. It comes to you in broad, clean boards—strong, rugged, durable, possessing qualities that have made it the sensation of the building world.

Three great advantages combined in one material

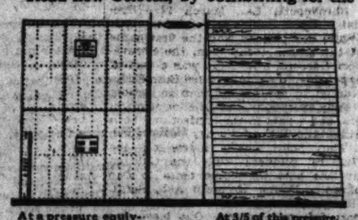
Celotex is insulation. It has insulation or heat-stop value equal or superior to that of any practical and available insulating material on the market.

Celotex used on exterior and interior walls is equal, as insulation, to 3½ inches of solid wood, 12 inches of solid plaster, 12 inches of solid brick, or 24 inches of solid concrete!

Celotex has greater ability to prevent the transmission of sound than deadening felts, and eliminates the use of such materials.

Celotex is a structural material. In walls it has many times the structural strength of the wood sheathing it replaces. This is a quality that no other insulating or sound-absorbing material possesses.

Read how Celotex, by combining for the first time these three great advantages, enables you, at practically no extra cost, to secure for your home all the benefits of insulation.



At a pressure equivalent to wind or tornado pressure, frame sheathed with Celotex Insulating Lumber was only slightly out of plumb

At 3/5 of this pressure, frame sheathed with wood was racked more than 11 times as much as Celotex

These pictures illustrate the results of a test made by the engineering laboratories of Robert W. Hunt & Company to determine the relative strength of Celotex and wood as sheathing. It was demonstrated that a wall sheathed with Celotex is several times as rigid as a wall as ordinarily sheathed with lumber

How Celotex Insulating Lumber is used

Old types of insulation were extra materials—an added expense. Not so with Celotex. Wherever used, Celotex replaces wood and any other form of insulation.

You use Celotex on the outside walls of your house and under the roofing, in place of the wood lumber known as sheathing. Test after test by unquestioned authorities has proved that a wall sheathed with Celotex is many times stronger and more rigid than one as ordinarily sheathed with lumber.

This use of Celotex gives you heat-insulation without extra cost.

You use Celotex in place of lath, as a plaster base. Plaster bonds with Celotex and produces a wall several times as strong as one made with lath and plaster. And one less likely to crack.

This use of Celotex also gives you heat-insulation practically without extra cost.

Thus Celotex gives you a home that is stronger, far more comfortable and healthful, yet costs little, if anything, more than an ordinary one.

You can have a home like this

It is easy for you to have a warmer, better home than any old-type, heat-leaking home in your neighborhood. Simply specify Celotex for sheathing, plaster base, roof insulation.

Your home, so built, will have no "cold rooms," or "cold sides." It will be free from draughts. (And the use of Celotex permits you to reduce the size of your heating plant and radiators and cut your fuel bills one-fourth to one-third.)

If you live in a warm climate, Celotex will give your home a new degree of hot-weather comfort. All summer your home will be cooler, with no stifling upstairs rooms at night. A restful quiet will pervade it.

If you are going to build, use Celotex. If you are going to buy a completed home, make sure that Celotex has been used in its construction. If you are having a house built for you, insist upon Celotex being used.

New standards of construction are being established by Celotex. Buyers of the future will be guided by them. Safeguard the future resale value of your home with Celotex.

Your architect, contractor or lumber dealer will be glad to talk these matters over with you. Write us for additional information on the value of insulation and how you can use Celotex to secure it without extra cost. Fill out and mail the coupon—now.

FACTS about CELOTEX Insulating Lumber

Celotex comes in stock sizes: Thickness, approximately 7/16 of an inch; width, 4 feet; lengths, 8 to 12 feet.

The weight of Celotex is about 60 pounds to the hundred square feet, making it easy to handle and economical to apply.

Celotex is sawed like ordinary lumber and is nailed directly to all framing.

The great durability of Celotex permits it to be piled outside and handled as wood lumber is handled.

Any type of exterior finish—siding, clapboards, stucco, brick veneer, etc.—is applied over Celotex in the same manner as over wood sheathing. Any kind of roofing can be laid over it. It is used in all types of roofs to stop the passage of heat at the roof line.

Standard prepared gypsum plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex.

Celotex is waterproofed. It can be painted and used as an exterior finish.

Other Celotex uses

Celotex has many uses other than in dwelling houses. Mail the coupon for full information on any of the following:

Interior wall finish—the interesting fabric surface texture of Celotex makes it admirably suitable for interior finish in many forms of beautiful wall treatment. It may be left in its pleasing natural finish, or painted, stained or stenciled.

Industrial and commercial buildings—especially for roof insulation and sound absorption and to eliminate condensation of moisture.

Acousti-Celotex—used in auditoriums, theatres, churches, schools, offices, broadcasting studios, music rooms, banks, for acoustical correction, etc.

Small buildings—summer cottages, garages, mountain cabins, etc.

Special farm uses—stock barns, milk houses, potato and perishable product warehouses, vegetable and fruit storage rooms, incubators, chicken houses, etc.

In homes already built—attic insulation, cool rooms, vegetable storage, interior wall treatment and all kinds of house alterations.

Refrigerator cars—Celotex is in use as insulation by the leading railroads and car builders of the country in more than 13,000 refrigerator cars.

Shipping boxes—specially manufactured Celotex, strong, light in weight, waterproof, pilfer proof; thousands in use.

MICHIGAN TAKES BIG TEN TRACK TITLE

WALTER CAMP, "FATHER OF MODERN FOOTBALL," DIES

NOTED COACH AND CRITIC SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK

Was Leader in Gridiron Game Forty Years.

New York, March 14.—Walter Camp, founder of modern intercollegiate football, died today while sleeping in his room in the Hotel Belmont. He was in his 65th year.

Coming to New York Friday afternoon to attend the conference of the intercollegiate football rules committee, of which he was secretary, the former Yale player, coach, and critic succumbed to angina pectoris, which overtook him in his bed after he had returned last night from the committee's first session at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Worried Coaches Find Body.

The body was found by William W. Roper, Princeton's head gridiron coach, and W. S. Langford of Trinity, who were sent to the Belmont by the committee after Mr. Camp had failed to appear for this morning's meeting. Getting no response to repeated knockings at the room door, they summoned hotel officials, who forced an entrance. Mr. Camp, in his pajamas, was in bed, apparently asleep. An examination, however, showed he had been dead several hours.

The body will be taken tomorrow morning to Mr. Camp's home at New Haven, Conn., the seat of the university he served so illustriously for many years. Walter Camp Jr., of New York, the great coach's only son, and himself once a Yale halfback, and Mr. Roper, will accompany it.

Death Comes in Sleep.

Members of the rules committee said Mr. Camp apparently was in the best of health and spirits at last night's session. At midnight, the meeting adjourned until 9:30 o'clock this morning and Mr. Camp went to his hotel.

Dr. J. R. A. Lang, house physician at the Belmont, said Mr. Camp had died in his sleep of a heart attack. This was confirmed later by Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, assistant medical examiner.

Mrs. Camp was notified by telephone at New Haven, but it was decided she should not attempt the journey to New York today. Her son, a New York business man, together with Roper and other members of the rules committee, took charge of the arrangements.

Recalls Haughton's Death.

The death of Mr. Camp recalled to football men the sudden passing of Percy Haughton, former Harvard coach, who succumbed to a heart attack that followed acute indigestion last fall while the famous "P. D." was coaching the Columbia football team. Haughton was stricken on the field.

Tributes to the famous football expert poured in throughout the day from all parts of the country. Noted gridiron men of this day and other days, many of whom owed their success as coach or as player to what Walter Camp had taught them, hastened to pay their respects to his memory.

Year after year, when the sons of Eli were supreme in the football world, Mr. Camp was the power back of that supremacy. It was recalled he started coaching the Blue elevens soon after he was graduated.

Headed Board of Strategy.

As the game developed and the Yale-Harvard-Princeton classics began to attract the attention of thousands Mr. Camp headed what became known as the Yale board of strategy.

The board would meet in the old New Haven house, since torn down, and confer until the early hours of morning, mapping out plays for the "big games." The Blue quarter backs carried out Mr. Camp's instructions to the letter, for his word was law.

In the old days, when he gave up much of his time to active coaching, Mr. Camp was accompanied much of the time by Mrs. Camp, who was known as a keen strategist. In recent years Mr. Camp had been more of an advisor to the coaches than an active worker with the squad.

Although a man of varied activities, Walter Camp came to be known affectionately as "The Father of Modern Football." He earned this title because the numerous amendments to the playing code, which he suggested and which were adopted, not only revolutionized but virtually re-created the game.

Founded Modern Grid Game.

The first revolutionary change in the gridiron game suggested by Mr. Camp was the rule requiring 5 yards' gain in three downs. That was in 1880 and was the first step that led to the modern style of play. He also proposed the change to 10 yards' gain in four downs in 1906.

Mr. Camp had been a member of the university athletic committee for many years, and for a similar period was treasurer of the Yale Financial Union. He founded this latter organization, which combined the finances of all sports and brought them under complete control of the university with the result that there came an annual surplus to the general athletic fund. The success of the plan at Yale prompted many universities to adopt similar systems.

All-American Teams Famous.

In 1889 Mr. Camp was elected treasurer of the Yale Field corporation, and as such was credited with having accumulated the money for the building of the Yale Bowl. As athletic adviser

MacFarlane of Chicago won the 440 yard run, while De Hart Hubbard, dusky star of the University of Michigan, was victor in the 50 yard dash. Royal Bouscher of Northwestern tied with J. K. Brooker of Michigan at 12 feet 6 inches in the pole vault, while the half mile run was won by C. A. Reinke of Michigan.

BADGERS BEATEN OUT IN LAST RACE; MAROONS THIRD

Two Mile and Half Mile Records Broken.

TABLE OF POINTS

Michigan	22	Ohio State	17
Wisconsin	20	Iowa	0
Chicago	18	Northwestern	6½
Illinois	17½

Minnesota, Purdue, and Indiana failed to score.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

By placing in the final event, the relay race, Michigan won the fifteenth annual indoor track and field championships of the western conference in Patten gym last night with a total of 22 points. Wisconsin was second with 20, and Chicago third with 18.

Before the relay Michigan led with a total of 21 points, against 20 for Wisconsin. The standing put the final result squarely up to the relay teams, and, just at the time when it looked as if the Cardinals had second place and the meet cinched, Kennedy, the last Badger runner, fell on the back stretch. At the time Michigan was back quite a distance, but the accident enabled the last Wolverine runner to go into fourth place, while Kennedy was unable to recover to finish ahead of the Maize and Blue.

Chicago Leads from Start.

Chicago led in the race from start to finish, but was pushed on the first three relays by Wisconsin, which had a commanding lead over Illinois and Northwestern. At the start of the last relay the crowd started to leave, thinking Chicago would win and Wisconsin take second, giving the Badgers the meet. When the runners came out from behind the stand where the accident happened Kennedy was not among the leaders and it afterward developed he fell while trying to pass Ravenscroft, the last Chicago runner. It was an unfortunate accident for the Cardinal team, which put up a gritty struggle for team honors.

It was a struggle between Badgers and Wolverines, but other teams such as Chicago, Ohio State, and Illinois made surprisingly good showings. The Maroons nosed out Illinois for third place by half a point, and the Orange and Blue was half a unit in advance of the Buckeyes.

Two Records Broken.

Two Western conference indoor records were broken and the marks in two other events tied. The first record to be shattered was the two mile, which H. R. Phelps of Iowa won handily in 9:32 3-5. The performance bettered the old mark of 9:41 made by Capt. E. C. Misher of Illinois last year. The Hawkeye was easily the class of the field and led the pack most of the way. He finished strong and never was challenged during the final stages of the race.

The other record to go by the boards was in the half mile. C. A. Reinke of Michigan, who hung up a new Big Ten mark of 1:57 3-5 in 1923, lowered the time to 1:56 2-5. The lanky Wolverine had to run all around the field to get into a position to fight for the lead, but on the last lap he pulled away from the field and won by himself, with Ponzer of Illinois in second place.

Dash Records Tied.

In the fifty yard dash, Wittman and Hubbard of Michigan and Evans of Illinois tied the record of :05 2-5, which was first established by O. J. Murray of Illinois back in 1914, but which has been tied in later years by several sprinters. The race was won by De Hart Hubbard of Michigan.

In the sixty yard high hurdles, Marigold of Illinois and Guthrie of Ohio State tied the mark of :07 3-5, which was first established by Carl Johnson of Michigan back in 1920. The Illinois timber topper tied the record in his preliminary heat, and Guthrie equaled the mark in the final, which he won over his team mate, Snyder, and Dan Kinsey of Illinois.

Among other commendable performances was that of Herbert Schwarze of Wisconsin, who put the shot 47 feet 2 inches.

McFarlane Takes Quarter.

Capt. Brooker of Michigan and Bouscher of Northwestern tied for first place in the pole vault at 12 feet 6 inches. McGinnis of Wisconsin took the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 2

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Do you think the New York boxing commission should force Dempsey to fight Wills?

Where Asked.

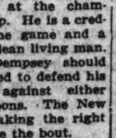
Mullen's gym, 175 West Madison street.

The Answers.

The Rev. J. Francis O'Leary, Schaller, Ia., clergyman—As one interested in the manly art, I believe the sport world in general would be deeply interested in seeing our present heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey, defend his title against Harry Wills, who, in my judgment, would prove a worthy opponent for Mr. Dempsey.

Thomas J. Mullen, 1434 North Mansfield avenue, lawyer—I believe that Harry Wills' record entitles him to an opportunity to box Dempsey. And if it is possible for the commission to force Dempsey to meet him it should be done. The New York commission seems to be the only boxing body in the country with power enough to force such a contest.

John J. O'Keefe, 3218 West Monroe street, manager of boxers—I think Harry Wills is entitled to a chance at the championship. He is a credit to the game and a good, clean living man. Jack Dempsey should be forced to defend his crown against either Wills or Tommy Gibbons. The New York commission is taking the right stand in trying to force the bout.



Jimmy Gardner, 175 West Madison street, boxing instructor—Tommy Gibbons is entitled to another shot at the championship on account of the wonderful showing he made against Champion Dempsey at Shelby. If the New York commission has the power, it should force Dempsey to meet Gibbons first and then take on Wills in case the champ should win over Gibbons.

Danny Goodman, 908 Eastwood avenue, boxing instructor—In my opinion, the New York boxing commission should force the champion, Jack Dempsey, to box Harry Wills. Dempsey has fought all of the challengers but Wills. He should give the colored champion a chance at the world's title. Following his bout with Wills, Dempsey should give Tommy Gibbons another chance.

FEVER PREVENTS NURMI'S RUNNING

Hartford, Conn., March 14.—Paavo Nurmi, scheduled to feature a benefit track meet here tonight, failed to appear. His manager, Hugo Quist, announced on his arrival Nurmi had been suddenly stricken with a fever. Willis Ritola ran a 1,500 meter against state college athletes, winning easily in 4:2 2-5.

Ritola also defeated a Yale relay quartet at 2,000 meters by nearly thirty yards, in 8:25. Ritola appeared in two races in order to make up for the absence of Nurmi.

DEMPSEY SURE TO FIGHT THIS YEAR--KEARNS

Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will defend his title at least once this year and he will engage in one or two no decision contests in California this summer.

This was the positive statement made yesterday by Manager Jack Kearns who stopped off in Chicago for a few hours on his way to New York City, where he hopes to close for a championship bout with either Harry Wills or Tom Gibbons. Kearns will also appear as a witness for Tex Rickard who is on trial in Trenton, N. J., for transporting pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

Dempsey's opponent in the championship encounter will be chosen by the promoters, the men who must put up the coin to get the champion in the ring. Kearns stated emphatically he will not listen to the dictates of the New York Boxing commission which has insisted that Jack must defend his title against Wills in his first decision contest.

West Wants Gibbons Bout.

According to Kearns, the promoters do not want Wills. The champion's manager has received ten offers for a Dempsey-Gibbons match to one for a decision bout with Wills. If the selection was left to Kearns, Jack asserted he would name Gibbons without hesitation, because he believes the St. Paul heavyweight is the logical contender.

Dempsey will be ready to defend his title about Labor day, according to his manager, who is anxious to have him engage in one or two no-decision fights before he steps into the roped arena in the defense of his title. Capt. Bob Roper has made some good fights in the Golden state, according to Kearns, and a twelve round no-decision bout with Dempsey would draw at least half a million dollar gate, Kearns stated. The same is true of a match with Jack Renault, the Canadian heavyweight champion.

Kearns and Eddie Kane, the latter manager of Tom Gibbons, held a lengthy conference relative to a twelve round no decision contest between Dempsey and Gibbons in California. Kane turned a deaf ear to a no decision contest and stated Gibbons is out after the title, and if the pair are matched, it must be to a decision.

"Dempsey will be ready the latter part of the summer to defend his title," Kearns said in the presence of many of the champion's admirers at the Hotel Morrison. "He needs one or two fights to be at his best and I will send him against either Roper or Renault this summer on the coast.

Balks at Camish Rule.

"We accepted a challenge from Wills three years ago and if the New York boxing commission will look back through its records it will find our challenge on file. The commission, however, is not going to tell us who we shall fight. That is up to the promoters who put up the money. I will fight Wills for the commission if this body pays me the price.

Kearns took advantage of the opportunity to deny he has any interests in the Henderson Bowl in Brooklyn. He asserted Dan McKetrick, the promoter, has done both Kearns and Dempsey some favors in the past, and if all things are equal in the bidding line, he would prefer to give the match to McKetrick.

Floyd Fitzsimmons, the Michigan City promoter, was on hand to feel out Kearns regarding a Firpo-Dempsey match in the sky blue arena. The ex champion's manager asserted Fitz, or any other promoter, will have to put up $250,000 as an insurance they can stage the match before any articles will be signed. If the bout cannot take place, Kearns will demand the $250,000. If the proposed bout takes place, Kearns is willing to permit Dempsey to fight on a percentage basis.

Kearns, who is also interested in Joe Benjamin, the coast lightweight, will bring his fighter east this summer for a proposed match with Sammy Mandell, the Rockford lightweight who claims the world's 135 pound title. Jack wants to pit Benjamin against Mandell in either Michigan City or Aurora. In fact, Jim Mullen, the Aurora promoter, will use Benjamin in June, while Promoter Fitzsimmons wants to stage a Benjamin-Mandell match on July 4.

INTRAMURAL ATHLETICS.

CRITICS of competitive intercollegiate sports cite as one of their principal arguments that too much attention is centered on the varsity representatives—who, of necessity, are limited in numbers—and that the great mass of students participate only as spectators.

Such statements do not stand up before facts. They are becoming weaker each year through the efforts of physical education departments to enlist all students in some branch of athletics.

In combating this argument, John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Big Ten, secured figures from the conference universities for 1924. Of the 51,008 male students enrolled, approximately 36,765, or 72 per cent, were reached by the physical education departments. Figures for this college year are not yet available, but are expected to show an increase of participation.

There may be danger in stressing too highly college sports. That danger is minimized when the huge gate receipts are used largely to support less popular and nonself-sustaining branches, and to encourage intramural pastimes.

The Wake always has thought that varsity teams furnished a stimulus to students not members of those teams to take part in athletics and that the interest engendered by intercollegiate rivalry contributed to the general cause of physical education. These conclusions, of course, presuppose sane and intelligent supervision, which we now find at most colleges.

Athletes Who Have "Made Good."

Lee Maxwell was quarter back of the University of Chicago football eleven in 1901. He was crowded out of the regular lineup in 1902 by the advent of Walter Eckersall, one of the greatest stars of all time. Maxwell probaby was better than most conference quarters of that day, but gamely accepted fate in his senior year as understudy to Eckie, and earned lasting memory on the Midway for his loyalty. He is now president of the Crowell Publishing company after a brilliant record in the advertising field. He keeps up his athletics by registering some pretty low golf scores. Dick J.

MILSTEAD AND WESTNEDGE OFF CUBS' PAY ROLL

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—Manager Killefer of the Chicago Cubs announced today George Milstead would not go back to Catalina Island Monday. The young left hander will tarry here with the Angels in part payment for the service of Charlie Root.

Joe Westnege is on a train flitting eastward and when he reaches his home in Charlotte, N. C., he probably will learn he no longer is a Cub. It is understood Westnege will be given his unconditional release.

After a conference with Nick Donovich, the only Cubs holdout, President Veeck said the local lad still remained out of the fold. Donovich appeared to be demanding too much money and President Veeck announced he would not raise the ante offered in the contract which Nick has spurned.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Shreveport, La., March 14.—[Special.]—Eddie Collins and eighteen other White Sox players won the first game of the season today from the Shreveport Gassers, 8 to 1. It was a sort of experimental game because Boss Eddie wanted to see all his men in action. Nearly everybody, except a lot of pitchers, had a part in the contest and both at bat and in the field they looked good.

They poled eleven blows off the Gassers' pitchers while the Chicago hurlers held the home team to two blows. Young Kenneth Ash, Sergt. George Connally, and Joubert Davenport did the pitching. One blow was made off Ash and one off Davenport, while the sargeant set the boys down in his three innings with nary a hit.

Gassers Score First.

The lone tally scored by the Gassers came in the first inning and caused quite an uproar of joy in the grand stand. It was a liner to center by Manager Luderus and followed a base on balls and an infield out, so it drove home a man from second. The other swat was made in the ninth by Nalleway, a Chicago youngster who is with the Gassers.

Errors by McDonald, the Gassers' third baseman, helped the Sox to pile up four runs in the second inning, but the other tallies were driven in by clean hitting. Two errors were charged to the Sox, both by Ike Davis, one being a boot and the other a wild throw to first base.

Butler Best at Short.

Boss Collins did a lot of experimenting with his infielders with the idea of eventually picking a regular shortstop. He started the game with Little McClellan at short and after three rounds put Butler on the job and moved Little Mack to second. Later he put Davis at second and excused Little Mack, and then for the final two rounds he had Davis at short and Butler on second. The work of Butler, both at short and at second, was perfect from start to finish, and in the seventh inning he slammed a beautiful single to left field. He was a pretty swell looking ball player all the way and it begins to look more and more as if he may be the man on the job when the season opens.

Young Mr. Harris was given a chance in the outfield, relieving Bib Falk after the latter had performed four innings and poled a two bagger his first time at bat. Young Harris walked once and singled once in his two times at bat, but he had no chances in the outfield.

Mostil Takes Glory.

Archdeacon and Mostil did the center fielding, the former retiring after three innings. Mostil turned the sensational play of the game in the sixth inning when he captured a long drive to right center by Joe Rabbit.

HARRY KIPKE GETS POST AS ASSISTANT MICHIGAN GRID COACH

MIAMI RACE COUP, BARED HERE, NETTED GAMBLERS $750,000

NEW YORK, March 14.—[Special.]—A checkup in sporting circles reveals the nation-wide coup made by a clique of gamblers on the seventh race at Miami last Thursday was even larger than at first reported in Chicago dispatches. The cleverly worked scheme is now held to have netted the gamblers at least $750,000, of which $300,000 came from New York and $200,000 from Chicago.

Betting markets in all large eastern cities were swamped with place bets on Dellahm and Firmament, which ran one-two in the four horse race, after the gamblers agents in Miami had loaded the pari-mutuel machines there with "come on" money in the form of place bets on the other two horses, thus automatically boosting the place prices on Dellahm and Firmament from a normal 1 to 2 for place to $2.20 to 1 and $2.40 to 1, respectively. Probably not more than $10,000 to $25,000 was spent in loading the pari-mutuels.

The scheme has been worked before, but never in anything like the magnitude of the Miami coup.

"FATHER OF FOOTBALL" DIES

Coaches, officials, and sports fans throughout the country mourn the sudden death yesterday of Walter Camp at New York. While his chief interest was in the gridiron game, he was a sports critic of all amateur athletics and famed for his just, if stern, criticisms. His selection of all-American football teams was an annual event looked forward to by coaches, players, and followers of the sport.

WALTER CAMP, DEAN OF FOOTBALL, DIES IN N.Y.

he was accorded the unusual recognition of a seat in the university council.

Since 1889 a feature of each football season has been Mr. Camp's selection of all-American football teams.

While he was more interested in football than any other sport, Mr. Camp was an all round athlete at Yale. In his freshman year he was captain of the class baseball nine as well as the football team, and played four years on the varsity baseball team. He was captain of the varsity eleven in his senior year and after graduation from college as a student in the medical school was chosen baseball captain, but declined the honor, as he did not approve of graduate captaincies. For a time he rowed with his class crew, and with H. W. Slocum, represented Yale in the first intercollegiate tennis tournament. In Yale games he won the high hurdles event and second place in the quarter mile run.

Mr. Camp was one of the greatest backfield players, in the opinion of those who have followed football at Yale for a third of a century. He gained unusual prominence in one of the Harvard games by his skill in running through a broken field.

Head of Clock Firm.

Mr. Camp was born at New Haven, Conn., April 17, 1859. He was graduated from Yale in 1880, and entered the medical school, but resigned after two years to enter business with a clock concern in New York. After a year he went to the New Haven Clock company. He was made treasurer and general manager of the concern in 1902, and a year later became president and treasurer. After several years he relinquished these positions to become chairman of the board.

Mr. Camp had written extensively on football and other sports, as well as on bridge, of which he was an expert player. He was the author of Camp's Daily Dozen, a series of setting-up exercises, through which he is said to have started more persons taking regular daily exercise than any other individual.

Wartime Air Physical Chief.

During the training period of American troops for service in the world war Mr. Camp acted as physical director for the air service and also aided the navy as director of athletics at naval training camps.

In 1883 Mr. Camp married Alice Graham Bumner. They had two children, Walter Jr. and Mrs. F. T. Hobson of New Haven.

RUTH IN BETTER SHAPE NOW THAN IN WORLD SERIES

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 14.—[Special.]—For the first time since he chipped the bone of his finger, a week ago, Babe Ruth had his bat in his hands today. When the vets stepped to the plate for hitting practice the Bambino was in the front rank and took his regular turn in swinging against the curves and fast ones of several rookies. Later in the session Ruth fielded a bit around first base and finished up with a one lap jog around the field.

The Babe is hardly what you would call in the pink of condition, but he played through four of the five games of one world's series in much worse shape than he is in today. If it came down to a case of necessity, he could play a game tomorrow. In fact, he may be in the Yankee lineup when the Braves are tackled for the second time here Monday.

CANNEFAX AND HALL DIVIDE 3 CUSHION TILTS

Bob Cannefax and Allen Hall divided two games in the national three cushion league played at Mussey's yesterday. Cannefax took the afternoon game, 50 to 35, in sixty innings, while Hall got revenge at night, 50 to 35, in fifty-six innings. Cannefax had a high run of 5 in both games, while Hall had a top run of 4 in the afternoon and 6 at night.

SPORTS WORLD LAUDS WALTER CAMP AS IT MOURNS HIS DEATH

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

NEWS of Walter Camp's death reached Chicago yesterday while the faculty committee of the western conference was in session at the Auditorium hotel, and the athletic directors of the Big Ten had just completed an informal meeting at which a general discussion of athletics in the association took place.

The sad news put a damper on the proceedings, and these athletic men, most of whom have known Camp for years, paid him lasting tributes. All agreed he had done more for American intercollegiate football than any other man in America, while his influence in other lines of amateur athletic endeavor has been lasting.

Camp grew up with American intercollegiate football. He championed its cause whenever the game was in danger and helped to tide it over some precarious periods.

Camp's all-American teams were an established institution. They were looked forward to with the keenest kind of interest by players, coaches, and others closely identified with the game. Camp was a stern critic, but his criticisms were always for the best. He knew the game. He knew how to play it when at Yale and he knew how to write about it.

ROCKNE LAUDS CAMP.

South Bend, Ind., March 14.—[Special.]—Knute K. Rockne, famous football coach and director of athletes at Notre Dame, in commenting on the death of Walter Camp today said: "The message stuns me. His loss to the sporting world will be irreparable. He was not only a leading figure in football, but in all college sports and in physical education as well. Camp was a severe critic, but he has, perhaps, done more for college football in inspiring interest in the game and supporting its spread all over the country than any other man may ever do."

Jones Mourns Loss.

New Haven, Conn., March 14.—T. A. D. Jones, head coach of the Yale football team, said: "Mr. Camp stood always for the highest ideals in sport. To us at Yale he was an inspiration, and that was the feeling, I am sure, of all who came in contact with him. I am unable, in words, to measure the loss which has come to us and to college sport."

"Football Loses Father."—Yost.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 14.—"Football has lost its father," said Coach Fielding H. Yost of the University of Michigan, commenting on the death of Walter Camp.

"He gave football its high place in amateur athletics. He wrote its rules. He taught its uses in raising the spirit and morale of college men. He made it a dominant factor in American youth. All of us interested in developing strong, virile young manhood will miss the influence he exercised so long and effectively throughout the entire realm of sports."

WINTER BOOKS START SLOWLY; PLAYERS WARY

NEW YORK ALSO SHY

NEW YORK, March 15.—[Special.]—Few bets have been reported here in the Kentucky Derby winter books. Big operators not ready to take bets, they say, and the few players willing to gamble are afraid the bookies will run out on them. Most of New York's layers are now at the southern tracks and the lack of action here on the Derby is claimed by many to be due to their absence from the city. Most of them are due back at the end of another week and Derby betting may pick up then.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Winter book operators on the Kentucky Derby are slow getting into action in the Chicago territory.

With the exception of a half dozen smaller books, any one of which is likely to go out of business and not pay off if it loses as much as a few thousand dollars, there is nothing doing here in "speculations on futures" in the blue ribbon turf event.

A few of the big operators who have paid off in other years say they will be quoting odds soon, but admit they are waiting for the "early line" on odds from New York. They assert New York's big operators have not announced their prices, and until they do, no wagers will be accepted here.

Welshing May Change System.

Wholesale welshing of books here in the last few years when horses, heavily played in the winter books, have won the Derby may cause a somewhat different system to be adopted by the players this year.

Most every one who takes an occasional "flyer" on the horses nowadays has his own private bookmaker or betting commissioner hidden away in some busy office building or private residence.

These fellows pay off on their daily run of betting business and a number of them in Chicago, it is said, will accept wagers on the Derby this year at the prevailing Chicago and New York winter book prices. The people on the outside who seldom bet on the horses and have no connections such as these may find it hard to indulge in the pastime.

Present Odds Way Off.

Whether these fellows can pay off if there should be a plunge on the horse that happens to win the Derby is another question. Most of them are shrewd enough to dodge getting ruined in the daily play, and they may be able to do it on the Derby. It will mean a scattering of the bets in many different cities, however, and that there will be welshing up and down the line, possibly at many points, seems a certainty.

The few winter book quotations appearing in Chicago have for the most part come in from other cities. The odds in many instances are ridiculous. Some of the first ones trickling in from Louisville and Cincinnati had Quatrain as the favorite at 7 to 1.

It wasn't so long ago Edward R. Bradley would lay 5 to 1 during the first month of winter book play that the horse you picked to win the Derby would not start. And he would let you pick every horse in the race and still have a book with a percentage almost strong enough to wipe out the United States treasury.

Winter Books Not So Good.

Some of the big Chicago operators who declared yesterday they would be accepting winter book wagers soon said they probably would hold Quatrain as favorite at 12 or 15 to 1 on the opening prices. Stimulus and Master Charlie will be next in line, they said, at 20 to 1, with Lee O. Colner, American Flag, Captain Hal, By Hisself, Kentucky Cardinal, and Candy Kid next in line at 25 to 1.

The prices, they said, would range from 12 or 15 to 1 up to 1,000 to 1.

Winter book betting seems to be as perilous as ever, however, and the safest way not to get stung is to not bet in the winter books. If you must make a wager on the Derby, send it along by a friend to be wagered through the mutuel machines at the track. The odds you get may be as good or better than the winter books offer.

COLLEGE GYM MEETS.

Murphy, Chicago Racing Manager, to Arrive Today

Joseph A. Murphy, general manager of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, will arrive in Chicago tonight to take charge of the preliminary arrangements leading up to the Chicago racing season opening at the Hawthorne track, July 3.

The head of the local turf body comes from New Orleans, where he served as presiding steward at the long winter meeting at the Fair Grounds. He has mapped out an ambitious program for Chicago this year, one which calls for a purse distribution in fifty-eight days of nearly $500,000, the two richest races being the Chicago Derby and Chicago Special, each with an added value of $20,000.

Crack Stables Coming.

One of the first jobs he will tackle, Resident Manager Charley Essig announced, will be the allotment of stable room to the several hundred owners who have applied for reservations. These include the higher class racing stables from all the turf centers, Kentucky in particular having made plans to move into Chicago with practically all its crack stables campaigned during the spring at Churchill Downs and Latonia.

The Chicago stakes have been made attractive enough to attract the best horses in training. Essig pointed out there will not only be a heavy arrival of horses from Kentucky but from Maryland, New York and the Pacific coast as well. It is expected horses will begin arriving from the winter tracks as early as April 1.

Send Horses from South.

Racing at Miami ended yesterday, the season closes at New Orleans Tuesday and at Havana, Cuba, next Saturday, and a number of owners from these centers will come direct to Chicago according to present plans.

It was also announced by Mr. Essig the two best jockeys at the Havana track will see service at Hawthorne. Lot Neal, the leading rider there, will come to Hawthorne to do the bulk of the riding for the extensive string his father, Holt Neal of Benton, Ill., campaigns. The elder Neal recently refused $15,000 for the boy's contract.

Loyd Geving, another good rider from Cuba, will be here with the Harned Brothers & Jones establishment of Kentucky, the contract on his services having been bought by these turfmen a short time ago for $5,000.

JACKSON CLIMBS IN THREE CUSHION RACE

Because of winning thirteen of his last sixteen games, Clarence Jackson of Detroit takes the spotlight on the road during the next six days in the title race of the National Three Cushion Billiard league. By taking four straight from Charles Ellis at Pittsburgh this week, Jackson climbed to fourth place with a record of 33 won and 21 lost.

Holding third place by a narrow margin with 47 games won and 29 lost, Johnny Layton of Minneapolis goes on the road again. He tackles Tiff Denton at Kansas City on Monday and Tuesday if the former champion has recovered from the illness which caused postponement of his games with Otto Reiselt this week. He visits Allen Hall at Chicago the middle of the week, and concludes with Gus Copulos at Detroit on Friday and Saturday. The latter will be a test for the league leader, who has won 54 and lost 16.

Augie to Travel.

Kleckhefer goes on the road also, opening with Copulos at Detroit, spending Wednesday and Thursday with Ellis at Pittsburgh and concluding with Harry Wakefield at Cleveland.

Interest in the title race of the National Championship Pocket Billiard league during the next six days centers on the advance on third place being made by Arthur Woods of Syracuse. Andrew St. Jean of Minneapolis holds the post with 58 games won and 44 lost, while Woods is coming up with 45 won and 43 lost, with a good number of games yet to play.

Taberski Boosts Lead.

Frank Taberski, former champion, has won 68 games and lost 20, against 44 won and 24 lost for Greenleaf. Unless Greenleaf goes through the remainder of the schedule practically without a loss, Taberski is under the wire. The New Yorker stretched his world's record for consecutive victories to 29 when he opened a series with Charles Seaback at Boston. Standing:

BOOTERS PLAY SEMI-FINAL TILT FOR CUP TODAY

Featured by the second replay in the western semi-finals of national cup competition between Harvey and the Canadian club, today's soccer program bulges with attractive contests.

The Harvey-Canadian game will be played to a finish, as the winner is scheduled to meet the Cleveland Thistles, eastern champion, for the national title here a week from today. These teams already have met twice without settling superiority. Both games ended in tie scores. 16 STAR 3 YEAR OLDS WILL FACE BARRIER IN TIJUANA DERBY TODAY

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 14.—Sixteen of the best 3 year old runners now in training here are listed in the overnight entries for the $5,000 Tijuana Derby at a mile and an eighth, to be run at the Tijuana track tomorrow. Racegoers have flocked here from all parts of the west coast and expect to see a thrilling struggle.

This year's field is by far the most pretentious Derby field Tijuana ever offered, as entries have come from New York, Maryland, and Kentucky to compete with the best of the youngsters that California has to offer. Most prominent of the lot, perhaps, is Hedge Fence, handsome Whiskbroom colt, which the Greentree stable sent from New York. He will be ridden by Jockey McAtee, who has arrived here to ride in the Derby and the Coffroth handicap, to be run March 29. The horses entered, weights, riders, and probable odds follow:

Philadelphia, Pa., March 14.—George Howard Atherton, 50, former Yale golf and tennis star, died today. He had undergone an operation ten days ago.

An Unusual Opportunity

For a Young Man

To secure a half interest in a going business now on a paying basis for $10,000.00 is offered by a prominent Milwaukee Automobile Distributor, representing one of the oldest and best financed automobile factories in America, with a brilliant future and reasonable assurance of profits.

Every opportunity to make a thorough investigation will be given.

Address A L 375, Tribune

A Report to Mr. Eugene V. R. Thayer, Mr. Charles M. Schwab, and the Directors of The Stutz Motor Car Company of America, Inc.

ON Feb. 10, 1925, you asked me to visit the Stutz plant in Indianapolis and make a thorough survey of the product and facilities for production and distribution, with a view to recommending any changes or improvements for the general betterment of the business.

This survey took into consideration the fact that you had received some time previous the resignation of your president and general manager, who desired to devote his entire time to other business interests.

I began asking questions and was astonished to find that the motoring public did not know about the new Stutz SIX—many people thought the factory was still producing a four cylinder car and knew nothing about the many refinements in design and construction or the added comfort, convenience, ease of riding and driving of the present six cylinder car on which your production is concentrated.

On February 11th, I entered the doors of the Stutz factory in Indianapolis for the first time in all the years I have been identified with the automobile industry. And what I discovered amazed me to say the least. Here was one of the nicest laid-out, cleanest and best equipped plants in the industry. Back of it was an unequaled financial record—It did not owe a dollar to bank or trade creditors, always had discounted every bill, had money in the bank.

Then I looked into the product and began studying the proposition from the viewpoint of the Stutz buyer and owner. And here I ran into the greatest records of automobile worth I have ever been privileged to examine.

In 1911, this company started production after the record performance of the first Stutz cars in the world's greatest racing events. That experience of the race track was evidently the basis for building cars better than any other factory could or would. For I found more than four out of every five cars built since the factory started were still in service.

Not only that—I found from examining the factory parts records that Stutz owners were operating their cars AT ONE-THIRD THE ESTABLISHED COST FOR LIKE CARS ON AVERAGE FACTORY REPLACEMENTS!

Here, I believe, are two evidences of one of the best built cars ever made or driven—longer life at less replacement costs.

I began wiring Stutz owners for records of performance. I have a stack of telegrams before me as I write this report. I am tempted to quote them all as proof of the assertion that—

If the motoring public only knew what a Stutz car would do—how long it would keep on doing it—how truly economical that satisfying service really was over a period of years—

Even your entire factory with its 400,000 square feet of modern equipment could not make these cars—with the care they are made now—fast enough to supply them.

This report is written for you—not for the public. But I believe your greatest problem is to advise your own organization and the general public of just the things I found out in my survey of your plant and its product and its performance.

An Added Note to You

SINCE submitting the above report, two things have resulted, I have been elected as president and director of the Stutz Motor Car Company, Inc., and have been given permission to publish this report in whole. I trust you as one of the many interested in the development of the motor car will feel free to write to me, if I can be of help to you.

TRIBUNE NAMES ALL-CONFERENCE BASKET STARS

BY FRED YOUNG.

[Big Ten Official.]

Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.

Selection of the 1925 all Big Ten basketball team is the most difficult task of the last decade because of the galaxy of brilliant performers in the western conference the past season. In many cases only a fine line separates the players selected for the first, second, and third teams, so evenly matched are the players, while many stellar performers have had to be overlooked entirely, due to the fact that there are not enough positions to go around.

The writer in selecting the 1925 honor roll did not include such sterling performers as Spradling of Purdue, Beckner and Winston of Indiana, and others almost as flashy, because these men did not get into harness until the second semester and were in only a part of their team's schedule. It is believed to be only fair to concede the edge to the men who participated in the whole season's play. Spradling, Winston, and Beckner are all stars of the first rank and should be good enough to win place in 1926 if they are able to maintain the remarkable pace they have traveled during the second lap of the 1925 campaign.

And for the same reason other top notch performers, such as the speedy Harrison Barnes of Chicago, all-conference choice in 1923 and '24, who was sick the greater part of the last season; Capt. Johnny Maurer of Illinois, who was troubled with injuries most of the season; Capt. William Yeo of Chicago, who was nursing a football injury all year, and others are left off this year's selections.

Three Wonder Forwards.

First grade forwards particularly were numerous this winter, but most of the coaches and critics rate Johnny Miner of Ohio State, Harlan Logan of Indiana, and George Haggarty of Michigan the most valuable of the lot. There is little to choose between these three, as they are all scoring machines of the most dangerous type, but because Miner and Logan played such an important part in carrying their teams to the top of the conference and because both boys came through in their big games of the year the Buckeye and Hoosier are ranked ahead of the Wolverine by most of the coaches and officials.

This does not mean, however, that Haggarty is one iota less a star, and it is regretted by the writer there are not three places to be filled. Had Haggarty not been injured in mid-season the Wolverine undoubtedly would have won a post this year, as he is one of the fleetest men in the Big Ten and played several remarkable games for Michigan. He will go down into history as one of Michigan's best forwards.

Johnny Miner of Ohio State probably is the most accurate shooter in the game today, and considering that he was a marked man all year his record of more than 50 baskets is nothing short of marvelous. Miner was not a player that shot a lot, and he made a remarkable high percentage of his shots at the mesh.

Lauds Strong Defensive Type.

Most of the critics rate Jimmy Laude, former Iowa captain, and Johnny Mauer, this year's Illini leader, the class of the forwards defensively. Laude is not a heavy scorer, but played an important part in the Hawkeyes' floor game, and is a mighty valuable man defensively. The same goes for Mauer and had the Orange and Blue leader been able to play all season the Illini might have made more trouble for the pennant winning Buckeyes.

Black Rasey of Minnesota is another fine forward relegated to the third team only because he was stopped in two or three of his big games. He is a fine floor man and a shooter par excellence.

Russell Daugherity of the Illini gets the sixth place. He is a natural born cager and in another season will rank with the best in the conference, it is believed. Daugherty's timing is marvelous.

Other good forwards are Mel Shaw of Ohio State, one of the best rebound men in the conference and an important factor in the Buckeyes' success; Barneson of Purdue, Baker and White of Northwestern, and Lidberg of Minnesota, who shone brilliantly at times. Ike Karnes of Illinois is another splendid defensive forward.

Cunningham Class of Pivots.

Harold Cunningham, Ohio State's star center, is the best of the centers. He stands 6 feet 2 inches, weighs close to 200 pounds, and is a powerful, driving player who has scored consistently. His boring-in tactics helped pull Coach Olson through many a tight place this season.

Richard Doyle, captain elect of the 1926 Wolverine five, is another fine center, only a shade below Cunningham. He has a lot of spring, and is not only a strong scoring machine, but a topnotch defensive player, having been used in both capacities by Coach Mather to advantage.

For a stronger team, Babe Alyea of Chicago might have been the ranking center of the conference. Alyea's handling of the ball is excellent and he is a demon on long shots. His play at times was undoubtedly affected by the stump of the Maroon quintet. Woolsey of Minnesota and Brooks of Wisconsin were other centers to show flashes of promise.

Capt. Marshall Diebold of Wisconsin is outstanding among the back guards. He is a vastly improved player over 1924 and is one of the greatest defensive men Dr. Meanwell ever has developed. His handling of the ball is almost perfect, and he always can be depended upon to take care of his opponent and considerably more of the defensive burden. The Big Ten has had few superiors to Diebold.

Choice of a floor guard rests between Robbins of Purdue, Sponsler of Indiana, and Haines of Illinois. The Boilermaker has been a far more important factor in the Lafayette team's success than is generally believed. He is a wonderful shooter and has been the man who pulled the Purdue team together in times of stress. His defensive play has been better than a year ago, and he will be sorely missed by Coach Lambert next year. He is given the edge over Sponsler of the Crimson and Haines because it is his final year, and the Hoosier and Illini have another year to win the honor. Sponsler's work on the whole has been just as brilliant.

Haines a Good Player.

Ted Haines is one of the speediest men in the conference and should be a star of the first rank in 1926. Another great floor guard is Beckner of Indiana, who is not considered this year because he did not get into the game until the second semester. Otherwise he might have been selected.

Other sterling guards ar Cherry of Michigan, who played consistently all year; Chrisman of Northwestern, Barwig of Wisconsin, Wellman of Purdue, Cameron and Seiffert of Ohio State, and Dunder of Minnesota. The Gopher was a greatly improved player this winter and was a mighty valuable man to Minnesota.

Cameron, a real leader and fighter, always was a tough obstacle to overcome, and is given much of the credit by Coach Olsen for the Buckeyes' conference championship. Weiss of Chicago, while bothered by a football injury and starting late, showed fine form at times.

BEST QUINT IN BIG TEN

HARLAN LOGAN. INDIANA.

MARSHALL DIEBOLD. WISCONSIN.

JOHN MINER. OHIO STATE. HAROLD CUNNINGHAM. OHIO STATE. WINSTON ROBBINS. PURDUE.

These are the five men selected by The Tribune as the best basketball team in the Big Ten. The forwards, Logan and Miner, were high scorers in the conference race, and showed their class in every game during the season. "Cookie" Cunningham, center on the championship Buckeye quint, was selected for that post on the honor team for his versatile playing and ability to hit the basket as well as get the tipoff and strengthen the guarding. Diebold, although playing on the comparatively weak Badger team, won a place for his consistent performance, and Robbins of the Boilermakers was given the other guard for his strong defense all season.

Columbus, O., March 14.—[Special.]—Staging a whirlwind second half finish, the champion Ohio State basketball team swept Wisconsin off its feet here tonight to a 37 to 23 verdict.

The Badgers displayed plenty of fight throughout the game, but in the second half could not measure up to the Buckeyes. The visitors took the lead at the start and held it a large part of the way until a split second before the gun sounded the end of the first frame, when Miner looped a bucket which made the count 15 to 14 for Ohio State.

By scoring eleven points, Miner of the Buckeyes holds the lead in western conference scoring. Diebold starred at guard for Wisconsin. Lineup:

ANGELS WALLOP CUBS, 13 TO 7, IN SO-CALLED GAME

BY FRANK SMITH.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—Mr. Wrigley's minor league ball team avenged yesterday's defeat at the hands of his major league outfit by taking today's contest, if one wants to label it so, 13 to 7.

For six innings, it was what one might term a real exhibition of the national pastime, but after Dick Morgan was shoved into the picture in the seventh, the well-balanced battle became a rout, with the Angels chasing runs across the plate and the Cubs pursuing balls all over the lot.

Morgan Fails to Fool 'Em.

If Morgan possesses anything in the pitching line he forgot to bring it with him from Wichita Falls, Texas. The local nine took a liking to his slants and pasted them high, low, right and left. Whether Churry, who succeeded Hartnett after the latter had made a couple of masterful errors, was to blame or whether Morgan was unable to get something on the ball, is a question, but there were no interrogation marks about the way the Angels laid their cudgels on the ball. Not one of them even waited for a second pitch, lurching into the first ball that came up, and invariably sending it into safe territory.

They chalked up five runs in that never-to-be-forgotten seventh spasm, and Morgan, under settled conditions, would have been sent to the showers. Finally the Cubs killed off the Angels, but the latter came back in the eighth for two braces of runs and put the ball game on ice.

Angel Hurler Gets 3 Hits.

Mr. Harry Sanders, who is credited with the victory, looked like a very good pitcher during his early entry into the affray. He just naturall jumped into the limelight after he relieved Meyers by knocking the cover off the ball and registering three hits, one of which was a double.

The young man, who hails from Maxlaban, Tex., via the thirty day option route, seemed to have earned himself a permanent berth with the Angels, but spilled all the beans in the ninth by giving four bases on balls. These were mixed with a couple of hits which netted four runs for the Cubs. Sanders tightened up, however, and whiffed Weis, who batted for Morgan.

Again—Do Not Expect Long Trading Allowances on Any Used Car When You Come to Buy a Chrysler

This statement of eight months ago is repeated in justice to Chrysler distributors and dealers, who cannot in fairness be expected to penalize themselves by making long allowances, merely because the Chrysler may have depreciated the value of other cars.

A car may be a very good car indeed and still it will lack the riding, driving, braking, accelerating, power and speed qualities which thrill the owner of a Chrysler Six.

As we said in June of last year, those qualities are so valuable and mean so much in efficiency and economy that you could well afford to discard the used car without compensation for the sake of the amazing activity of performance and the saving the Chrysler will bring you.

Even if another car originally cost you twice as much, the burden you escape when you acquire a Chrysler—the substitution of more agile and satisfying performance and the stoppage of waste—will more than compensate you.

Months ago we said that because of these unusual Chrysler qualities, the Chrysler was invading all markets and especially those of much higher price.

We also said that the enthusiasm of the public over the Chrysler was certain to affect all motor cars and ultimately all motor car design.

The change in (internal) design has not yet come. Until it does, there is no possibility for anyone who wants Chrysler results to make a comparison between the Chrysler and other cars, whether they be used or new.

It is all a question of whether you want the qualities which the Chrysler alone provides.

If you do, then it is perfectly clear that you cannot compare the value of another used car or any other new car with the value of the Chrysler.

Neither higher prices nor lower prices nor long allowances have anything to do with the fact that there is still only one Chrysler and that it delivers results which no other car delivers.

This is no reflection on any good car. It is simply a statement of facts which every Chrysler owner knows.

BIG TEN DEFERS CUTTING DOWN OF 'OUTSIDE' GAMES

Appointment of a committee to determine some mathematical process whereby each football team in the western conference will be compelled to play at least five contests each year with other members of the association was the salient feature of yesterday's meeting of the faculty committee of the western conference at the Auditorium hotel.

This committee was appointed after Prof. James Paige of Minnesota had introduced the motion to bring about a five game schedule with conference teams. At last December's schedule meeting, Coach Bill Spaulding of Minnesota was able to slate only three games with other members of the Big Ten. Iowa and Indiana had similar difficulties.

Act at June Meeting.

Whether such a rule will work out to the satisfaction of all members is problematical. Traditional rivalry exists between some institutions and such contests would have to be abandoned in certain cases. In other cases the supposedly weaker elevens would clash with five of the strong teams, making the season for the defeated elevens unsuccessful and discouraging.

The committee intrusted with the power of devising some method to bring about a satisfactory solution of the problem is composed of Profs. James Paige of Minnesota, G. A. Goodenough of Illinois, and Henry Gale of Chicago. This committee will submit its proposals at the June meeting.

The faculty committee voted to increase the number of persons for football trips from thirty-five to forty. This will include trainers, assistant coaches, and student managers. The number of academic hours for eligibility while taking up a coaching course was reduced from fourteen to twelve, while the new digest of the conference rules was accepted and copies will be run off the presses within the next two weeks and distributed throughout the conference.

Define Griffith's Duties.

A committee composed of Profs. Ralph W. Aigler of Michigan and O. F. Long of Northwestern, Directors George Huff of Illinois, and Nelson Kellogg of Purdue and Maj. John L. Griffith was appointed to determine the status of the duties of the athletic commissioner.

The status of football officials who have been left off the conference list for working in professional football games was referred to the committee on officials with power to act.

It was understood the sentiment of the faculty committee was adverse to enlarging the conference by taking in Nebraska and Michigan Aggies, which applied for membership at the December meeting. Many other minor matters of importance only to the conference were brought up and disposed of.

Prof. J. F. A. Pyre of Wisconsin presided at the session, with Prof. O. F. Long of Northwestern as secretary. Most of the representatives remained for the indoor conference track and field championships in Patten gymnasium last night.

ANGLING FOR THE BIG BOUT

Eddie Kane (left), manager of Tommy Gibbons, and Jack Kearns, who manages Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion, met yesterday at the Morrison hotel and talked of plans for a bout between this pair to be staged on the coast during the latter part of the summer. Kane insisted that the bout be to a decision because of the great showing Gibbons made against the champion in their battle at Shelby, Mont.

KICKOFF IS PUT BACK TO 40 YARD LINE; TEE BARRED

New York, March 14.—Return of the kickoff to the kicker's 40 yard line, a change in the rules invorving blocked kicks behind the line of scrimmage, a new interpretation of the scrimmage line, and the refusal of the rules committee to consider the return of the kicking tee and a change in off-side penalty were the major decisions reached by the intercollegiate football rules committee here today.

In tribute to Walter Camp, noted Yale football expert and critic, who died today, the rule makers adjourned their meeting. They will reconvene later to resume consideration of the numerous rule changes which have been suggested.

Bar on Tee Surprise.

The rule putting the kickoff back to the 40 yard line was expected and, owing to the unanimous indorsement by the Football Coaches' association, it was thought the kicking tee would be restored, but the committee members ruled differently.

The change involving blocked kicks provides if the ball does not cross the line of scrimmage it shall belong to the side recovering the ball. If, however, the kicking side recovers it shall count as another down. Last year if a blocked kick was recovered by the kicker's side it went as a first down. All partly blocked kicks which cross the line of scrimmage will rank just as if the ball had not been blocked.

On offside penalties the committee changed the rule to provide when defensive team is offside it shall be penalized 5 yards but the offensive team shall not receive a first down, as it did formerly. The down shall remain the same.

Doctors Report to Referee.

Another rule, covering the appearance of doctors and trainers on the field during play, provides such aides as shall be required shall report to the referee, just as a player would be required to do without seeking preliminary permission to enter the field. Heretofore a doctor, desiring to attend an injured player, had to attract the attention of an official to get permission to enter the field.

A new interpretation of the scrimmage line provides that instead of an imaginary line on the ground, it shall be a vertical line which shall be considered as the line of scrimmage. This clarifies the question as to players on the line of scrimmage being required to keep their hands on the ground.

Another ruling provides the captain of the team winning the toss may choose to receive or kick in addition to selecting the goal which he will defend.

Clipping Penalty Increasing.

The penalty against clipping was increased, providing for a twenty-five yard setback from the point at which the clipping was done. Heretofore, the captain of the team against which the offense was committed could either take the fifteen yard penalty from the point where the foul was committed or from the point where the ball was last put in play.

The rules against flying tackles and tackling below the knees was stricken out.

Chicago Bowlers Take Lead in A. B. C. Tourney Events

Buffalo, N. Y., March 14.—[Special.]—Domonick Devito of Chicago was by far the outstanding star in today's events of the American Bowling congress tournament. He came through with 702 in his singles and assumed first place in the event.

He did this after a Detroit youngster, Art Reaum, a lad of but one year's experience on the alleys, had knocked off 684 for the top place early in the afternoon.

Chicago did not stop at this, but took first place in the doubles event as a result of a 1,244 by the Fischer brothers, Al and Lee. Devito, who paired with Roy Davis, also came in for a share of the doubles prize money with a 1,159 score. Domonic grabbed the lead in the all-events with a grand nine game total of 1,892. Devito slapped out 581 in his five-man. He came back with 609 in his doubles, and added the big count in his singles.

In reality the work of Art Reaum dragged down the cake for the day, as this boy was shooting his first tournament and likewise his first year of bowling. Detroit again came to the fore when Norman Lund of that city slapped out 680. Phil Wolf and Bill Brennan stepped into the money with their 1,166 in the doubles, and Wolf came back with 606 for a prize count in the singles.

Jimmy Blouin, world's leader in the science of match bowling, was there both in singles and doubles. Paired with Hank Marino, he totaled 1,227 and then showed 643 in the individual event. Leading Chicago scores:

SOUTHERN VOX POP ON BIRD BANDING.

ARE you going to tackle the sport of bird banding this spring? It's great fun and at the same time furnishes as many surprises as any other outdoor game. Just to give you an idea of the interesting experiences that one may enjoy in banding birds we are passing along to you a letter received from "Seminole," a widely known Chicago advertising man who has recently taken up bird banding as a hobby and a study. "Seminole" is now in Alabama and he writes:

"Inasmuch as it was to you I appealed to help me get started in this bird banding game, I thought you and some of your readers would be interested in hearing of my experiences. In the first place, I've thanked you a thousand times for starting me off, as it's been a regular circus. Recently one chipping sparrow has furnished lots of amusement. He is number 35330 and was banded here March 10, 1924. He came back here almost a year later, Feb. 16, 1925. Just to show that he loves us or at least is not afraid of us, he was replated at the traps as follows: February 16 in the trap twice; 17, 18, twice; 19, 20, twice; 21, three times; and once each day from Feb. 24 to March 1. Some repeater, isn't he? It would be interesting to know where this little fellow has been and what he has been since he has been wearing a government tag."

"Seminole" reports that the robins and red winged black birds have checked out for the north country, which is cheering news, as they are due to brighten up our March landscape with song and color. With the arrival of the birds from the southland the bird banders will be a busy bunch trapping and labeling the migrants. Bird fans in the great lakes region who want to get into the banding game should hop to it right now.

The president of the Inland Bird Banding association, W. I. Lyon, 134 Washington street, Waukegan, Ill., will be mighty glad to help you get started if you will write him at the above address.

YALE CONSISTENT EVEN TO LAST

Ithaca, N. Y., March 14.—Yale finished the Intercollegiate Basketball league season without winning a single game by losing tonight to Cornell, 24 to 20. The contest was ragged.

TWO NEW DAILY FEE LINKS WILL MAKE BOW HERE

BY MORROW KRUM.

Two new daily fee courses will make their debut before Chicago's army of tee box tourists this summer. The addition of these two courses raises Chicago's roster to thirty-five places where men and women can enjoy the game without joining a regular club.

The two news additions to the fee course list are Devonshire and Lockmoor. Devonshire — it is called the Devonshire Country club—is located on Dempster street across from the Evanston Country club. The course of 144 acres has been officially dedicated to golf for the next seven years. The backers of the club, Harry and Jacob Paschen, bought the property to subdivide, but have decided to use it for golf. James C. Fee, former Cook county champion, who has been selected as professional at this course, asserts play will start some time between April 15 and May 1.

The Lochmoor club is located at 123d street and Bell road. This club will have eighteen holes, according to C. H. McDermott, and will be ready for use about May 1.

Directors of the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association will hold a meeting at the Hamilton club tomorrow night. This organization is composed of backers of nine fee courses, and the business tomorrow night will be to decide if two public fee owners will be admitted to the association.

Oak Hills sponsors report an entire new set of greens will be ready for play this summer. The eighteen greens have been sown with the best stolom that is said to provide a billiard table top and permit the balls to roll unobstructed. Oak Hills, a daily fee course, is located at 131st street and 75th avenue.

Two trainloads of golfers are to invade Canada in August with the intention of capturing temporarily all the golf links of the northwest as far as the Pacific coast, it was announced yesterday by Harry B. McNeal, who will be in charge.

Chick Evans, formerly national champion; Capt. E. F. Carter, once Irish titleholder, and two famous professionals will make the trip. The golfers are to travel in two trains. The golf army is recruiting from cities around the great lakes. There will be two carloads from Detroit, three from Cleveland, one each from Toledo, Milwaukee and Grand Rapids, several from Chicago, with miscellaneous cars made up from residents of smaller cities.

Fairlawn, a new golf club at 22d street and Wolf road, has arranged to dedicate the course April 4 with an exhibition match. Walter Crowe, Illinois amateur champion, paired with Eldridge Robinson, holder of the western junior title, will meet V. U. Fischer and Walter Crowdus.

A. D. Wiggins and A. C. Jackman will meet in the final round of the indoor championship tournament at the South Shore Country club.

The South Shore Country club will hold its annual St. Patrick's day costume masked ball Tuesday night. The ball will be preceded by a dinner.

Members of the Marquette Park Golf club held an indoor tournament yesterday at the Normal club. In the men's division Paul Drews took the prize for the lowest score with 81 for thirty-six holes. Glenn Forgan, with four aces, received the trophy for that effort. Miss Grace Saunders won the medal play prize with 114, while Miss Lee Fogelson won the ace trophy with four "singles." Drews, paired with Mrs. Donald McClean, won the four ball mixed foursome with a combined score of 200.

Golf will be featured strongly this year by the Woodlawn Business Men's club. Monthly tournaments, with a final championship event, are under consideration.

W. H. Sapp, medalist in the Walsh Bros. trophy tournament at the Tavern club, defeated Capt. W. F. Russell of the Hyde Park police station, 2 and 1, in the first match round. Other matches resulted as follows: Jack Bloom defeated J. Buhl, 3 and 2; H. G. Nealis defeated Carl Rune, 1 up; A. D. Monihan defeated C. Algin, 7 and 6; Ray Anderson defeated Dr. E. O. Schubert, 4 and 3; L. A. Kline defeated C. Wereinus, 1 up; Martin Tauber won by default from T. A. Marsh; O. D. Landis defeated George Tauber, 4 and 2.

The St. Patrick's day party held yesterday by the women's auxiliary of the Acacia Country club at the Hotel Sherman was well attended. The meeting was held to celebrate the approval of the plans for the new clubhouse.

ORMOND BEACH GOLF TITLE TO KENTUCKY MAN

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 14.—N. R. Perkins of Williamsburg, Ky., defeated J. W. Lawrence, long driving Pittsburgh golfer, 5 and 4, in the 36 hole finals of the annual championship Volusia golf tournament here today.

Everett Breckwith, Aurora, Ill., defeated J. R. Gormley, Dedham, Mass., one up in the finals of the beaten eight of the championship sixteen

COBB, STILL DEFYING FATHER TIME, ROUNDS INTO TOP CONDITION

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 14.—Ty Cobb is giving the lie to those baseball prophets who predicted last year would in truth be his last as a regular in the Detroit lineup Cobb has yet to play in 181 games if he beats Hans Wagner's record of playing in 2,785 major league games—a record Cobb has said he does not covet.

The "Georgia Peach" is conditioning himself slowly at the Tigers training camp here. Yesterday he took his place in centerfield in the regulars' lineup in a game against the Yannigans. He hopes to take off 10 pounds to get down to 165 pounds, a weight he regards as his best now. Cobb weighed 155 pounds when he played his first major league game.

GLENNA SHOOTS 79 TO ADD NEW TITLE TO STRING

St. Augustine, Fla., March 14.—[Special.]—Setting a new record for the St. Augustine links with a 79 here today, Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, former national champion, won the first leg on the Mrs. W. R. Kenan cup by defeating Miss Frances Hadfield of Milwaukee, 3 and 2, in the eighteen hole final of the Florida east coast women's championship tournament. Miss Collett incidentally repaid Miss Hadfield for the recent nineteen hole defeat administered at Belleair.

In anticipation of a renewal of the great struggle Miss Collett and Miss Hadfield engaged in at their meeting at Belleair an unusually large gallery was attracted.

The cards:

MISS COLLETT—Out	444	644	443—80
MISS HADFIELD—Out	454	545	444—83
MISS COLLETT—In	454	450	354—79
MISS HADFIELD—In	454	458	554—81

In the final of the lower eight Mrs. H. P. Turnbull of White Marsh Valley defeated Mrs. Stewart Hanley of Oakland Hills, 2 and 1.

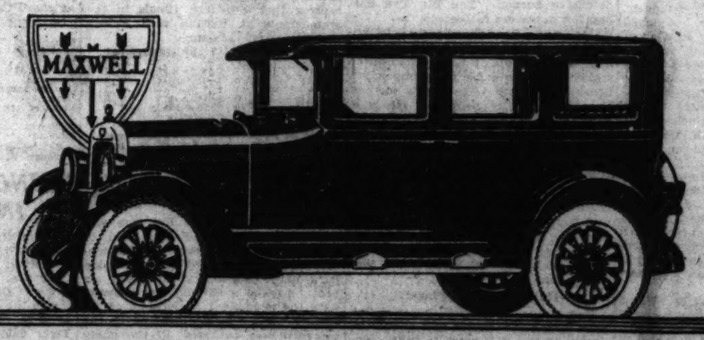
Popularity Like this Means Appreciation of Greater Values



The Standard Four-Door Sedan $1095 f. o. b. Detroit, tax extra

The new good Maxwell has won such hearty approval here and everywhere, its popularity is a matter of comment. There can be no question that the car offers advantages never before found in a four.

There are logical reasons for this advance over conventional results.

First, the determination of Maxwell-Chrysler engineers to develop the four-cylinder principle to its fullest extent.

Next, the marked and recognized advantage in experience and resources of one of the largest and strongest quality manufacturing organizations in the industry.

Furthermore, the new good Maxwell is truly a "manufactured" car. The entire car, almost to the smallest detail, is built in the great Maxwell plants.

Naturally, with all these advantages the new good Maxwell offers higher quality and finer motoring at a surprisingly low cost.

The car's popularity means that the public has discovered this fact. To put the matter briefly, you have only to observe the growing number of new good Maxwells on the road to understand the wide-spread appreciation of Maxwell's higher quality and greater values. We are eager to prove it in a demonstration.

The New Good MAXWELL

PAL MOORE AGAIN IS FLASH OF OLD; SEEKS FLY CROWN

BY FRANK SMITH.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—[Special.]—Pal Moore, Memphis flash, is making a successful comeback. By a comeback we don't mean to convey the idea he is a "hasbeen." The boy who in eleven years of ring encounters never has been knocked out, disappeared from his Chicago haunts last November, slipped quietly into Los Angeles, and went about arranging bouts in an effort to see if he was in good enough shape to resume his campaign as a real contender for the bantamweight title.

When he left Chicago, Moore had been idle for eight months with a bad right hand. He took on several bouts after he lost on a foul to Frankie Genaro in one of those injunction boxing programs held at the Coliseum in Chicago. He never really got over that defeat, if one wants to designate it as such, declaring time and time again that Frankie jumped into the air as he was sending a left hook to the champion's head. It was weeks before he could be convinced that the decision went against him.

Fought Lynch Unprepared.

This defeat, added to the acknowledged licking he received at the hands of Joe Lynch in the Michigan City blue sky arena and the fact that he received a bum check along with the whipping (and the check never has been made good) convinced him that something was wrong and that a long rest was needed.

Since coming to the coast Moore has engaged in four fights and decisively won them all. The bantamweight division, according to Moore, is in such a chaotic state that there would be no real incentive to go after the so-called champion.

Pal is convinced that the flyweight division is just made for him. He says he easily can make 112 pounds for Pancho Villa, who holds the world title, and intends to post $2,500 with the New York boxing commission as an evidence of good faith and of his willingness to step into the ring with the Filipino, who now is in his native land under a year's suspension pasted on him by New York for his alleged runout after a match had been arranged with Frankie Genaro.

Is Credit to Game.

If memory serves right, there is still in the neighborhood of six months' sentence to be served by the brown skinned lad. It is certain that when he returns to the good graces of the New York board he will be back in the U. S. A., where the good coin is posted for all kinds of battles, and by all kinds we don't mean maybe.

Moore has several other bouts in sight on the coast, and expects to return to Chicago in April. After attending to some business affairs there, he plans a trip to New York.

Pal has whipped every bantam champion of his time in no decision bouts. Now he wants a chance at the flyweights, where a verdict is rendered. Moore has been a credit to the game and should be given a crack at something worth while.

DURANT ENTERS 500 MILE AUTO RACE ON MAY 30

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—Cliff Durant, wealthy automobile race driver, is the first owner to enter a car in the Memorial day 500 mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway, it was announced today. He will drive the machine himself. After an unsuccessful try here last year, Durant sold his expensive machine and announced his retirement from the speed game.

DARTMOUTH WINS SWIMMING MEET

Hanover, N. H., March 14.—Dartmouth tonight won the New England Intercollegiate Swimming association meet here by the small margin of three and one-half points. Final scores were: Dartmouth, 28; Brown, 24½; Williams, 22; Wesleyan, 16; and Amherst, 3½.

BOXERS WIND UP WORK FOR E. CHICAGO BOUTS

Billy Wells, the English welterweight under the management of Charley Harvey, and Rem Williams of Detroit, who meet in the windup of George Oswego's boxing show at East Chicago tomorrow night, finished training yesterday by boxing with their sparring partners. Wells boxed five rounds at the Arcade and Williams took on two glove wielders at the Mullen gym for six sessions.

Eddie Long, matchmaker for the club, has arranged a preliminary card which should result in some interesting fights. In the eight round semi-windup, Ollie O'Neil of South Chicago will meet Sammy Llyod of Englewood at 122 pounds. Johny Williams of Salt Lake City and Paul Allen, the University of Illinois 122 pounder, will meet in one of the preliminaries and Danny Kahn and Tom Migdat, local 156 pounders, in the six round opener. Tickets are on sale at the usual places and a regular train will leave the Randolph street terminal of the Illinois Central at 6:35 o'clock tomorrow night.

LEWIS, DRAAK GET TOP PLACE ON MAT CARD

Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who still claims the heavyweight title, and Tommy Draak, the Hollander, have been given the top position in the wrestling show to be staged by Promoters Krone and Cutler in the Coliseum on Tuesday night.

It was the original intention of the promoters to feature the struggle between Mike Romano, the Italian champion, and Joe "Toots" Mondt, the Colorado Cowboy. After weighing all angles of the card and the ability of the four grapplers involved, the promoters decided on Lewis and Draak because of the former's position in the wrestling world.

Mike, Joe Fast Workers.

Romano and Mondt, however, will be given ample time to settle the question of supremacy. The Italian and Cowboy will be given at least one hour in which to determine who shall remain in the division of championship contenders. As both are fast workers and lose no time in going to work, the one hour of actual wrestling time should be sufficient to permit either to win or the public to judge for itself which is the more finished artist.

As Wayne Munn, who also claims the heavyweight championship, and Manager Gabe Kaufmann will be here on Tuesday to consider offers for a return match with Lewis, something definite in the way of the return encounter may be announced from the ring. Billy Sandow, manager of Lewis, already has offered Munn $30,000, win, lose or draw, for a return struggle, while a local syndicate is willing to give Manager Kaufmann $100,000 for Munn's services until June 1. Munn will be at the ringside and will be introduced before the main encounter.

Pesek Strong Favorite.

Lewis has been in Chicago since last Friday and has showed his wares at the Mullen gymnasium. He has been working diligently on the headlock, and stated he will make short work of Draak, who claims he will put a dint in the so-called "trust" by winning from Lewis in straight falls. Draak arrived in Chicago yesterday and worked at the Arcade in the afternoon.

John Pesek of Omaha, a strong favorite with local mat fans and who is considered the greatest wrestler in the world of his poundage, will take holds with Joe Komar, a Lithuanian who scales 240 pounds. Pesek tips the beam at 185 pounds, but is so fast and clever he is expected to take his opponent at such a fast clip that he will soon tire and fall easy prey to the Omaha tiger man. Lewis, Pesek and Romano will work at Mullen's today.

EXTRA-LEGAL GUN TOTIN' GROUPS AROUSE PROTEST

Olson to Seek Repeal of Horsethief Law.

The horse thief statute:

"Any number of citizens, not less than ten (10), are hereby authorized to form themselves into a corporation for the purpose of detecting and apprehending horse thieves, incendiaries, and all other criminals against the state of Illinois."

This is the law which Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court is seeking to have repealed because of the abuses that have gradually developed under it.

It was passed in 1887, when the horse thief was the arch criminal of the west, and was amended in 1921 to include all other criminals.

Cause of Much Trouble.

"Under this statute numerous evils and dangers have arisen," said the chief justice yesterday. "We have had a good deal of trouble in our courts with morons and unfit men carrying revolvers and wearing the badge of some private organization.

"My attention was called recently to a scheme to permit members of one of these organizations to sell bonds. They wanted the court to agree to accept these bonds.

"There is too much extra legal government, too many organizations that are prying into the affairs of citizens, and taking upon themselves the enforcement of the law and the criticism of police and judges.

"Take the so-called Better Government association. E. J. Davis organized that after the government took over the control of the liquor regulation business. The next step was to organize a league to interfere in things. Our citizens are being annoyed too much. Too many arrests. This is the land of liberty. We need to uphold our courts more instead of trying to break them down.

"These constabulary organizations sell memberships and give out badges and stars to their members. It is arranged for them to get guns. The result is that some half-wit may be walking around with a gun, prying into other people's affairs.

Plan Bill for Its Repeal.

"The need for the horse thief law has long since passed. It was amended and broadened at some moment when the legislature was napping and I propose to draw a bill for its repeal and send it to Springfield."

Under this law the department of constabulary has been established in Illinois. Its Chicago branch, with headquarters at 104 West Monroe street, has 7,000 members, and there are said to be 21,000 more members scattered through the state. The membership fee is $27.50 and dues are $7 a year.

The superintendent, William E. Timms, and his office force draw salaries. There are eleven divisions in Chicago, and others in Evanston, Oak Park, Franklin Park, Sycamore, Ottawa, East St. Louis, Herrin, Rockford, Aurora, and other cities.

The recruiting department states in its advertisement:

"Although previous experience in investigating crime and its perpetrators greatly assists the applicant in securing membership, it is not an essential."

Members are warned not to wear their stars where every one can see them, and not make a habit of showing their guns.

Orders have just been issued for the organizing of pistol teams in all divisions and for an inter-division shooting match.

"The department of constabulary is a volunteer organization composed of the best citizens who are banded together for one purpose—better enforcement of the law," is the official statement.

REV. VON OGDEN VOGT BEGINS DUTIES TODAY IN HIS NEW PULPIT

REV. VON OGDEN VOGT.

The Rev. Von Ogden Vogt, for the last seven years pastor of the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, will begin today the pastorate of the First Unitarian church, 57th street and Woodlawn avenue. Tuesday evening he will be given a public reception at the church. The Rev. Mr. Vogt was for five years general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor before entering the pastorate. He is a graduate of the Hyde Park High school, Beloit college, Yale university and Yale divinity school, and has traveled extensively abroad and at home.

The First Unitarian church is one of the oldest churches of any denomination in Chicago, dating from 1836. Robert Laird Collier was one of its famous pastors. Congressman Morton D. Hull is at present chairman of its board. The Unitarian theological seminary, now at Meadville, Pa., has purchased lots adjoining First church and expects to move here so as to be in affiliation with the University of Chicago. A part of the duties of the new pastor will be the care of students attending the university.

M'ADOO IN CITY, SILENT ON ALL TOPICS POLITICAL

William Gibbs McAdoo, self styled private in the ranks of Democracy, paid Chicago a fleeting visit yesterday enroute from New York to Los Angeles. He was emphatic in saying that he had nothing to say about politics. Pittsburgh was placed fourth on the list with building permit valuation of $1,900,000, and Detroit was given fifth place with a total increase permit valuation of $1,506,000. Los Angeles hit the toboggan on construction, the permits dropping $5,200,000 for the first two months of the year.

Performance

For long sustained speed—50, 55, 60, or more miles per hour—you must have a motor of such rigidity that it will not distort under the intense heat developed or the severe stresses imposed.

Granted that the cylinder block and crank case are scientifically designed and finely built, you then must have a crankshaft that cannot deflect an iota, and a lubricating system that guarantees a perfect film of oil all the time.

In the (new series) Rickenbacker Six, there is an extra heavy crankshaft and it is supported in seven big bearings.

Crankshaft is drilled throughout, and oil is forced by powerful pump to each individual bearing under constant pressure; pressure varies according to the needs—in other words, according to the speed at which you are driving.

Only with such a motor—only with such perfect lubrication—was it possible for "Cannon Ball" Baker to drive from Coast to Coast, 3106.5 miles in 71 hours 33 minutes—actual driving time.

At times he drove 72 miles per hour. At one stage he drove 45 miles per hour, for mile after mile, in second gear!

Try that with any ordinary car!

After ten miles you will agree that this Rickenbacker Six must be a phenomenal automobile.

Drive this Rickenbacker yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

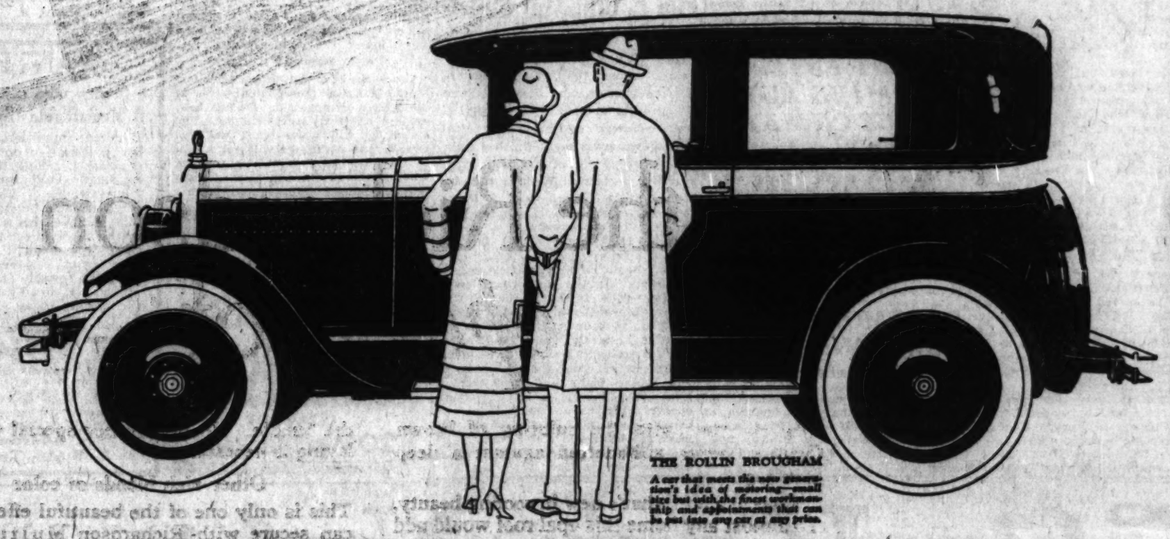
A · CAR · WORTHY · OF · ITS · NAME



THE ROLLIN BROUGHAM

A car that meets the new economy idea's ideas of motoring—small size but with the finest workmanship and appointments that can be put into any car at any price.

A certain class of people have been asking for this car for the last ten years

MORE and more every year have asked it. "Give us a fine small car," they said. "We want a car with style, with all the quality of the good big cars, but we don't want a family chariot."

This is the class of people for whom the Rollin car is made. People who have pride in what they own. Women who dress smartly, who have tasteful homes, who like niceties of environment. Men who prefer good tailors, hand-sewn shoes, pedigreed dogs.

Young people mostly and people who stay young.

Perhaps this is a new generation of motor-car buyers. A generation that will not be content with the older motor-car fashions and standards.

At any rate, they have welcomed the Rollin with open arms. For some it is a second car for the city and suburban driving, which is ninety-nine one-hundredths of their motoring, while the "big car" stands in the garage. But for the great majority of owners, the Rollin answers every purpose.

It is swift and luxurious and untiring on even the longest trips. It handles easily in traffic, darting around the larger vehicles like a swallow through a flock of crows. It is easy to park, easy to turn, and its marvelous four-wheel brakes stop it instantly at the press of a pedal.

Is this a new car? The bodies, yes. The chassis, no. The motor is the powerful small motor of European type which Rollin H. White designed and which created a sensation among automobile engineers more than a year ago. Many thousands of Rollin cars were sold and have been tested through an entire season of motoring in all parts of the United States. This motor is built like a watch. No finer piece of mechanism can be found in any car at any price.

It has been proved economical—twenty-five to thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline. It is light in weight but extremely powerful and incredibly smooth in operation. It is good for a hundred thousand miles. Now this superb chassis has been fitted with bodies of the custom type which are richly finished and beautiful in every line. Upholstery and fittings are the kind you associate with cars costing five thousand dollars and upward. Cushions are deep and luxurious.

The minute you turn the handle and step inside, you know that this car is built to last. Get a Rollin and you have a car of which you can be proud for many years to come. The finish on all bodies is Duco, in smart color combinations. Balloon tires, of course!

Come and see the Rollin. Drive it yourself. Examine it from every angle, in your most critical mood. It was the most talked-about car at the New York and Chicago Shows. It attracts attention in any company because it is the car that people of taste have been looking for. The Rollin Motors Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

ROLLIN

New—the Richardson opal roof—just the roof for a stucco home

Opal—a roof with the coloring of brown October leaves silhouetted against a deep blue sky.

Here is a note that's new in roofing beauty. To almost any home this opal roof would add attractiveness.

And if that house of yours is a trim-lined stucco of creamy tan, it is the roof.

It's a roof that sets comfortably on such a house. Light enough in tone so as not to make it look top-heavy; yet so distinct in coloring that it isn't lost against a background of sky and trees. It is cool and restful in color; yet neither cold nor monotonous. Interesting in its endless variety of softly blending patterns, it is never obtrusive.

This unusual Richardson Multicrome Roof is formed of shingles on each of which are blended slate flakes of jade green and Richardson's rare weathered brown. The opal effect is secured by applying them just as they come from the bundle. No sorting nor special work in laying is necessary.

Other rich blends of color

This is only one of the beautiful effects you can secure with Richardson Multicrome Roofs. The other new colorings are equally attractive on different types of homes.

The tapestry tan roof, for example, is unusually rich looking on a brick house of almost any color. And for a white Colonial home nothing could be more attractive than the onyx roof.

Before you build, before you re-roof, by all means see these new roofs. One of them can give your home just the distinction and charm you have always wanted.

Indeed, your greatest opportunity to add to the beauty of your home lies in a wise choice of roofing colors.

To help you choose

To help you make the most of this opportunity we have prepared an authoritative booklet, What Color for the Roof?

In it, is page after page of beautiful homes in different architectural styles, all in color to show the most tasteful effects in body, trim and roof combinations. Interestingly explained, too, are the principles of all good color schemes.

And with the Richardson Harmonizer which it contains, you can see the complete effect of 54 different roof and house combinations.

The price of the book and Harmonizer is 25c. Send for your copy today. Or ask for free booklet, A Richardson Product for Every Roofing Need.

See the new colors at your dealers

Your nearest dealer in building materials can show you these and other beautiful Multicrome Roofs. He will tell you, too, why the points mentioned in the panel at the left make their beauty lasting.

DEALERS: There is a Richardson product for every roofing need. Perhaps you can secure the Richardson franchise for your territory. Write us.

50% thicker than the ordinary roof

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles—extra large, extra heavy. Its 50% greater thickness adds years of endurance. Its base is sturdy, long-fibre Richardson felt. Its waterproofing is Viskalt—99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed. Its surface is slate in close, overlapping flakes—further protection against weather and fire hazards.

This roof gives the maximum value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Gotham Tests Show Increasing Peril in Poor Brakes

Police Find 13,000 Cars Defective in Year's Inspection.

INSPECTION of motor car brakes is proving to be the most important factor in the effort to reduce automobile accidents, according to Barron Collier, special deputy commissioner in charge of the bureau of safety in New York. The bureau has just closed its first year's work, and during the last twelve months 72,633 motor vehicles on the city streets have been inspected. Of this number 10,517 had one defective brake, and the drivers were required to report back with the defective brake fixed for reinspection. In 2,239 cases both brakes were defective, and the drivers were fined, the penalty usually being $25, according to the New York Times.

When the bureau was opened last November Collier insisted that poor brakes were responsible for many accidents. He organized a brake inspection squad to see that braking conditions throughout the city were improved. It consisted of ten uniformed policemen. They were told to stop drivers of cars, particularly of the heavy type, make running tests, and, if found faulty, to see that both were put in good condition.

National attention has been directed to the work of the brake squad. Unthought of before Collier introduced it into the New York city police department, its operations have been watched by many police departments in the country. Recently the national safety council issued a bulletin describing the working of the squad and sent it to police departments in the principal cities of the United States. Various police chiefs have visited the local bureau of safety headquarters to learn about the brake inspection squad.

Lieut. Martin A. Noonan, who for many years was in the motorcycle division of the police department, and an expert in automobile safety, is in charge of the squad. The inspectors travel in pairs. Their method is first to signal an approaching truck or other motor vehicle to stop. One man then gets on the seat of the car by the driver, and, under his instruction, will proceed to start and then stop, the patrolman making a note of the distance it takes the car to stop under various speeds.

At a speed of ten miles per hour a car, to pass the test, must stop within nine feet; at fifteen miles, within twenty feet; at twenty miles, within thirty-seven feet, and twenty-five miles per hour within fifty-eight feet. This test is made with both the foot and the emergency brakes, and if either brake will not stop the car within these distances at the speeds indicated the brake is considered defective.

If only one brake is defective a ticket is given to the driver and he is required to report back to the inspector at a designated point within three days for a reinspection. If both brakes are found defective, not only is the car required to be placed in the nearest garage by the driver but he also receives a summons to court and is prosecuted under the highway act for operating a car on the streets with defective brakes.

"The driver of an automobile who neglects his brakes and operates a heavy truck or other motor vehicle on the congested streets of the city of New York without adequate braking power is just as dangerous as a speed maniac," Commissioner Collier says. "He should receive as severe a penalty as the law allows.

"Early in the life of the bureau we saw that strict enforcement of the state laws requiring adequate brakes on automobiles was necessary to the elimination of accident. It was obvious that many accidents involving both injuries to persons and damages to vehicles could be prevented by bringing about a better observance of this law.

"Even though a child, with reckless abandon, rushes out into the street within a few feet from the front of an approaching automobile, an accident under these circumstances could frequently be prevented by prompt action on the part of the driver of the car in bringing his car to a stop. However, if his brake lining is worn and the brakes do not hold properly the car cannot be stopped quickly enough.

"The condition of some of these heavy motor trucks is highly dangerous. I recall one case, in particular. One of our brake inspectors signaled a five ton truck coming down a hill on Amsterdam avenue, and, after receiving the policeman's signal to stop, it took the driver more than a block and a half to stop. He did not have a brake on his car. How could he have prevented crashing into another car at the street intersection at the foot of the hill had one just happened to cross his path?

"Another serious thing is the overloading of trucks. Even when a truck has brakes that are in good condition, if a five ton truck, for instance, carries seven or eight tons, as is frequently done, it is impossible to stop within a safe distance, even though the brakes may be perfect."

OLD FAITHFUL ON THE JOB

Twenty years ago this electric runabout was the wonder of the countryside about Manchester, N. H. It is still, for that matter, because Mark Hofman has operated the car over his rural free delivery route every day for the two decades. [Keystone Photo.]

Reason Wins Over Mailed Fist in This Safety Drive

LOS ANGELES.—Many thousands of southern California motorists were saved from arrest and the consequent payment of fines last year through courteous warnings given them when they were violating motor vehicle laws.

This is indicated in the annual report of the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which shows that there were exactly 47,717 motorists during 1924 who were warned of infractions of motor vehicle laws before arrest followed another violation.

These warnings were instigated by members of the club vigilance committee, a volunteer group working to eliminate accidents on the highways and to bring about more general observance of traffic ordinances. This committee is made up of hundreds of members, each of whom is armed with cards on which license numbers are written. Any violation of the traffic laws that is seen by the committee man is noted on this card, which is mailed to the public safety department of the automobile club.

In short order the motorist who has violated the law, either wilfully or unconsciously, receives a courteous letter from the auto club stating details of the infraction, such as the hour, date, location and manner. The note also explains that the public safety department is endeavoring to bring about a decrease in traffic violations and accidents through means of the warning.

"We would like to count on your cooperation in our efforts. You can help by setting a good example to other drivers," reads part of the appeal.

One such friendly warning proves sufficient for the average driver. Out of more than 47,000 there were only 523 reports of second violation by the same autoist, less than 2 per cent. Third offenders numbered only 17. On the other hand, the many replies to the letters sent to the motorists contained expressions of appreciation for the word of caution and assured the automobile club that the reminder would make for greater care in the future. This attitude, besides indicating understanding of the spirit in which the letter is sent, shows that the average motorist desires to obey the law.

Motordom Enlists 800 Daily Through Easy Payment Plan

FAMILIES of moderate limited means, who heretofore hesitated about purchasing automobiles, are, according to dealers, coming into the buying field in greater numbers than ever before.

Low-priced car dealers launched the plan less than two years ago. The purchaser is privileged to make weekly payments of an amount best suited to his individual means, these payments becoming a part of a bank account until such time as the purchaser has sufficient sum to take delivery of his car.

Official figures show that the number of purchasers under this plan is increasing rapidly, and that approximately 800 people are daily enrolling throughout the country. Predictions made when the plan was inaugurated that it would exert a wide influence toward lessening extravagant buying are being realized.

A NEW LEADER AMONG AMERICAN EIGHTS

The new Hupmobile Eight possesses all the sound qualities of endurance and reliability which have made Hupmobile famous the world over.

It possesses all the super-abilities of the eight-cylinder principle, and adds to them superiorities of its own which unquestionably single it out as a new leader among American eights.

The Hupmobile Eight brings within reach of the average American family, for the first time, every eight-cylinder quality and advantage for which buyers in the past willingly paid hundreds of dollars more.

Only Hupmobile itself could build such an eight, at a price which for the first time brings eight-cylinder motoring to thousands who heretofore have enjoyed less than the superlative in motor car performance.

For Hupmobile now incorporates in its Eight a degree of economy and performing stability never before associated with the eight as a type.

The Hupmobile Eight outdistances all other eights and all superior sixes—

In production of power per cubic inch of piston displacement;

In smoothness so complete that not even a murmur of "roughness" can be detected in the engine's entire power and speed range;

In compactness for handling and parking combined with roominess for riding comfort;

In a fine and better balanced combination of speed, lugging power and rapid acceleration;

In gasoline economy;

In beauty of design, finish and equipment;

In braking control.

The advent of the Hupmobile Eight is a major event in motor car history. A ride in this car—a drive behind the wheel—an understanding of the way it is engineered and built—will quickly convince you of that.

Traffic Control at Intersections Cuts Death Toll

Safety Chief Urges Speed Limit of 20 Miles an Hour.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

BETTER control of traffic at all important street and boulevard intersections in Chicago is gradually breaking down the city's automobile casualty list and is one of the vital safety steps urged for 1926 in the detailed traffic safety report made by Sidney J. Williams of the National Safety council to the Western Society of Engineers.

Rigid regulation of automobile speed to the twenty miles an hour established by the police department last summer and a city wide educational campaign among children are additional planks in his safety platform.

"Nearly 2,000 persons are killed annually by accidents in Cook county; about 100 times as many are injured, and some of them permanently disabled," says the report, in part. "The direct economic cost of these accidents is conservatively estimated at $50,000,000, including loss of time and earning capacity, medical and hospital expense, and property damage, but not including indirect costs, such as the delay of industrial operations and of street traffic. About three-fourths of these accidents occur in the city of Chicago.

"In Chicago and Cook county the accident problem today is on the streets rather than in the industries. Traffic, including railroads, elevated and street cars, and motor vehicles, is now responsible for more than half of our accidental fatalities, while industry causes only one-ninth. The remainder are from asphyxiation, burns, drowning, falls, etc., in the homes and in miscellaneous public places. Motor vehicles are involved in more than one-third of the total. The automobile today is easily the greatest single factor in accident causation in Chicago and elsewhere. This is no indictment of the automobile as such, nor would any of us wish to return to the horse age, but the death of more than 20,000 of our countrymen in automobile accidents in 1924 makes it perfectly clear that the mechanical development of this wonderful modern necessity has far outstripped our ability to use it in safety and comfort. Our manifest failure in this respect, which has made automobile accidents a pressing national problem, has occurred along at least important lines: In the physical capacity of our streets and highways; in our traffic laws and their enforcement, and in our personal self-control in driving these vehicles that respond so readily to our slightest touch.

"Where, how, and why do these automobile fatalities occur? In Chicago in 1924 four-fifths of all the persons killed in automobile accidents were pedestrians; the remaining one-fifth covers collisions between motor vehicles, collisions of an automobile with a railroad train, street car, or fixed object, overturning, and miscellaneous. Whoever may be most at fault, it is clear that the pedestrian is the greatest sufferer.

"Of the 441 pedestrian fatalities in Chicago in 1924, ninety occurred on the boulevards and through streets and 351 on other streets. On every ten miles of through streets there were, on the average, not quite six pedestrian deaths; on every ten miles of other streets, one and one-half pedestrian deaths. Considering the much greater volume of traffic on the through streets, this record indicates that our boulevard and through street system not only helps to move traffic, but helps to keep down accidents, when traffic at intersections is controlled by signal lights and officers and when speeding is checked by the constant activities of the police.

"Both these items—traffic control and speed—deserve further attention.

"It is clearly established that proper control at intersections not only keeps the traffic untangled, but keeps down accidents. The installation of the present automatic signals on Michigan avenue was followed by a survey of Cleveland, which showed a much higher fatality rate on the arterial highway system than in Chicago, and we believe that this was due chiefly to less extensive traffic control and to greater speeding. For a city to set up a system of through streets having legal right of way and then provide no effective check on speed and no safe way for pedestrians to cross at intersections, is simply to invite reckless driving and wholesale slaughter. I am happy to add that the present police authorities in Cleveland are now introducing more effective control measures which have already shown a reduction in the accident rate. And while speaking of control at intersections let me put in a plea for some change in our Chicago whistle signals, to give the pedestrian a fair chance to get across the street when the traffic changes!

"If Chicago's record of 309 automobile fatalities in a single year, on the boulevard and through street system alone, including ninety pedestrians, is lower than it might have been, it still is nothing to be proud of! No man in his senses can deny that these fatalities can and must be much further reduced by extension of traffic control, educational measures, and suppression of speeding.

"Now consider the element of speed. I have been amazed to read recently in an engineering magazine the statement that speed is not a cause of accident. It is certainly true that speed is not the sole cause of vehicular accidents; that many accidents happen at low speed; that ten miles an hour through a Christmas crowd in the loop may be more hazardous than forty on the open highway, and so on. But so long as the energy of a moving object varies as to the square of its velocity, and so long as the stopping distance of a moving object under constant deceleration varies in the same ratio, who can deny that under given conditions the greater the speed the greater the likelihood of accident in any emergency? Two cars approach a blind intersection; regardless of legal right of way, at fifteen miles per hour one or both of the cars can stop or swerve and avoid a collision at thirty miles they can't. A child runs into the street from behind a parked car. He has no legal right there—but who wants to kill a child? At fifteen or twenty miles per hour we can avoid him—at thirty we can't. Any emergency in crowded traffic—hitting a stone or a rut, blowing a tire, a miscalculation of distance—is hazardous in proportion to the speed or to the square of the speed. This will remain true as long as the laws of motion, which have not yet been successfully amended by an legislature nor by any man or body of men whose god is speed.

"This general statement should be capable of proof by experiment, and it is. On July 8, 1924, after considerable newspaper publicity, the Chicago police department began rigorously to enforce a twenty mile speed limit. In the thirty days preceding there were sixty automobile deaths on the streets of Chicago; in the thirty days following, twenty-eight. After the first month, lawyers and judges began questioning the exact intent and meaning of the speed law, which I shall not stop to discuss—and the police drive largely lost its force. But the lesson of those thirty days cannot be denied.

"If speed were necessary to move the traffic in a modern city, the question might fairly be asked, 'Is not some sacrifice of life necessary for the greater good of the city's life as a whole?' But this is not the case. Traffic engineers and city planners have developed formulas and curves showing the number of vehicles passing a given point at various speeds. The curve shows that the maximum number of vehicles will pass a point at about twenty-three miles per hour; that this number is only 4 per cent greater than at seventeen miles; that for speeds over twenty-three the number actually decreases. On another set of assumptions the greatest number will pass at a speed of even less than fifteen miles per hour. Obviously the way to move traffic is not through the reckless speeding of individual vehicles, but by maintaining a high average speed of all vehicles and by using the entire street width for moving traffic and not for parking."

ANOTHER ECONOMY MEASURE

One tractor does the work of eight horses under the new system of city garbage collection established in Peoria, Ill., by Superintendent Frank Scott of the street department. The city has decided to motorize this service as a result of the year's experiments.

Calls on American Cars to Conquer Australian Miles

AUSTRALIA is one of the best motor transport markets in the world, according to Dr. Earl Page, treasurer of the commonwealth, speaking at a luncheon recently given to him in Detroit by the automotive industry.

Australia is nearly equivalent to the United States in area and ranks next to the this country in per capita wealth, the visitor brought out. The treasurer, who also serves as vice premier, is here particularly to study the economical methods of road building in the United States, as he believes that a rapid expansion of motor transport facilities will be helpful to his commonwealth.

He pointed out that the automobile is proving very helpful to living conditions on the ranches. The motor vehicle is enlarging the radius of medical service, which is particularly important in that country, where distances are great.

HEAT ENGINE SLOWLY.

After starting a chilled engine, run it slow for a few minutes before getting under way. Racing a cold motor is damaging because the bearings and grinder walls in all probability are not protected by a free flow of oil, and the low throttle warming up process should continue until engine oil has been heated sufficiently to flow readily.

Meridian Highway Soon to Open New Through Route

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — [Special Correspondence.] — Contractors engaged in constructing route 3 of the state board issue hard road system between Rockford and Cairo via Bloomington, are preparing to close the few minor gaps during the coming month. The small stretch between Wapella and Clinton in De Witt county, which was held up a year due to right of way controversies in the vicinity of the latter city, will be given immediate attention.

The symmetry of the great highway, the longest single stretch of concrete pavement in the middle west, is disturbed by a jog between Mendota and Rockford, alleged to be due to engineering difficulties, but which the people of Rochelle and vicinity assert are purely political. The Meridian highway, the name assigned by motor clubs to this route before it was incorporated in the state bond issue program, and which was marked with a yellow insignia over the entire stretch of more than 350 miles, moves in a straight line between Mendota and Rockford via Rochelle, through the counties of La Salle, Lee, Ogle, and Winnebago.

The route drawn by the state highway department swings to the northwest after leaving Mendota, through the towns of Sublette and Amboy to Dixon in Lee county. The route then swings northeast via Grand Detour, Oregon, and Byron to Rockford. Dixon is approximately twenty miles west of the Meridian highway, indicating the extraordinary extent of the detour. The residents of eastern Lee county and of Rochelle and other places in eastern Ogle country are naturally exercised that the natural route, following the old Meridian highway, should be ignored and the long detour to Dixon authorized, adding heavily to the cost of constructing the road and also involving a waste of time for transcontinental motorists who seek to cross the state on the smallest possible mileage.

It is not disputed that the road from Mendota to Dixon and from Rockford to Dixon is needed, but the Rochelle objectors assert that the detour should have come from the $100,000,000 bond issue money and not from the first issue, which was largely designed for the construction of the important cross state roads and by the most direct routes.

In the course of time, it is presumed, the short line between Mendota and Rockford via Rochelle will be closed; but in the meantime thousands of vehicles will be sent via Dixon.

So far as known, the state highway department has never satisfactorily explained the long detour. Rochelle residents deny that it was due to engineering difficulties. They insist that political reasons alone were responsible for the forty mile swing-out, and they are making every possible effort to procure the construction of a road between Mendota and Rockford via the shorter and natural route.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

REORGANIZATION of the Commerce Motor Truck company of Ypsilanti brings together again the highly successful automotive triumverate of E. W. Bassick, E. S. Evans of Detroit, and W. R. Bassick, according to announcement made yesterday. The three have taken over a controlling interest in the company under the plan which authorized an increase in capital stock from $300,000 to $500,000. W. R. Bassick is president; E. H. Graham, vice president, and E. S. Evans, treasurer.

Another important change in management which is said to have resulted already in increased sales and a consequent speeding up of production is that which gave Frederick E. Moskovics the presidency of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America. Factory reports indicate a remarkable increase in business following his election.

Substantial price reductions on all Peerless eight models were made public last week by Edward Ver Linden, president and general manager of the company. The reductions range from $340 to $580.

A. R. Glancy, president of Oakland, has announced the appointment of B. H. Anibal as chief engineer of the company, succeeding Benjamin Jerome, resigned.

A new success added to ten years of succeeding

THE New Coach Imperial is enjoying a notable public reception.

Already it seems destined to be the most sought after Chandler in ten years of Chandler history.

It is the only closed car that combines at touring car price the luxury of Fisher body craftsmanship and the impressive Chandler performance.

It is the only Coach that offers the Pikes Peak Motor and the Traffic Transmission.

The durability of the Chandler chassis was proved at Culver City, Cal., February 4th, when a roadster covered one thousand miles in 689 minutes, an average of 86.96 miles per hour—the fastest 1000 miles ever made on wheels.

Chandler success is the just reward of ten years of sound method; ten years which today find Chandler selling the best car of its history, amply financed, strongly entrenched with a growing dealer organization, and basing growth on conservative policies that give due regard to new economic conditions prevailing in the industry.

Motors Should Pay for Road Upkeep, Says Tax Report

Receipts Soon to Exceed Building Costs.

THE payment by highway users of all maintenance costs and a substantial portion of the construction and interest costs on primary highways has been advised by Prof. Jacob Viner of the University of Chicago in a report on "Problems of Highway Finance" submitted to the National Tax association. Prof. Viner as chairman of a special committee named to consider the subject.

The report also recommends the elimination of all of the federal excise taxes on tires, parts and accessories.

Motor vehicle registrations in 1923 reached 15,092,000 and reached the 17,000,000 mark in 1924, the report states. Although primary highways comprise but little more than 10 per cent of the total road mileage of the country and probably will not exceed for a long time 20 per cent of the total mileage, they account for 85 to 90 per cent of the total highway traffic.

The average levy per automobile which would pay all maintenance and interest costs and would provide a generous fund for amortization of primary road construction costs would not greatly exceed the average special tax burden per automobile now imposed, Dr. Viner points out.

While the special taxes on motor vehicles amounted to only 5 per cent of the total highway expenditures in 1914, in 1924 it promised to exceed or equal 40 per cent, the report continues. And since about 40 per cent of the highway expenditures are met by borrowings, the time is rapidly approaching when special motor vehicle taxes will equal or surpass the expenditures on highways both primary and local from current tax receipts.

In preparing its report the committee recognized the fact that there has been an enormous increase in motor vehicle transportation, which, it maintains, has brought substantial gains to the American public. Consequently highway expenditures have been large and in a period when property taxation is already heavy, the need of placing the cost of these necessary improvements upon the chief beneficiaries is emphasized.

A dissenting voice was raised by one member of the committee, A. J. Brosseau of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who agreed to the board principle that motorists should pay a substantial cost of the roads which they use. His objection to what he termed "discriminatory war excise taxes" was based on the fundamental ground that there is no relation between federal appropriations for public improvements of general benefit and the discriminatory excise taxes which were levied against the motor vehicle after the federal act had been passed and solely for the purpose of meeting emergency war revenues.

He held further that federal aid is granted because a general public benefit is derived from the construction of primary roads.

CUBIC CAPACITY TAX.

In place of a tax on horsepower, the British government is considering a plan to tax autos on the cubic capacity of their engines. Taxes on American cars generally would be reduced by this system.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Arthur Fisher, 1746 Newport avenue, Chicago.

The Question.

What Cook county highway is most in need of double width pavement?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road.

The Answers.

James M. Stinson, 11742 Princeton avenue, clerk—Halsted street is by far the most important road to consider in any pavement widening program. It is No. 1 in the state's highway system and the direct road south to connect with the Lincoln highway and the Dixie trail, in spite of the fact that Western avenue is now used by most of the traffic.

Fred Simons, 1341 North Maplewood avenue, clerk—Archer avenue should be widened at once south of Argo to Joliet and paved inside of the Chicago city limits. It is the direct road to the southwest and is used by heavy traffic both winter and summer. Now it is narrow and dangerous.

George J. Witt, 519 West 26th street, clerk—Western avenue should be doubled in width both entering Blue Island and south of that point. There is always a jam on this road and the part that has been widened leading into Chicago shows the advantage of this improvement. Ditches along this road should also be removed.

Clarence Oefstedal, 3261 Palmer street, bookkeeper—Milwaukee avenue is most in need of widening. It carries the heaviest traffic to the north and needs immediate attention. An example of how doubling the width will aid traffic is to be seen at the Dempster road intersection, where the county has built double width approaches.

Z. F. Stuzcynski, 2037 West 19th street, clerk — The Dixie highway in the southern part of the county should be the first to get widening attention. It is the trunk line to all the southern towns and is badly congested at all times of the year.

A Run on Streets.

Detroit now has one automobile for every five persons. An inquisitive individual has asked the question, "What would happen if every Detroit owned automobile would get onto the streets at the same time?"

Not even a traffic officer could answer the question, but it is safe to say such a situation would create as great a panic as would an immediate demand on the largest bank by all depositors for their savings.

KEEP TANK FILLED.

Running a car when the gas is low causes the car to pick up sediment and water in the bottom of the gas tank.

Wider Roads Seen as Vital Interest to Motor Industry

INDICATING the widespread interest manifest by manufacturers and others identified with big business in the forthcoming report of the joint federal and Cook county survey of highways, C. W. Nash, president of the Ajax Motors company, anticipates in the report a vast amount of information that may lead the way to ultimate transformation of highway transportation and lasting benefit to the automobile industry.

"The network of hard roads that spreads throughout the length and breadth of the land, linking villages and towns with metropolitan centers, has become of prime importance to commerce itself," he said yesterday.

"Aside from the pleasure these magnificent boulevards provide for the transportation of merchandise. But along with the phenomenal growth of passenger car and truck transportation obstacles that must be overcome within the next few years have arisen. And the most outstanding among these obstacles, as I view it, is the problem of congestion.

"Proper and adequate metropolitan terminals for the reception and distribution of motor truck and passenger car traffic is a subject that is going to require deep study by those thoroughly qualified for the task. Because of this and because of the growing importance of highway transportation business men throughout the country are awaiting with interest the report which I understand is soon to be issued by the federal government and at the same time by Cook county, which, because of Chicago, is one of the country's greatest shipping centers.

"The question of city terminals for the reception and disbursement of passenger and freight transportation entails the systematic layout of highway approaches to great metropolitan centers so that passenger and freight transportation may enter and leave the city with the smallest degree of congestion possible. Some cities have gone a long way toward solving this problem, and in this connection I have in my mind the city of Milwaukee, which is circled by what is known as a 'county hoop.' This roadway intercepts every main highway from the north, west and south that enters Milwaukee; the near approaches to the city are thus relieved of congestion for transportation diverted just outside the city limits to which ever direction is best suited to the objective of the vehicle.

"Arterial highways, or through streets, laid out by the cities themselves, are going to go a long way toward the solution of the congestion problems. Chicago, through its boulevard system, has made a good start in this direction so far as passenger car traffic is concerned, and the extension of the 'stop' system on other city streets is helping that much more. The Chicago plan commission, I understand, is thoroughly alive to the subject of motor transport, both with respect to the truck and passenger car, while other large cities throughout the country are laying plans to coöperate with the government and country officials in bringing about the smooth operation of highway transportation."

Nash's interest in the big traffic survey and the county campaign to double the width of existing pavements is expected to stir up all American automobile manufacturers and bring about their direct coöperation in the movement for wider country roads and construction of "super-highways" leading into the big motor terminals. He has already made an investigation of traffic conditions in the Chicago district preparatory to the introduction of the new Ajax car and believes that present road congestion will govern the much discussed "saturation point" in the sale of cars.

Old Army Game.

Toll bridges are fast disappearing, but according to word received from John Graham, in charge of one of the Chicago Motor club survey cars traveling through the south, an example of tourist discrimination is presented in the situation existing at the bridge across the White river at De Valli's Bluff, Ark., where tourists pay $1 for the privilege of crossing the bridge, but local motorists can buy a book of coupons entitling the purchaser to ten one way trips for $2.50.

The bridge company says, in explanation, that in order to secure the franchise it was necessary to make concessions to the local motorists.

Exports Grow.

Consumption of the product of American automobile factories by companies outside of the United States reached 14½ per cent of the total in December, which is a new high record. The average for the year is over 11 per cent; and the actual number of American vehicles purchased by the foreign countries during the year was 456,000.

Hudson is not called "the World's Greatest Buy" for today alone. That is acknowledgment of ten years' constant refinement of a great car around the famous patented Super-Six principle.

The reasons for that position affect all motor car buying. They cannot be ignored.

A supreme and exclusive motor principle, adding power, smoothness, performance, without added weight, cylinders or cost.

The largest production of 6-cylinder closed cars in the world—and the value advantages of that position.

Actual proof of greatest value—which is SALES.

And now the greatest price advantage with the finest quality Hudson ever offered.

It is only as you find the real comparisons for Hudson qualities among the costliest cars that the enormous difference in price is so astonishing.

All now know that higher price can buy no smoother performance than Hudson's. It cannot buy more brilliant results in pick-up, power or speed. It cannot buy greater reliability or endurance.

And with all this capacity and flexibility Hudson keeps the economy, simplicity and easy maintenance of the "Six."

Hudsons are noted for high resale value. They remain sound mechanically for years. Old models are not made obsolete by sweeping chassis or body changes. After ten years no advancement has been found to displace Super-Six leadership based on its patented, exclusive principle.

At today's prices need you own a lesser car? Can a costlier car satisfy you more?

$481 For those who desire, special arrangements have been made whereby a Hudson Coach may be purchased for a First Payment of $481. The remaining payments conveniently arranged $481

FARM AND GARDEN

Farmer Enlisted to Protect Fur Bearing Animals

And State Legislatures Plan Sterner Laws of Preservation.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

An easy way to make money has apparently been overlooked by farmers. Along with trappers and hunters they have failed to provide adequate protection for fur bearing animals. Too often they regard them merely as wary sleuths that kill chickens and slicken the banks of creeks and ponds or the bark of trees. They forget these suspicious eyed creatures are important sources of income, growing the pelts for the nation's fur clad women, whose annual bill is $500,000,000, a fifth the value of the farmers' corn crop last year.

Farmers kill these fur bearers in and out of season; drain swamps, cut down trees, and destroy dens and nests, so that now many of the most valuable animals have almost disappeared from our forests and streams. So rapidly has this practice gone on, with so little planning for the perpetuation of fur bearing animals, that many predict the wild animals supplying fur will be totally extinct in another twenty years and pelts will have to come from animals raised on fur ranches.

Law Must Step In.

The preservation of fur bearing animals in the United States becomes a public issue that must be handled through the enactment of state laws. The department of agriculture at Washington is cooperating with the national association of the fur industry to encourage the passing of proper legislation for the protection of these animals, according to a letter from Frank G. Asbrook of the biological survey bureau.

He says the legislatures of forty-two states are to meet this year, and a majority of them are now in session. Fur laws in all these states will be revised. Many bills for that purpose already have been introduced in some of the legislatures.

"We feel the fur resources of the United States are not being given all the attention they deserve. Better laws and more strict enforcement are needed if fur bearers are to maintain their present status," he writes.

The bulk of the raw furs trapped annually come from the Mississippi valley, and it is in this territory the most vigorous campaigning will be done to get the necessary laws.

Whys and Wherefores.

In placing the blame for the disappearance of the fur bearing animals Mr. Ashbrook, biologist in charge of the division of fur resources, says the present shortage is not due entirely to trapping or trappers' methods. Much of it may be laid to the inadequacy of laws, which in turn is due to lack of information on the part of farmers, trappers, and members of the fur trade, of legislative committees, and even of conservation commissions.

The majority of the laws now on the statute books do little to prevent the decrease of our animals in certain sections of the country. Indiscriminate cutting of forests and draining of marshes have played a part. The fact that trappers have been permitted to run trap lines over great areas is another cause. Fur buyers are to blame, too, because they accept all skins offered and thus carry to market illegal pelts, tempting trappers to go back and make a thorough cleanup along trap lines, disregarding the proper season.

Conserving the Supply.

"In practically every state revisions of fur laws on the basis of existing conditions and knowledge of the life habits and requirements of the various species would result in the utmost benefit to the trapper and his quarry," says Mr. Ashbrook. "It would not only afford the trapper more satisfactory returns for his animal catch, but at the same time would conserve and foster an ever increasing supply of breeding animals. Fur animals are hunted and trapped primarily for the fur they produce, not for sport or food, and there is only one brief season when the fur is in prime condition for harvesting.

"Areas in which fur bearers have become depleted should be closed completely for a period of years and, so far as practicable, these regions should be restocked."

Trafficking in illegal pelts seems to be the reason for so many shabby fur coats at this time of year—coats that are ripped and have the fur worn off down to the dried skin. Present laws allow trapping before the pelts are prime in the fall and after the breeding season is in progress in the spring, and fur taken too early or too late slips easily after it is made into a wrap.

Ashbrook has this to say about illegal pelts: "If the stock of fur animals is to be perpetuated as one of our natural resources, uniform laws should be enacted to stop traffic in illegal skins, except, of course, the skins of predatory animals."

Muskrat the Barometer.

Skunks and muskrats yield the greatest return of the fur bearers in the United States. The muskrat skin is a staple in the American fur market and is regarded as the barometer in the industry. But in certain sections where there is a long open season from four to six months the muskrat is becoming scarce. According to Mr. Ashbrook's information, muskrats are still unprotected in a dozen states, and in fifteen states they have to face an open season of from four to six months. In two states they are protected throughout the year, and in one state they are protected by a few local county laws.

A three months' period is sufficient for the open season on muskrats, and the most valuable skins are those taken late in winter and early in spring. Limiting the open season on muskrats from Dec. 1 to March 1, or in more northern states from Dec. 15 to March 15, is being advocated.

Streams and forests are restocked with fish and game and the fur interests are wondering why the same thing cannot be done with fur bearing animals.

Swamps Are Valuable.

The tendency toward over production of agricultural products within recent years has slackened the wholesale drainage of swamps to make land available for the plow, so today greater attention is being given to the preservation of areas already stocked with wild fur animals and game. Many of these swamps and wild thickets are considered more productive and valuable in their original state than for agricultural purposes after drainage.

The gigantic drainage project at Trempealeau, Wis., in the heart of the upper Mississippi river wild life and fish refuge region is cited as an example of a mistake that was made in draining swamp land and killing off the wild animals and fish. The creation of a refuge to extend from Rock Island, Ill., up the Mississippi river to Wabash, Minn., is considered an outstanding act of congress last summer. This region may become a big center and hiding place for the fur bearing animals. The refuge act authorized the appropriation of $1,500,000 to be made for the acquisition and setting aside of about 300,000 acres of swamp and lowland along the Mississippi.

William M. Jardine, the new secretary of agriculture, will have jurisdiction over that area so far as the fur bearing animals are concerned after the refuge has been acquired by the government.

JEWISH CHARITY BUILDS MT. SINAI HOSPITAL UNIT

Long Drive for Funds Attains Goal.

Four years' striving was rewarded last week when contracts were let for the construction of the new Mount Sinai hospital at 15th place and California avenue. Jewish congregations and social and philanthropic organizations have been busy for months raising the necessary funds.

The dedication of the 100 bed unit in May, 1919, was only the start toward the completion of the full hospital plant. This latest unit, when completed, will care for 200 patients more.

Schmidt, Garden & Martin, with Alfred S. Alschuler as associate, are the architects of the hospital building shown in an adjoining column. The present hospital will continue to be used until the completion of the new unit, when the old one will be completely remodeled.

Will Spend $850,000.

In all, it is planned to expend approximately $850,000 in making Mount Sinai hospital one of the largest and best equipped in Chicago. This is the second great objective of those laid down by the Associated Jewish Charities of Chicago, when they started to raise a $2,500,000 building fund.

The first objective, the nurses' school for the Michael Reese hospital, has been occupied for some time. Tag days, benefit concerts, teas, all have been held to further the campaign. During November, 1919, the drive was halted while the efforts of the workers were turned, at the request of the board of directors of the hospital, to raising funds for the relief of European war sufferers.

Even Jewels Given.

Jewels, even, were turned in to help swell the hospital fund.

While the initial buildings of the Mount Sinai hospital will be only five stories high, the architects have stipulated in their plans foundations solid enough and columns heavy enough to carry an additional six stories when an increasing number of patients makes expansion necessary and added money makes it possible.

The president of the board of trustees of the hospital is Morris Kurtzon. Leopold Kling is chairman of the building committee. The new buildings are expected to be in operation in about a year.

LEASEHOLD ESTATE.

The Illinois National Securities corporation has sold to Samuel H. Newman the leasehold estate and building at 1833-35 Blue Island avenue for an indicated $67,000. The building contains five stores, seven offices, and seven flats, and the lease has approximately sixty-five years to run. The lease agrees not to conduct a bank on the property for a period of fifteen years.

HARTMAN FURNITURE CO.

The Hartman Furniture and Carpet company will build a garage and warehouse on the property on 46th street, 300 feet east of Normal avenue, south front, 177x132, purchased from Charles Dickinson, for an indicated $11,000.

Start Drive to Build This in Evanston

A campaign for funds with which to erect this new building will be started today by members of the Second Presbyterian church of Evanston. The sum of $250,000 is required. Designed by Holmes & Flinn, architects, the church is intended to replace the old frame structure now standing at the northeast corner of Hinman avenue and Main street.

The exterior of the building is to be in old rose colonial brick and Bedford stone. The auditorium is designed to seat 650 persons in the nave and 350 more in the galleries. The present Sunday school building shown at the right of the picture is to have changes made in it to fit it into the fully developed scheme.

The Rev. Raymond McDonald Huston, D. D., is pastor of the church. James R. Smart is chairman of the building committee, and Frederick T. Voss of the finance committee.

Reward of Giving

Thousands of Jewish people contributed to make possible the erection of this new unit of the Mount Sinai hospital at 15th place and California avenue. Schmidt, Garden & Martin, with Alfred S. Alschuler associated, are the architects. The contracts have been let.

3 APARTMENTS SOLD FOR TOTAL SUM OF $357,000

The twenty-four apartment building located at 4908-18 Glenwood avenue has been sold by William Wahl to Nicholas Kapche for a reported $150,000 subject to $129,000. The purchaser gave as part payment the three apartment building at 6330 North Oakley avenue for $25,000, subject to $16,000. J. C. Lassen of J. C. Lassen & Co. was broker, with Gurdon Williams attorney for the seller, and A. D. Gash, attorney for the buyer.

The eighteen apartment building at the southwest corner of 70th street and Clyde avenue has been sold by John Owen to Frank S. Leits for a reported $135,000, the seller taking in part payment the six flat building at 1514-16 East 67th place, at $51,500, and the six flat building at 6943-45 Indiana avenue, at $46,500. A. J. Hoss of M. J. Wagner & Co. and S. A. Bernbach of S. A. Bernbach & Co. were brokers. Attorney C. K. Schwartz represented the buyer.

R. E. Ahlstrand and Otto C. Carlson have sold to N. E. Neunuedel the twelve flat building on the northwest corner of Hoyne and Waveland avenues for a reported $72,500, subject to $40,000. Paul E. Hastings & Co. represented both parties.

COL. JAMES B. KAINE NEW R. E. HEAD FOR FIRST TRUST & SAVINGS

Col. James B. Kaine, on April 1, will become manager of the real estate department of the First Trust and Savings bank and will be in charge of the real estate interests of that bank and of the First National bank of Chicago, including the buildings of the two institutions. Robert L. Davis, who has held the office since 1903, will become assistant vice president. Col. Kaine has been in charge of the real estate department of the Consumers' company for three and a half years. He was president of the Realty Club of Chicago in 1924 and secretary of the Chicago real estate board in 1922. He is a member of the Chicago Athletic association and the Union League club. He served on the staff of the 116th infantry during the war, represented the government in Poland after the armistice, and is now lieutenant colonel of the 342d infantry.

JAMES B. KAINE.

CUTLER SHOE CO. TAKES BIG LEASE IN PALMER HOUSE

One of the largest leases in point of area ever taken on a State street store has been negotiated by the Cutler Shoe company for 30,000 square feet in the new Palmer house. The shoe company claims that it will be the largest shoe store in the world when it gets into its new quarters, a few feet south of its present site at 125 South State street, about Oct. 1, 1926.

The terms of the lease were not disclosed, but it was stated that they were "considerably higher" than the $120,000 annual rental the company is now paying for half the space in the old building. When the present State street building comes down the company will move into temporary quarters on the Monroe street and Wabash avenue fronts of the Wabash avenue section. Ross & Browne, agents for the Palmer estate, made the lease.

Another shoe company lease was that made by the H. A. Meyer Shoe company, who opened up last week in their new quarters at 79 West Randolph street, leased from John P. Harding for ten years at $30,000 a year. The store was redecorated by John J. Keenan & Co.

TO BUILD FURNITURE STORE.

A four story furniture store building will be erected by Jacob L. Metz on the property at 61-51-53 South Halsted street which he purchased from Dorothy Horwitz for a reported $65,000. Attorney Samuel E. Davidson represented the seller.

Evanston State Bank Plans to Build $700,000 Home

A new bank and business building is to be erected by the State Bank & Trust Co. of Evanston at an estimated cost of $700,000. The new block will stand on the northeast corner of Davis street and Orrington avenue on ground 132x106. Childs & Smith, architects, have been commissioned to prepare the plans. Shops will occupy the first floor; the bank, the second floor and half the mezzanine; shops will occupy the street front mezzanine; the third and fourth floors will contain offices.

DOVER STREET PROPERTY.

Thomas Fifield, chief engineer of bridges, has purchased the property at 4707 Dover street of Clara E. Suker for a reported $25,000. H. S. Miller was broker.

Buys 80 Lots Emerald, 96th, 97th, 98th, Halsted

John T. Fitzgerald has bought of Samuel M. Halmowitz the vacant property on Emerald avenue between 96th and 97th streets, 594x125, east front, the property on the southeast corner of Emerald avenue and 96th street, 197x125, and the forty-eight lots between 97th and 98th streets and Emerald avenue and Halsted street. The indicated consideration was $88,000, subject to $16,000.

CHICAGO CHEMICAL CO.

The Chicago Chemical company has closed a purchase contract with the Clearing Industrial district, covering approximately 40,000 square feet in the eighth industrial subdivision of the district. A one story building of 12,000 square feet will be erected, and a switch track of the Belt Line will be extended on to the property.

CENTRAL COLD STORAGE BUYS $425,000 SITE

Will Cool Entire 15th Street Mart.

What is considered the most important purchase in the new 15th street market project, since the first big buys were made, was announced yesterday in the statement that the Central Cold Storage company has acquired two 14th place holdings for a total sum of $425,000, all cash.

One lot is at the southwest corner of 14th place and Sangamon street, extending south to the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal railroad right of way. The other is the property adjoining on the west, on the southeast corner of 14th place and Morgan street.

The seller is the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee for Graham & Sons' Trust. Mark Levy & Bro. were brokers for all parties. Huff & Cook and Gottlieb, Schwartz & Markheim were attorneys for the Central Cold Storage company.

Simultaneously with the announcement of this transaction comes the report that the railroads serving the market district, are contemplating a new produce terminal nearby, to receive and despatch all food stuffs handled by the market. It is figured that the saving in teaming and railroad transportation would more than defray the cost of the terminal, though this might run to several million dollars.

Heads New Market.

With their purchase, the storage company obtains a strategic position directly east of the eastern head of the market.

The property has a land area of 51,580 square feet, with a frontage of 215 feet on 14th place, 150 feet on Morgan street, 377 feet on Sangamon street, and 85 feet along the railroad right of way.

Not only is the storage company planning to warehouse within their own building, but they are offering refrigerating service to all the stores in the new produce market. Ammonia pipes will be run underground along the street line, with taps available for all of the 165 store units now in process of construction. The market men already have completed negotiations with the storage company to serve the whole area bounded by Morgan street, Racine avenue, 14th place, and the B. & O. T. C. railroad.

The property acquired by the refrigerating company is improved at present with buildings six and seven stories high, with an aggregate floor space of 176,355 square feet. The southeast corner of the holding is vacant, having an area of 17,250 square feet.

With this latest move the Central Cold Storage company will have four plants in Chicago. It is claimed that they will be the largest refrigerating company west of New York City. Their four plants, it is said, will have a yearly capacity of 25,000 carloads of perishable products.

Half Billion Business.

It is estimated that the produce business of South Water street approximates an annual total of $500,000,000. More than 100,000 carloads of foodstuffs it is figured, arrive at Chicago railroad terminals each year.

L. B. Kilbourne is president of the storage company, and Dennis Kennedy is general manager.

With the sale of the above property, Mark Levy & Bro. announce, the sale of the real estate of Graham & Sons' bank, by the Chicago Title and Trust company, through them as brokers, has been completed.

CROWDED ROADS SPELL HUGE LOSS TO CHICAGOANS

$26,250,000 Yearly in Traffic Delay.

More than $26,250,000 is lost by the inhabitants of greater Chicago every year.

The Chicago Regional Planning association makes this computation, assuming that 50,000 motor cars, each with a driver and two passengers, leave and enter the city each day and lose fifteen minutes each way because of narrow roads and traffic congestion.

Real estate and roads are inseparably bound together, and this is why the clamoring of more than 1,000,000 motor cars registered in Illinois for more road surface is a voice that should be heeded by real estate men and property owners.

200 Foot Roads.

"Adequate highways may prove to be anything from a new twenty foot wide pavement on a route parallel to a principal highway," says the association's preliminary report, "to a right of way 200 feet wide with separate traffic ways for swift moving passenger cars and for the slower and heavier trucks.

"This wider highway must come in at least four main directions from the city of Chicago, or independent routes must be designated and paved for these two classes of traffic."

New relief channels must be constructed on the south and southeast of the city, says the report. "To the southwest the routes paralleling the river must be widened. Traffic separation must come on Ogden avenue and Roosevelt road. The several exits to the north, from Milwaukee avenue to the lake, are choked with traffic.

Dunes, Forest Preserves.

"More than 7,500,000 people have visited the Cook county forest preserves, totaling 25,000 acres, in a single year," the report continues. "At Chicago's door the Indiana dunes extend for twenty-five miles along the lake shore.

"Chiefly, the highways are the avenue of approach to the forest preserve and the dune country. Here then is an added reason for paving them broad and smooth."

Real Estate Board Plans Two Trips to Convention

The Chicago Real Estate board is arranging two trips to Detroit for its members who will attend the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards June 23 to 26. A trip by boat is planned, as well as by a special train which will leave Chicago the afternoon of Monday, June 22. It is hoped that the 1925 convention will be more liberally attended than any other in the history of the association.

An early clearance of better grades of medium and weighty hogs was effected on the week-end session at quotations equal to the close of previous day or 15@25c under early Friday. Prices were narrowest of the season, the day's top and average being only 20c apart, at $13.35 and $13.65 respectively, against a "spread" of 40c initial day of the week and 95c early in the year. Outsiders absorbed about 70 per cent of the day's fresh arrivals, with practically all buyers entering the trade earlier than usual, favoring better grades of hogs. Light light and pigs were neglected at uneven declines. Prevailing quotations are largely 35@40c under the close of last week.

Barring the previous week, last week's hog receipts at 147,900 were largest since week ending October 18. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 226 lbs, stands heaviest since January, but below normal, being 11 lbs under the five year average. General average cost of hogs reached $13.75, the highest weekly average since 1920, being 75c above previous week.

Further uneven advances and a narrowing of prices raised bulk of beef cattle to a new high level for the year and practically $1.00 above a year ago, the week's general average cost of beef steers at $10.25 being within 5c of the highest weekly average in 1924. Receipts were third smallest since early last August, at 52,800. Cattle of beef merit advanced 15@50c, medium grades up most. Butcher stock gained 20@25c, with some up more. Choice heifers brought $11.00. Thirteen yearling steers topped at $12.50, with $12.25 highest for load lots. Best heavy averaged 1,342 lbs, at $12.00. Calves slumped 50c to $1.00. Stockers and feeders advanced mostly 25c in sympathy with medium grades of fat steers.

Lamb Prices Wide.

Range of lamb prices reached the widest point of the year, with last week's general average cost lowest since middle of last December, due to the greatly increased proportion of weighty lambs included in offerings. Most of last week's offerings of 78,800, one of the largest of the year, weighed over 90 lbs. Light and handy weights closed mostly 75c under a week previous, with medium and weighty stock off $1.00@1.50 for the week. Fat aged sheep advanced 15@25c, while yearlings declined unevenly 25c@$1.00. Feeding and shearing lambs dropped 50@75c.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 52,000 hogs and 18,000 sheep, against 20,343 cattle, 53,846 hogs and 19,603 sheep a week ago and 23,320 cattle, 63,960 hogs and 16,663 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs and 75,000 sheep, against 57,365 cattle, 206,022 hogs and 70,766 sheep a year ago.

WALL STREET NOTES

Bond prices drifted aimlessly in yesterday's dull trading session. Renewal of selling pressure against the St. Paul railway obligations carried both the 4s of 1925 and the refunding 4½s a point lower. Other rail issues showed little change, although Seaboard adjustment 5s, St. Louis Southwestern consolidated 4s, and Southern Railway general 6s, yielded about a point each.

Success of the reorganization plan proposed for the United Railways company of St. Louis, in receivership since April, 1919, is said to be assured through deposit with the committee of large majority of the securities involved. The funded debt is to be cut from $34,800,000 to $40,800,000, and the existing preferred and common stocks aggregating $41,206,000, will be replaced by $5,384,500 new 7 per cent preferred and 343,645 shares of no-par value common. The common will be offered to preferred shareholders and to holders of St. Louis Transit company improvement bonds at $12.50 a share.

Building activity continues to run close to the rate established early last year, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation. February contracts aggregated $299,260,000 for thirty-seven states, comprising about seven-eighths of the country's construction. The figures are slightly under February, 1924, and less than 1 per cent over January this year. The total of 595,653,000 for the first two months of 1925 shows a decline of one-half of 1 per cent under last year.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the new stock, payable April 30, to $25 par value stock of record March 31. This is the same rate paid on the old stock, which was split four shares for one and on which the rate had been $2 quarterly.

The Commercial Cable company will open a New York-Rome cable service, via the Azores, Malaga in Spain, and Anzio on the Italian coast, tomorrow. The company will use one of its present pair of cables to the Azores, whence its messages will be relayed by the Western Union Telegraph company over a new span laid by the Italian Cable company from Anzio to Horta, on the island of Fayal.

The copper refineries of North and South America produced 105,988 short tons of copper in February, compared with 112,626 in January, and 108,532 in December, 1924.

Sheet steel bars are being quoted in the Youngstown district at $39 a ton for second quarter shipment, compared with $37.50 a ton in the first quarter.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Cotton men representing the principal exchanges in the United States and Europe concluded today their conference with officials of the United States department of agriculture at which universal cotton standards were approved for international trade.

BERLIN.—Since the death of President Ebert, with its resultant financial uncertainty and tightening of credit, the wave of textile and dry goods failures which has been sweeping over Germany in the last few months has become intensified.

LONDON.—The London wool sections will close March 20, instead of March 24, as was originally intended.

RAILROAD NOTES

The Reading company asked the interstate commerce commission to authorize it to issue $7,500,000 in new equipment trust certificates. The corporation desires to buy new rolling stock which will cost in excess of $9,000,000.

The Ann Arbor railroad asked permission to issue and sell $1,000,000 in five-year 6 per cent notes to meet expenditures already made for additions and betterments.

The Norfolk & Southern was given a final value by the interstate commerce commission of $21,622,000 on its properties owned and used, $6,500 on its properties owned but not used, and $2,804,465 on properties used but not owned, as of June 30, 1924. The valuation also includes property of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad company and the Carthage & Pinehurst Railroad company.

An interstate commerce commission hearing will be held April 27 at Seattle to consider applications of northwestern railroads to reduce through passenger rates from Chicago, St. Louis and other midwestern terminals to the Pacific coast. The railroads desire to let the rates for the shorter distances remain unaffected in making the reduction on through passenger traffic.

Railway equipment orders in the second week of March, aggregated 20,000,000 and included 90 locomotives, 1,342 freight cars and 6 passenger cars, according to Railway Age. With only one exception this was the largest amount of business to be reported for one week this year.

WHEAT DECLINE PARTLY CHECKED BY BIG BUYING

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation ran its course in the grain markets early in the day with a decline of around 4½c in wheat as compared with Friday's finish, May touching $1.62, a new low on the present downturn, and almost 44c under the high point on the January bulge.

All grains showed a disposition to respond to the news for the first time in several days, and there was sufficient buying on reports of a liberal export business in both wheat and rye, and a better domestic demand for corn and oats to bring about a sharp upturn, shorts covering freely during the day.

May wheat at the top touched $1.71¼, or 9½c over the early low and net gains for the day were 2¼@3c. Corn was 2½@3c higher, while oats gained 1¾@1⅞c and rye 2½@4c.

Big Losses Shown for Week.

The wave of liquidation which swept over the grain markets the last week carried September corn, all deliveries of oats and July and September rye to a new low for the season and while the inside figures were not maintained the finish found wheat 7⅛@11¼c lower, corn 2 1⅛@3¼c, oats, 3⅞@4¾c, and rye, 11¾@12c lower than a week ago. Provisions were generally firmer with lard ⅞c higher to 12½c lower, ribs 35@40c higher and bellies 23¾@30c higher as compared with the previous week.

Foreigners were on both sides of the wheat market, while the early break brought in good buying by exporters, who were removing hedges against estimated sales of over 1,000,000 bu wheat and 700,000 to 800,000 bu rye. Kansas City sold 1,500,000 bu wheat, including 400,000 bu to exporters and the balance to mills. There were some unfavorable crop reports from parts of Texas and western Oklahoma, rains having been too light to be of much benefit.

Sentiment More Bullish.

General sentiment was much more favorable to the buying side in all grains, the belief prevailing that there had been break enough and that liquidation had been thorough. Technically the markets were in a position to respond quickly to any good buying, and while all displayed considerable irregularity early there was no material pressure on the way up.

A betterment in the shipping demand for cash corn and oats, with 47,000 bu corn and 205,000 bu oats sold to the domestic trade had some effect on sentiment and the seaboard reported some oats sold for export. The trade looks for a fair increase in the visible supply of corn for the week and a moderate decrease in oats.

Lard in Strong Rally.

Lard broke early on scattered selling but received good support and rallied sharply, closing 20@27½c higher, while ribs were unchanged and bellies unchanged to 22½c lower. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export business at the seaboard was on a large scale. Germany was reported to have taken 300 loads, or 2,400,000 bu, wheat and rye, the wheat being largely low grade Manitobas. Exporters generally reported everything offered abroad had been accepted, and Russell's News estimated wheat sales at 1,000,000 bu and rye 700,000 to 800,000 bu. There was a good business on at the gulf for March, April, and May shipment.

Chicago handlers sold 30,000 bu wheat, 47,000 bu corn, and 205,000 bu oats to the domestic trade.

A better demand prevailed for cash wheat in the southwest, with red winter at St. Louis scarce and 2c higher, while hard winter was ½@1½c lower, with a good export demand. Kansas City was unchanged to 2c higher. Local basis was unchanged, with No. 2 red 7@8c over May, and No. 2 hard May 1c under.

Readjustment continues between cash corn and futures, and the basis on spot was firmer. No. 3 grades were 7@9c; No. 4 grades, 7@14c; No. 5 grades, 13@30c, and No. 6 grades, 31¼@37c, under May. Outside markets were unchanged to 2½c higher, with a good demand.

Offerings of cash oats were not large, with the basis firmer at ¼@1c over May for No. 2 white and ¾@2c under for No. 3 white.

Local grain receipts Saturday: Wheat, 26 cars; corn, 136 cars; oats, 20 cars; rye, 3 cars, and barley, 9 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

A better tone was noticeable in the grain trade at the close, private cables offering more encouragement as to export business. The liquidation was regarded as over but local sentiment was inclined to be mixed, a number of pit traders favoring sales on all bulges. There is more disposition, however, to buy on the sharp breaks, on the part of trade leaders.

The wild fluctuations in wheat prices, especially the 15c break on Friday, brought out a suggestion from Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, the grain exchange supervisor, that the large volume of trading indicates clearly the desirability of some action being taken to prevent destructive fluctuations. The grain exchanges, Dr. Duvel has said, of late have it in their power to pass regulatory measures to prevent wide fluctuations.

Leading export houses at the seaboard who have been bearish of late were over on the bull side of wheat yesterday, regarding the decline sufficient to put the market in better shape.

A heavy freeze in Oklahoma killed the fruit buds there yesterday and created apprehension as to injury to winter wheat. A message from Oklahoma City said western Oklahoma needs rain. The warm rains forecast from the southwest that the rains reported Thursday were insufficient. This was reflected in the advance of 5½c in July wheat at Kansas City, with the close at the top at $1.43¾, a net gain of 2½c for the day, against 1⅝c on May, the July discount being 10c.

It is understood that Arthur W. Cutten will be back in Chicago Sunday. A phone message from him at Baltimore yesterday found him as bullish as ever.

There was heavy buying of corn toward the last by houses who were the largest sellers on Friday, advancing the price 4¼c.

The break in wheat prices brought a decided increase in the buying orders for flour at all leading centers, business being the best in several weeks. A Chicago miller reported an increased demand for rye flour.

May rye was down to $1.22, a local short buying 95,000 bu at that price, showing a break of 60c from the high point of the season. The impression of the trade is that the market has had its break.

STOCK MARKET RECOVERS LOSS AS WEEK ENDS

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Close.	Net chge.
20 railroads	90.87	89.06	89.62+	.99
20 industrials	139.30	137.89	139.00+	.44
40 stocks	116.08	113.97	116.35+	.25

New York, March 14.—Stock prices moved upward today after an early period of heaviness during which many issues were hammered down one to two points. The recovery signalized the end of enforced liquidation resulting from the recent drastic decline in stock prices and the approach of tax day.

The advance was led by such standard industrials as United States Steel common, American Can, American Locomotive, General Electric and Mack Trucks, which showed net gains of about ½ to 3½ points. A late drive against St. Paul issues, due to the circulation of reports that bondholders' committees were being formed, failed to unsettle the general list. St. Paul preferred was driven down 2½ points to a record low of 14½ and the common duplicated its low of 6½ of ⅞ on the day.

Public Utilities Are Strong.

Public utilities continued to give a good demonstration of group strength, a fresh outburst of buying in American Water Works sending that stock up over 3 points to a record high of 44⅜. Utah Securities showed a net gain of 2 points at 65, after selling as low as 61½. Laclede Gas touched a record top at 167 and then slipped back to 165 for a net gain of 1 point on the day. West Penn Power closed 3 points higher at 118. Jordan Motors broke over 4 points to 9⅝ and then recovered half its loss. Hayes Wheel established a record low at 28 and then bounded to 32⅜ for a net gain of nearly a point. Heaviness also was shown by American Lead and Zinc preferred, Atlantic West Gulf and West Indies preferred, Commercial Solvents B, Manhattan Shirt, which touched a new low at 23, and Stromberg Carburetor, all off 2 points or more.

Bank Reserve Strengthened.

Otis Elevator jumped 4½ points to a record top at 104½ and St. Joseph Lead attained a new peak at 51½, closing at 50, for a net gain of 2%. Good buying also was noted in American Car and Foundry, American Radiator, Atlantic Refining, Norfolk and Western and United States Cast Iron Pipe.

The weekly clearing house statement disclosed a considerable strengthening of reserves in anticipation of tax day and government maturities. Loans, discounts and investments dropped $30,000,000 below the week before; cash in vaults, $2,329,000; net demand deposits, $14,322,000, and time deposits, $12,092,000. The reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank increased $49,000 and reserve in own vaults, $65,000. Aggregate reserve totaled $618,765,000, leaving excess reserve of $15,421,000, as against a deficit in reserve of $35,624,770 last week.

Philadelphia Gas Co. Now May Absorb Some Others

Philadelphia, Pa., March 14. — An announcement was made today that authorization will be asked of shareholders for the taking over of at least 75 per cent of the stock of the American Gas company by the United Gas Improvement company of Philadelphia. The American Gas company, a New Jersey corporation with an authorized capital of $15,000,000, owns or controls gas and electric light plants in Maine, Vermont, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania.

The plan for the merger provides that American Gas will declare a stock dividend of 22½ per cent and give the right to exchange one share of stock at $100 per value for two shares in a Pennsylvania corporation. It is then proposed to merge this corporation with the United Gas Improvement company on the basis of one share of United Gas for one share of the new stock.

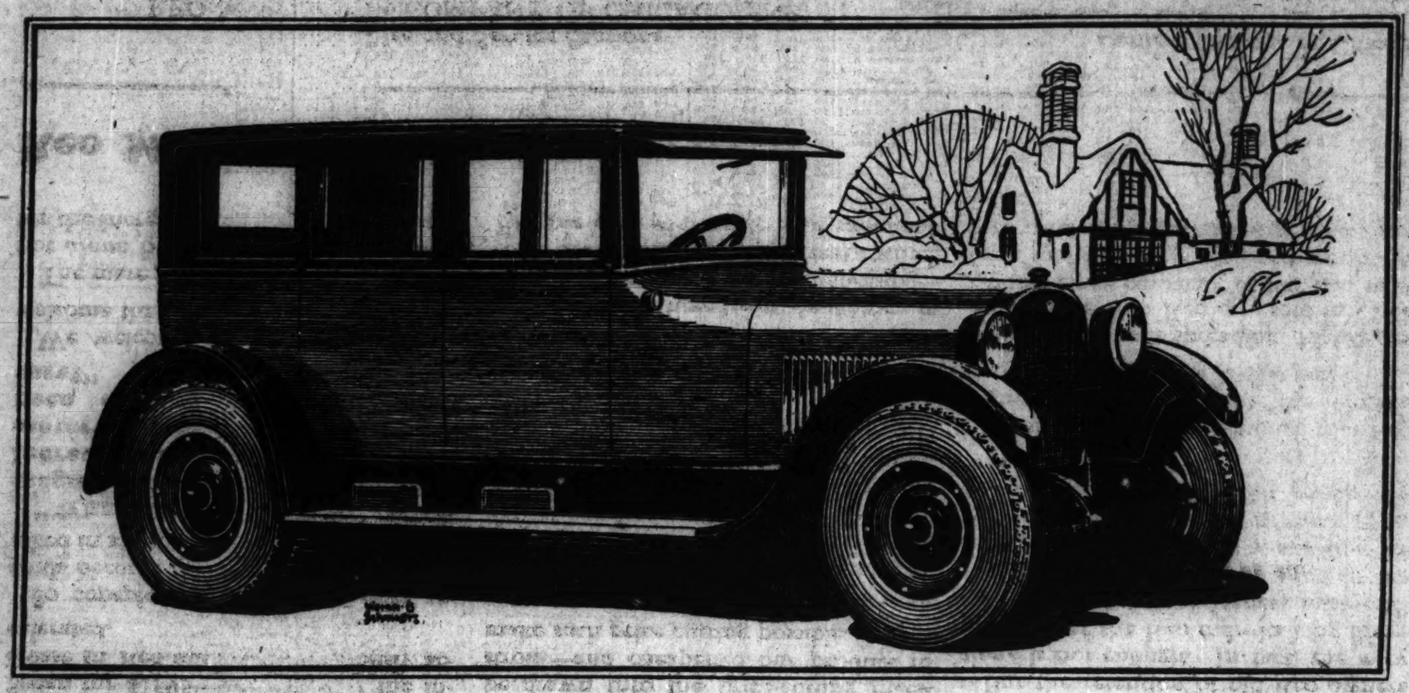
Why Chicago Motorists Are Flocking to Reo



Reo's Twentieth Anniversary Sedan is the First Full Sized, Four-Door Sedan in America at the Cost of An Open Model of Similar Mechanical Quality

A Frank Discussion of the Reasons for Reo's Outstanding Sales Records

Chicago's preference for Reo automobiles is being shown in most convincing fashion.

Since that day in August, 1922, when the first Phaeton Reo was introduced, Reo sales in Chicago and vicinity have grown steadily.

Month after month Reo's sales in Cook County have shown a substantial increase over the corresponding month of the previous year—in the very face of the fact that automobile sales in general, in this territory, were by no means keeping up with the Reo pace.

And now has come the Twentieth Anniversary Sedan—a 120-inch wheel base, 6-cylinder, four-door, 5-passenger Sedan for $1595—and instantly the increase in Reo sales is tremendously accelerated.

So conspicuous have Reo's sales records become that the question is being asked in all quarters:

"What is the answer? What magnet is drawing to Reo in ever-increasing numbers, thousands of motorists who all their lives have been driving other makes of cars?"

We welcome the question; and we welcome the opportunity to answer it.

The mere fact of increased sales would not alone be convincing. The reason for the increase is the thing that counts.

For there are many ways of stimulating sales—at least temporarily.

For instance, we might have changed either the mechanical design or the appearance of our car each year, which undoubtedly would have "drummed up" some additional sales—at a frightful cost to our old owners.

We might have "padded" the price of our car and thus have been enabled to give our dealers "trading margins" or "long" discounts—in order that they might fool the inexperienced buyer into thinking they were allowing him more for his trade-in than such trade-in was actually worth.

We might have permitted ourselves to be drawn into the price-cutting maelstrom—and cheapened our product to make such price cutting possible.

And if we had resorted to any—or all—of those expedients to stimulate sales, there would have been nothing remarkable about the increase we have shown. Nothing remarkable, that is, except the fact that an increase in sales built upon such a flimsy foundation could be only temporary, at best.

* * * * *

But we have done none of those things.

We have adhered—in designing, in manufacturing, and in merchandising—to all the time-honored policies of which Reo has been so consistent an exponent.

Reo's increasing popularity—Reo's increased sales—the convincing proof of Chicago's rapidly-growing preference for Reos—may be accepted as permanent; for the structure is built not upon sand but upon a rock.

And the rock upon which it is built is: "The Reo is a good automobile."

* * * * *

Reo owners know this; have always known it. That's why we can safely challenge any automobile—regardless of price—to show that it retains as high a percentage of its owners as does Reo. That's why Reo can claim for its very own the slogan "Once a Reo owner, always a Reo owner."

But the retention of old Reo owners alone is not enough. In fact, the very goodness of the Reo car—its long life—cuts heavily into our "repeat business," for the Reo owner keeps each of his purchases for so many years that he buys fewer cars in his lifetime than those who have the habit of buying less long-lived cars.

Consequently it isn't enough that Reo owners should know that "the Reo is a good car," important as that fact is.

But the news is spreading. Eighty per cent of the new Reo cars sold in Cook County since January 1 of this year have been sold to buyers who had never before owned a Reo car—but who have been told by some friend how good the Reo really is.

Now we want to show not only that the Reo car is good; but why it is good—and why, so long as Reo policies remain Reo policies, so long as Reo design remains Reo design, and so long as Reo manufacture remains Reo manufacture the Reo car can never be anything but good.

Reo's goodness, in other words, is not accidental, but deliberate and inevitable.

* * * * *

This is the first of a series of advertisements in which we expect to show why the Reo is as good as it is.

Reo's Creed for a Safer Chicago

We believe that the streets of Chicago can be made safe, for both pedestrians and motorists.

We believe that the vast majority of motorists are law-abiding citizens who try conscientiously to observe the traffic regulations; and we believe that that majority is entitled to protection from the depredations of the lawless minority by having the traffic laws strictly enforced.

We believe that the enforcement of the traffic laws should be uniform—neither fluctuating nor discriminatory; and that it should apply to taxicabs, to busses and to newspaper trucks, as well as to privately-owned vehicles.

We believe that traffic laws should be reasonable—and that all traffic laws not reasonably necessary, and not reasonably capable of observance and enforcement should be repealed or modified.

We believe that drivers who repeatedly violate the laws against speeding and reckless driving should be deprived of the right to drive.

We believe that the drunken driver is the most serious of all menaces; and we favor drastic jail sentences for this potential murderer.

We believe that the pedestrian, too, should be educated to co-operate in a permanent campaign for safety.

We believe that with the sincere and continuous co-operation of the motorists, the pedestrians and the law-enforcing authorities, the number of so-called automobile accidents in the city of Chicago can be swiftly and radically reduced.

FAMILIAR BY-GONES ARE REVIVED FOR THE SPRING

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Interwoven with the Rogers groups of statues, the F. S. Church drawings, the Little Lord Fauntleroy suits imposed upon small boys, the tight basque, and many other factors of another day, is surah. One seems to remember that one's grandmother always had a frock of this soft silk and that it was implicated in many juvenile dress dramas as well.

For a long time surah has occupied a place only in memory. This season, however, we have revived the once fashionable material. It has been used to a remarkable extent by French designers who have exploited it in sports wear, in utility frocks, and in some afternoon models. All of this is not so important when viewed as a solitary news item, but taken in conjunction with various other phases of the mode, one feels justified in setting down a broad generalization.

There is a retrospective mood in the air. The great designers have gone back to a number of the old fashioned fabrics. Surah is one of these. Taffeta is another. The serge weave developed in silk is a third testimony to what fashion is about. Of course, it goes without saying that these materials have not been taken back exactly as they were. The uplift movement has been at work on them, and the missionary looms have turned out changes startling to those who remember our first naive attempts.

For example, let us take taffeta. One sees this spring quite a great deal of taffeta au naturel. This occurs in the bouffante dance frocks so thoroughly endeared to our hearts, and also in evening gowns that have a less direct relation to the stiff, outspreading character of this weave. But when we speak of taffeta this spring we mean something quite different. We mean something that falls as submissively as crepe and which yields without a protest, therefore, to the behests of the straight line. Such fabrics, which are known under the general terms of crepe alpaca or crepe taffeta, are employed successfully as the rivals of crepe and the ribbed weaves.

Regarding the latter, one may ask, pertinently, "Are we due for so many rip-sodies this spring?" Yes and no. In coats for evening and afternoon wear one sees plenty of those fine, upstanding Ottomans, but in the province of the dress—here one is inclined to believe that we are not quite so abandoned in our approval as we were a few months ago. Surahs and sophisticated taffetas and—yes, crepe—seem to be successfully contesting that rock ribbed citadel.

Among the crepes, georgette stands out prominently. It is really remarkable about that material, you know. It manages to hold its job as well as Scheherazade or Henry VIII.'s last wife, and without, either, having to tax its powers of ingenuity as did those two wives of moody sovereigns. It never does anything diplomatic. It never tells any new tales in the way of weaves, and yet here it is holding firmly to the affections of that dour, exacting old sultan, fashion. It is here worse than ever. It does restaurant frocks and oodles of dinner gowns, it is lively in the evening, and it is selected frequently by the most modish of spring brides. Most amazing!

The on-folding Bed-coat! Here we have it, this latest version of the cape named after the Bedouin, in an evening interpretation of hydrangea blue satin lined with hydrangea pink satin and tied with a silver cord and tassel. Next, a sports suit combining white flannel skirt with navy flannel jacket. In the center the revival of surah is assured by this sports frock from Gabrielle Dorziat with its matching collar. The surah is plaided in blues and white. The cape's prominence in ensemble costumes is witnessed next by a costume combining cape of Havana brown Ottoman collared in red fox, with a matching georgette frock relieved by touches of beige and a lighter brown. Last, another ensemble of dark blue chiffon printed in greens and yellow lines its coat with black satin and exploits a wide border of red fox. A charming daffodil yellow straw hat faced and banded in black velvet gives asylum to a parrot head in green and yellow.

A remarkable number of twills seems to be circulating this spring, and silk serge is also to the fore, its employment in coats especially interesting. In Paris they have taken the navy blue silk serge and tashioned of it topcoats on the same mannish lines which we are accustomed to see executed in English woolens.

For a concrete visualization of the mode let us turn to today's sketches. In the center you will see our surah text illustrated in the charming frock designed by Gabrielle Dorziat, and, in fact, worn by that celebrated actress designer herself. Now a great many of the new surahs are plaided, for we don't seem to be any more successful in getting over plaids than we are in throwing off the georgette inflammation. In this case Mlle. Dorziat has plaided her surah in white and in two tones of blue, one the French hue and the other a darker tone. The front of the skirt is laid in box plaits, while the back is left perfectly plain. The square necked jumper is given the effect of having a band pressed about the hips by an incision of the material at the sides and by a consequent blousing of the upper section.

As for the jaunty scarf, this is finished by a cut-work monogram in blue of tiny yachts flying the Amenican flag.

At the right we show the scarf taking a leading part in the lovely ensemble costume of dark blue chiffon printed only at the front of the skirt and about the border of the coat in a design of brilliant yellows and greens. The coat is lined with black satin, and this fabric makes itself felt in characteristic narrow turn-back cuffs and in the graceful scarf. The final embellishment is constituted by a deep band of red fox bordering the full length coat.

This spring there appears to be absolutely nothing left of the old case of summer versus pelts. On the contrary, there is a complete entente between the two, and furs appear constantly on some of the filmiest and least encouraging of fabrics. Often these furs are dyed to match the costume, but this is not always the case, and it is astonishing to note the abundance of red fox shown in the spring collections. All the designers seem to have gone on a regular fox hunt, and everybody has come in at the brush.

Not all of the ensembles nowadays insist upon a coat. Some of them are attended by the cape. The fact of it is that this latter garment, after dozing for at least a year, has waked up with a start and is now stretching its sleep numbed members. Although by no means a rival to the coat, it appears for sports wear and more formal occasions in various guises.

We show second from the right an ensemble that elects a cape rather than coat. The frock itself is of that lingering material, georgette—or it may be crepe de chine—in the still fashionable tone, Havana brown. The frock achieves immediate prestige by—playing diamonds as trumps. The beltless line is broken by three diamond shaped squares—the first, a light pinkish beige; the second, a deeper tint; the third, Havana brown. This same tri-tone treatment is apportioned to the sleeves.

Speaking of capes, there is also that one at the left. The circular cape with the hood in the back that may either fall or be drawn over the head—here is one of the brand new cape theories advanced by Paris. It is called the Bedouin cape, and the lady who chooses to take up her Bedouin and walk may do so in various fabrics—those suitable to either daytime or evening. In this case it happens to be designed for evening and is made of hydrangea blue satin lined with hydrangea pink satin.

Our last model is a little resort sports suit with blue flannel coat and white flannel skirt plaited on one side.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

YOU SIMPLY MUST HAVE A FLARE.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Paris News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Flares and rumors of flares have been headlined before, while the straight line silhouette walked away with the palm of popularity. We would allow as many decorations on a tube dress as the totem pole flaunts, but we insisted on the totem pole line. Paris couturiers have been making up tempting variations of this straight line and fashionable women have seemed content to stick to it, without venturing to attempt the flaring skirt to any extent. However, the ghost of the gracefully full skirt has walked beside the tube line right along, as is the way of coming fashions, and now, all of a sudden, it has become the vogue, simultaneously with the spring openings, which give the flaring line their unanimous O. K.

While the mannequins paraded in hundreds of variations of the ampler silhouette at the first reception of Jean Patou the other night, Lady Cunard, Comtesse de Polignac, Baroness de Meyer, and other superlatively smart women, clad in ravishing gowns that showed the same flaring lines, watched the new creations and gave in their costumes the authoritative approval. You simply must have a little flare about your spring clothes somewhere, even if it is no more than a couple of flouting—and flaring—panels.

All of this means, of course, complications of cut and despair to the amateur with ambition, scissors, and new material. They look simple enough, goodness knows, these new models, but they are cut up into intricate pieces, seamed, gored, and godeted until the result is the perfection of artistic simplicity—in effect only.

Take, for example, our first offering, which appears to the casual eye no more than a full gathered skirt and straight bodice. It is, malheureusement for the petite couturiers, as gored, godetted, and seamed as any. The bodice, cut from printed crêpe georgette showing mauve and rose flowers on an old blue ground, is cut into gores beneath the arms, so that the slender lines of the figure are faithfully followed. At the waist line there is a series of shirred lines to create an effect of the crushed girdle. The skirt is made entirely of flaring gores, neargodets, narrow at the top and quite wide at the bottom. The result is a sort of flower shape, that ripples with irresistible grace when in motion.

This pastel harmony of georgette is worn over a slender slip of dull gold tissue, and the scarf which makes floating panels from the shoulders is also dull gold. That color scheme is worthy of a word, for such delicate tones predominate in the new fashions for afternoon and evening. There are few brilliant colors shown this season; rose-beige, putty, mauve, gray green, and old fashioned baby blue have replaced them.

It looks like a spring of light and lively shades even for street clothes and tailleurs. The new color combinations are certainly a lot less daring, but what they lack in audacity they make up in artistic qualities. They are refined and dainty, and they go well with the new graceful silhouette, which would look garish promoted in bright colors and striking combinations.

The fitted bodice and flaring skirt of many gores presents the season's line in this figured silk gown.

For evening the lifted waistline in front forms the center of drapery of skirt and bodice.

Evening gowns are made brilliant with embroidery and are fringed and draped.

Checked sports dresses have circular skirts and straight jumpers.

Our second offering shows another interpretation of the ampler silhouette, along with other color harmonies. This shows the concentration of fullness in front, and the tendency to hike the waist line up, which Chanel and other creators are featuring.

Anna (Madeleine and Madeleine), who created this model, has drawn the fullness into drapery at the center front, and has lifted the waist line here to accentuate this. The skirt flares in soft ripples of the black crêpe satin in front, and is split, faced with dull orange and folded back, so that the circular movement makes cascades from the large ornament of pearls that joins the V of the décolleté to the skirt draper.

Along with the lifted waistline comes its companion, the uneven hemline, definitely longer in back than in front. The diagonal lines that are produced in this way are flattering to the slender figure, and they have a nice sweep and grace which fits in well with the ideas of the new season, which are to get away from the cast iron rigidity of the narrow silhouette. And now that the tube tunic is receding out of the scene, we can do a little mad slinging and admit that traditional feminine grace of line which has been sung down the ages was pretty badly treated by these encasing tubes that were so unyielding and ungraceful. The Parisian was more than ordinarily stubborn in her adherence to that silhouette, and she was well backed up by her American sisters, heaven only knows why, except perhaps that it was heralded as youthful.

They are showing us, however, in the February openings that flares and full tunics can be quite as rejuvenating, and in addition that they are beautiful in themselves. For a long time Madeleine Vionnet was practically the only consistent adherent of flowing lines and draperies, and now they have all joined her, to the practical exclusion of the straight unbelted tube dress.

Our third model makes use of fullness in another accepted manner. Brandt has shifted the godets and flares to the left hip, cutting the gown from silver tissue of almost chiffon suppleness, and balancing this fullness with a scarf sleeve for the right arm only. The robe is embroidered all over with a large scroll motif done with diamonds and coral, and coral and diamond fringe edges the scarf sleeve. The irregular line of the décolleté is another interesting item, for many of the newest evening gowns are given odd neck and shoulder lines. From the left shoulder is hung a panel of coral chiffon which trails to court length, and which may be carried over the left arm, of course.

Our last offering brings several fashion messages for sports clothes. The first and most noticeable of these is the check as a design for sports materials. The material here is a dull blue and beige checked wool, and it is one of the prominent items in making sports clothes. They are showing checked sweaters, checked blouses, checked linings and, naturally, millions of variations of checked bands on plain materials. In this case the checked material is banded around the skirt with beige kasha, and the smart little collar and cuffs are of the same.

The skirt of this model is a highly acceptable version of the flaring skirt for sports, with its double godets set in at the sides and side front. The checks are so expertly matched that this skirt presents an appearance of being one piece.

2218—Woman's and misses' slip. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material. The hot iron transfer pattern 713 comes in blue only, and costs 15 cents.

2286—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yard of 18 inch contrasting.

2095—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

PATTERN No. 2095 is cut in sizes from 16 years up to 46 inches bust measure, so one can see it is a design that will be suitable alike for young girls and women, and for the slight or full figure. The dress is cut in two pieces—back and front—then there are short or three-quarter length sleeves, a vest, collar, and front panels forming pockets.

The front and back of the dress are slashed in from the underarm edges, the lower slashed edges gathered and brought back in place, so that the seamline will be an unbroken one from armhole to hem. The front of the dress is slashed at the neck, then faced and rolled back with the collar, forming revers. The edges of the short sleeves may be faced or bound and not trimmed, or some cross stitch design could be embroidered—either as a band entirely around the sleeve or some conventional design just across the top of the sleeve.

The longer sleeve may be trimmed with braid or embroidery along the line of small perforations that run from top to bottom on the outside. If bound, this binding could be carried around the bottom of the sleeve, and several buttons sewed on just toward the front of the binding.

The front panels should be lined with silk or satin and then attached to the front—the perforations showing just where. It is rather a clever idea making them serve as pockets, and one that, no doubt, will appeal to many.

Pattern No. 2218 is for one of those popular slips that form part of every woman's wardrobe. It may be made of wash satin, crêpe de chine, cambric, or cotton voile in white or any desired color. One often sees these slips made of crêpe de chine and elaborately trimmed with lace. The bottom of the skirt, instead of having a straight, hemmed edge, may be cut in points, or round or oval scallops. This cut edge should be finished with a rolled hem and the lace insertion and edging gathered to it. However, the lace should not be set on full—just full enough so it will lie flat around the curves or points.

Lace medallions or rows of lace insertion set in horizontally will make the camisole top pretty. The shoulder straps may be made of the material, with hemstitched edges, or an inch and one-half wide ribbon or lace insertion may be used.

If the slip is cut to go over the shoulders, and the neck cut rounding across the back and in a razor deep "V" in the front, it will be necessary to work eyelets at regular intervals around the neck through which ribbon can be run. Or the neck may be finished with lace beading and edging. One rarely sees these slips with anything but shoulder straps, but the other way will allow the garment to hold in place over the shoulder and not slip about, as straps often do.

Where the fullness comes over the sides the edge to be gathered should be started at the end nearest the middle, with as narrow a margin as possible, and only growing to one-quarter inch wide at the outer edge. The next step is to cut a strip long enough to extend beyond each edge after the turning in has been done; and wide enough to cover the seam well. This is basted in position on the wrong side of the slip and stitched. Then a similar piece is set on, on the right side. Machine hemstitching is the most satisfactory finish, having the hemstitching go around the four edges. The top of the camisole may be finished with a hemstitched hem or casing through which ribbon is run.

Lightweight sateen will make a good slip for ordinary, every day wear, and if it is nicely made will not need any trimming other than the hemstitching.

The third dress in this group—pattern No. 2286—is for an unbelted, one piece design, buttoning on the left side of the front. The buttoning stops at a low waist line point, and below this the right front is laid in a plait that must be pressed well. For size 36 this dress measures at the bottom one and three-eighths yards.

Long, close fitting sleeves, also short ones, are provided for. The dart seam up the back of the long sleeve should have both edges faced with silk of some kind; then the two edges are brought together, as shown in the picture, stitched, and trimmed with buttons. The short sleeves are to be finished with turned back cuffs. The round collar may be made of the lining that is used to face the sleeves and made detachable or sewed to the dress, as one prefers.

There is another dress that must be cut with care. Right and left fronts are laid on the material separately. Be sure before cutting that the right side of the material when cut will be, respectively, for left and right sides. The pattern chart shows the right way to lay the pattern pieces on a single thickness of forty-two inch material, the material having a nap that must be reckoned with.

THOUGHTS FOR SPRING.

THESE are the days of March winds, and April showers are coming. And these are the days when we are thinking of spring, of getting into the open ourselves, and how nice it will be to have the children outdoors again. And, of course, we're thinking of spring clothing and overhauling the family wardrobe, and planning to replace worn or outgrown garments.

But have you thought how much happiness you can give to others just by giving clothes outgrown this year? You'll have a number of such garments, I know, and I wish you could know how many need them badly. Many a widowed mother, for example, who must be presentable to hold her job, and can't spare a cent for anything except food and rent, is wondering what to do, now that heavy coats and winter garments must be laid aside. Many a man, too, is in the same predicament.

And then there are the children—where we can help most of all. Springtime means a chance to get out of doors and play. But it also brings the need for sound shoes and stockings. Hundreds of children are discarding shoes which could be made to serve some poor child for a long time to come, with perhaps a half sole at most. Outgrown dresses, suits and coats will help tremendously. Please remember the need and put all outgrown garments to service this week.

Needs Artificial Leg.

"I have seen requests for artificial legs in your helping column and wish to ask for one for my boy, who has lost his right leg below the knee. He is 10 years old and 54 inches tall. He should have an artificial leg, but we cannot afford to buy it now, as my husband has work only two days a week.

I wonder if you remember, just before Christmas, the little girl, Ola, who wrote to us with a request for cork legs? Some one was kind enough and big hearted enough to send her a pair as a Christmas present. We hope this plea will touch some other generous heart.

Cheering Crippled Child.

"I wonder if any of your readers can send a little cheer to a crippled boy who lives on a farm south of Chicago? His parents, hard working people, have no money to spend to keep him amused. He is 7 years old, and cannot stand to walk, due to the spinal injury of several years ago. He is bright and I wish you could see the flood of joy that covers his face in turn for any favor bestowed on him. Have any of your readers books or paints or, in fact, anything that will keep him amused, which they would care to send? F. L."

You can't see the flood of joy and the appreciation of little Lawrence, if you can help him, for he will be out on his farm, and you, somewhere else, but you will know that it is there and that you have helped make his life more happy.

Asks Sales Books.

"Do you know of any one having books on salesmanship which are no longer in use? I am interested in studying them, but cannot afford to buy them. J. K."

This young man will be glad to call for the books, should you have them to offer.

Piano to Give.

"I will give my piano, which I am no longer able to keep, free of charge to some one who can pay the cartage charges. R. H."

Will this mean a dream come true to you, if you are the lucky person to get the piano?

Appeals for Friend.

"I am writing to you for help for a friend of mine who is in destitute circumstances. Her husband has been ill for four months and has gone blind. She has a little girl a year old and cannot work, because she is needed at home to care for her husband and baby. She and the baby are practically without clothing and would appreciate anything. She takes clothing size 40-43 and will be glad to make things over. Can some one help her? C. F."

We hope some one will find it in his or her power to help in this needy case.

Bed Outfit Complete.

"I have a full size brass bed, complete with spring and mattress, which I wish to offer to any one who needs it but cannot afford to buy it. M. E."

If you are crowded in your sleeping arrangements write in to us at once for this splendid bed offer.

They Want a Dog.

"We saw your offer of a bull terrier in the paper, Miss Brown, and my brother and I want a dog so badly. We love animals and would make him the happiest dog in the world. My brother is 10 and is blind, so the dog would be good company for him, too. May we have him, Miss Brown?

"S. C."

Can some one send a bull terrier to these brothers? Their letter came just after the terrier offered had been given away, and we hope there is another one somewhere looking for a home.

Help Her Grandsons.

"I am the grandmother of two boys, 9 and 11. We find it hard to keep them in clothing, as their father is an ex-soldier and still in a government hospital. We would be so thankful for some suitable clothing for them or some books. They are fond of reading and drawing, but we cannot afford to buy them books or materials. C. M."

How fast the boys do outgrow their clothing! Perhaps you have a son just a stage ahead of these lads who can pass on some discarded clothing and a few of his books to these less fortunate boys.

Mother-to-Be.

"I, too, am one of the prospective mothers who find it necessary to ask you to remember them when the baby clothes are offered. The little money that comes our way never reaches all the way around. I have nothing for this expected one and shall appreciate the smallest gift toward a layette. "A. E. L."

Would you like to have us send you this mother's address? She will be made happy by your gift, whether it is a whole bundle of infant wear or one tiny shirt.

Books for Engineer.

"I have a fifteen volume set of books published by the American Railway society which I wish to offer to some student or young man who is interested.

This set will certainly be a worthy addition to any young engineer's library. B. K."

This set will certainly be a worthy addition to any young engineer's library.

Superfluous Hair Now Removed Roots and All!

A harm to women prompted with superfluous hair is the wonderful Mahler method. It is totally unlike anything previously used, either electrical or the removal of hair by depilatories. It is the only home treatment ever invented that enables one to remove hair from the face, neck or arms in one's own home, without the assistance of an expert. The result cannot be doubted for the hair roots are killed the first time with the use of a stick of Mahler's Hair Destroyer. It can be had at any drug store. It is entirely harmless (a child could safely eat it), odorless and non-irritating. It is a thick paste and to thoroughly kill the roots it must be left on the skin at least perfectly smooth, hence, leaving not the least evidence of the hair's existence.

PARIS NIGHT LIFE

by Doris Blake

Most of Its Profits Come Out of English and American Pockets

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.] One of the most amazing sights of Paris night life is the ease with which the seemingly impossible is accomplished. Given the same area and the same numbers occupying it on an elevated or subway platform, you'd have an irritable, pushing, jostling mob. Because it is a dance floor in a city with an air of unrestrained gayety not to be found outside of it, they dance—a hundred or more couples—in spaces barely large enough to accommodate comfortably one-quarter the number.

It is said the restauranteurs, who gather in a healthy percentage of the millions Americans spend over here in a season, act on the principle that "you can encroach upon space though you cannot annihilate it."

In an out of the way place on the left bank, the other evening, I saw the principle executed phenomenally. So packed and jammed together were the tables in the comparatively small room that free space was limited to an aisle no wider than the one you reel down on your way to your Pullman seat. A piano and violin began that haunting query: "What'll I do?" A half dozen couples arose in answer. They tangoed and they two-stepped and they waltzed up and down that narrow passage, proving thereby that with a strong arm to protect you, miracles are not impossible in Paris night life.

Follow the Dancers.

They're dance crazy, these night lifers. You hear the older generation lamenting the deterioration of French cuisine, the tranquil dining atmosphere of the eighties, nineties, the passing of the dignified old proprietor in immaculate evening dress submitting a scheme for dining to favored clients.

"They bewail the vogue for terpsichorean and musical dinners," says one of the old time café owners, "but they patronize only the places where a crowd of dancers is to be found. When they entertain they take good care to go where they can dine to the strains of a blaring band and watch the dancers whirl around amid a crowded mass of tables."

Many of the famous old places have had to yield to the prevailing craze for the jazz band, since they could not afford to be run as museums. The tables were simply crowded closer to the walls, shoved tightly up against each other, so you have to be helped in and helped out again, the gentlemen of the jazz instruments invited to take a tiny corner at one end of the room, and a small square marked off in the center to answer the demands of a more exacting generation.

The Parisian night restaurant draws far the largest share of its profits out of English and American pockets. The French are unwilling to pay the extortionate prices, and avoid them.

Older Ones Cut Up.

A night resort frequented by pleasure seekers out to have a good time regardless of expense is a curious sight—rather more curious than delectable. Here, in Paris, as in New York and Chicago, you find the oldish gentlemen cutting up just a bit more foolishly than the young ones, in an attempt to extract the sum total of joy from the giddy hour. They are a bit less restrained in their revelry here perhaps, because the banks of the Seine are far, far away from the code governing their conduct back home.

But then—numbers of them have worked hard to get together the money to spend. And they do not come to Paris with their pockets bulging to attend revival meetings, nor do the folk back home quite expect that of them. Rather, they want a garish tale or two in undertones, for when they remain behind in the dining room to smoke, while maw and the girls go into the front room for coffee. In order to come back with these tales of Paris night life you have to join in the chorus of it. You can't sit back in a critical mood.

Frankness That's Surprising.

To the woman tourist, sans a Silas or a wandering eyed Jonathan, the frank acceptance of the courtesan by the French as a recognized member of the social organization is a matter of curiosity, or of deep chagrin, if she be an austere moralist.

The connection between Paris and its "light of love" is an old one. A number of women of their calling have played a more or less important part in history, which may be the reason for the tolerant attitude toward her today. Previous to and during the French revolution, her influence was no secret to the populace.

In spite of the edicts and laws to keep them in check, they ply their trade with a frankness that is surprising, if not appalling. The Parisian demi-monde is divided into a number of grades. The richer class of demi-mondaine, who frequents the more expensive night places, is credited with being cultured ofttimes, understanding a good deal about art, and able to hold intellectual conversation. She is more likely than not to be one of the most attractive looking and best dressed women in the café. But the gulf that separates the woman of the boulevards from the prostitutes of the Elysée and the Ritz is wider than that which exists between the latter and the grande dame. The middle class of the type includes at least three distinct local types: the grisette of the Quartier, the Montmartroise, and the woman of the boulevards. It is the latter class that with most difficulty escapes the dreaded recognition of the police, by whom they are immediately registered as prostitutes. The authorities are aided by women's jealousies. The regular habitués fiercely resent the competition of irregulars, and make efficient detectives.

The Butterfly Existence.

Enter Maxim's, through whose revolving doors 'tis said every second man speaks the English tongue. Lined up at the bar are the cocottes, mingling freely with the men, some of the latter unmistakably carried away by abstention from alcohol. The Bacchanalian tendencies of some of our finding themselves in a land unshackled by the bonds of compulsory citizens are matters of return compliment when the French laxity toward the fallen woman is commented upon.

At a table sits a young creature with a couple of English-speaking men. Presently a girl from an adjoining table gives her a sign. They get up and dance together, whether to more broadly advertise their presence or to compare notes on the developments of the evening is a matter of conjecture. But it is curious to see these dancing couples of girls. It's part of the life, and it is called gay here.

According to an old Chinese proverb a truthful courtesan is as great a miracle as a square egg. The French cocotte, owing to the nature of her calling, lies as outrageously as she feigns an affection which cannot exist.

You hear on the one hand expressions of pity rather than blame, on the ground that she has drifted into an irregular life through no fault of her own. Yet, the vicissitudes of these same unfortunates whom age has placed upon the retired list is a fertile source of merriment to writers in Parisian papers.

You wonder what becomes of them all, knowing "the days of wine and roses are not long." Some of them marry. If the girl has contrived to accumulate a substantial little dot, it does not seem difficult to get a husband of a sort.

But the dénouement of their singed butterfly existences reveal many tragic tales, just as in countries where they are not recognized as a necessary evil. The descent from the upper grades is easy, and helping hands are not stretched out generously to those who, through misfortune, illness, or folly, have sunk to the lowest depths.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Homely Ones Wear Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a young man for one and a half years. We are now engaged. I am satisfied with everything but his looks. He is not good looking. Whenever I see a handsome fellow I admire him. When I see a girl with a nice looking fellow I envy her. Is it because I don't love him as much as one sweetheart should love another, or is it because I am just one of those foolish young girls of 18 who falls for good looks? V. G. V."

The things that count in a man are his qualities and disposition, not his looks, dear. If the young man you are engaged to is ambitious, has a forceful character, is good to you, and thoughtful of the little things, you will be much happier with him than with one of the handsome ones, for they are vain as a rule, demanding much flattery and admiration, and will not wish to share the stage with you. Do not be envious of the girls who have good looking beaus, for the homely boys are the best bets, dear.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS—AND EVERYBODY LAUGHED

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that the black fish school, made up of sturdy members twenty feet long, that may weigh a ton, should stampede and run itself high up on the land and perish?

Yet just this thing often happens along the New England coast and is sometimes made to happen by the fishermen of the Faroe islands, where the American aviators stopped on their trip around the world. They go out in boats and drive the blackfish ashore.

The blackfish, the porpoises that leap so gracefully out of the water about all our harbors, are little cousins of the whale, and, as a matter of fact, not fish at all. They are mammals, nearer akin to the cow than to the barracuda. They suckle their young, and have red flesh like beef steak.

These blackfish like to go browsing about inlets, for there the food supply is more abundant. A school of ten of them, or of fifty, may frequent some small bay and furnish amusement to a fishing village by playing leap frog with the waves.

Then a day of folly and tragedy may come for the blackfish. They may be feeding at low tide when that peculiar thing that strikes most terror to the heart of a blackfish may happen to some old leader of the group. His belly may scrape bottom. If it does so, he is seized with a terror of being stranded. When that terror comes to him his conduct is always the same. He plunges straight ahead with all the strength of his great body. Not only does he plunge, but all his fellows follow his example. The blackfish are the sheep of the sea. They follow the leader.

If the head of this leader is pointed toward deep water the situation works itself out without unforeseen incident. If, on the contrary, it is pointed toward some such obstacle as the North American continent the procedure is the same. The leader, followed by the school, dives blindly ahead. All fling themselves high up on the beach, are helplessly stranded, and die. Schools containing as many as 1,200 blackfish have been known to thus commit suicide.

If the stranding of blackfish happens near a village the event is a windfall to the fishermen. They rush to the scene, and each puts his mark on certain animals and claims them. These marks are respected by the other fishermen. The fat from the carcasses is refined, and the "mellon" is taken out of the head. This mellon is a cavity containing oil of a very superior quality used for lubricating fine machinery. Thus does the stranding of the blackfish become a profitable occasion to a fishing village.

O, DON'T YOU REMEMBER—

O don't you remember the THING, Ben Bolt,
That got in our room one night?
By its bounces and bounds
It weighed hundreds of pounds,
And caused us to tremble with fright.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

FUZZY WUZZY FINDS HAWK FEATHER.

By Raymond Kelly

THE snow was all gone, except from way up in the mountains where it stays almost always, and the birds were beginning to come back. Fuzzy Wuzzy was glad to see them, because they had traveled so far, and had seen so much. He could understand their language, too, and would sit for hours on the old hemlock stump, listening to their chatter, for in that way he learned many things.

The robins were among the first to come, and they told him of places where it was almost always summer, where the holly trees were loaded with fat red berries and the rivers never froze. They explained to Fuzzy how the little brooks which flowed down Misty Mountain came together and formed creeks and how these creeks also flowed together to become a river that grew and grew as it went singing on its way to the great blue ocean. The robins told him also about the vast canebrakes where so many of his cousins lived.

It was all interesting to Fuzzy Wuzzy, and he longed to talk it over with Hawk Feather, but he hadn't seen the little Indian for a long, long time now.

"Maybe," thought Fuzzy Wuzzy, "Hawk Feather has moved away, or perhaps he doesn't know me any more, because I am a whole year old now! Perhaps he's afraid of me and he's hiding."

That thought made Fuzzy Wuzzy feel sad. He didn't want Hawk Feather to be afraid of him, you see. So he asked his friends, the robins, to fly over to the Indian village on the prairie and to tell Hawk Feather to come to visit him. The robins gladly went on the errand, but they didn't find Hawk Feather the first time or the second, either. So Fuzzy Wuzzy was worried. He was sure something terrible must have happened to Hawk Feather.

But one day when the little bear had just about given up all hope of seeing his friend again, he met him right there on Misty Mountain and, best of all, Hawk Feather not only knew him but was not the leastest little bit afraid! My, how glad they were to see each other again.

"Where have you been?" asked Fuzzy Wuzzy, and Hawk Feather answered him, "I have been to the city."

"What is a city?"

"It is a place where the people are as plentiful as are the trees on this mountain, and they do not live in tepees, but in houses made of brick and stone. Some of these houses are four or five times as tall as the greatest cedar tree, and the people who live at the top of them ride up to their homes in an iron box that pulls itself. Their drinking water runs up to them through a pipe that is made of iron, too."

"Hawk Feather," asked Fuzzy Wuzzy, "is all that you tell me true?" and Hawk Feather answered: "I am the son of a warrior and I speak only the truth."

"But how did you get to the city? It is too far to walk, is it not?"

"I flew there with my brother, who is many years older than I, and learned to fly in the land beyond the great ocean. There he slew many enemies and as a reward he now flies in a machine in which others may ride with him. He visits now at the tepee of our father and many of our people have flown with him, for all our warriors are brave."

"I, too, am brave," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, "and I must see this wonderful machine of your brother's and must fly with him."

"You shall do so," said Hawk Feather. "I will speak to my brother, and get him to take you up with him, but do not come to our village until I come after you, for our people are all great hunters, and you would not be safe unless you came there with me."

There were dinner guests. Jack made a gallant attempt, drawing out a guest's chair and when the guest was seated pushing the chair toward the table.

The guest remarked, "Why, you are a perfect little gentleman. Who taught you all these nice things?" "O," remarked the boy, "daddy always does it for mamma when there's company."

We had not had our car long when one rainy day it skidded and almost turned over, but fortunately no one was hurt.

About a week later, I heard a thump in the dining room and a lusty cry, and running in I found Billy had fallen.

"Well, how did this happen?" I asked as I picked him up.

"I was dess playin' wockhorse in my chair and it stidded me," he sobbed.

Jimmy looked up astonished, and said: "And whose going to be my mother then?"

TIME TO THINK OF TOP COATS

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, address envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK—[Special Correspondence.]—Another spring of the year has rolled around, and the top coats are in order to replace the heavy overcoats which have been keeping the wintry blasts from the masculine chests. A lightweight coat is a necessity in a man's wardrobe, for the in-between seasons. There is nothing more enervating than wearing a heavy overcoat in mild weather. And nothing more unsafe than to leave off a top coat altogether before it is warm enough to go out in a suit only.

The spring sees no vital changes in the top coats. Last year's will do, if you don't want to invest in a new one. What difference there are in this spring's models are in the same line as the changes in the suit coats—lower gorge, lower buttons and pockets, and a little more drape.

According to my usual custom when a new season comes around, I went to the showrooms of a high class manufacturer of men's clothing, to see what he would have on the market for his trade this season. The best looking and newest coat being offered is a draped coat, with the lower gorge, pockets, and buttons mentioned above. The coat has three buttons. It comes in the various colors that are fashionable these days.

A second top coat which this spring will find popular is one that is just about as it was last fall. It is a loosely cut coat of three buttons, less draped than the coat described above, with a medium gorge, and not quite so low a placement of pockets and buttons—a coat for a man of conservative tastes who is afraid to try anything new.

For knockabout wear, entirely informal, is the raglan sleeved coat, which is going to see a renewed interest in itself this spring. Spring even more than the fall is a season which tempts man into extremely negligee attire. The raglan coat is full draped with slash pockets and a general air of nonchalance. It is the type of coat one should have in one's wardrobe if one can afford it as an extra coat to don when the spirit of carefreeness seizes one, and one wants to look as informal as the spring air makes one feel. But it won't do for all round wear when you want to look correctly dressed in the evening when you are wearing your dinner coat.

If you want to own a coat that is especially and exclusively for evening wear for spring, summer and fall, you will be interested in a dark blue opera coat, as they call it, which may be used with either dinner coat or full dress. It is lightweight, of gabardine, and with velvet collar. It is a well draped coat, full in the back. Such a coat cannot be worn with business attire, but is strictly for evening.

The length of a top coat must be taken into consideration when you are buying one. The average length of a coat for an average figure, which is about 5 feet 10 inches, is 46 inches. The coat should come about an inch below the knee. If too short or too long, it will look awkward.

Colors for top coats are brighter and lighter than ever, without losing a claim to good taste. The colors are never loud in their good coats—they are soft but authoritative. Overplaids are frequent. But they are not so conspicuous that they hit one in the eye before the rest of the coat comes into view.

Such color schemes as this are attractive. A smoke blue coat with a pastel green overplaid; smoke blue with a brighter blue overplaid. Smoke blue, by the way, is one of the biggest sellers for top coats this year. Next in popularity are top coats of a decidedly lavender cast, plain color or with overplaid. These lavender top coats look extremely well with the various shades of gray suits which will be much in evidence this spring.

If you want a top coat that will defy some of the spring moisture, there is a showerproof coat from the factories of the above mentioned maker of men's clothes, which is made in such a way that a certain amount of dampness and rain is withstood. The material is woven in such a way that it is comparatively showerproof.

Why do Americans "burn out" and die sooner than other nations?

In the "prime of life," between the ages of 30 and 45, more Americans in every thousand sicken and die than in eight other leading white nations. Government census bureau figures for the period just before the war prove this.

What is the reason? We earn more and spend more. Eat better food. Wear finer clothes. Live in larger houses. Enjoy more comforts than any other people on earth.

Yet, just when life means most to us and its rewards are greatest, health and vitality break down and death comes before its time.

Why? Physicians blame the speed and nervous strain of American life, coupled with lack of deep, unbroken sleep. Nothing else will repair wear and tear on brain and body, keep you young and fit.

Turn back the covers tonight and see what you are sleeping on. Compare it with Simmons springs and mattresses. Styles for every taste, at the lowest prices clean, new bedding can be bought for. But be sure to find the Simmons label.

BUILT FOR SLEEP

The Man Who Came Back— STRONG!

See What Biochemistry Can Do for Human Beings of Almost Any Age! Men and Women Offered a New Nourishment That Rebuilds the Tissues! Amazing Return of Virility and Vigor!

An astounding story of suddenly acquired health—and every syllable true. To the left is a photo of J. P. Shaw before he staged his remarkable comeback. Spring waters, diets, even drugs had no effect on his ailing condition. Still in his forties, he was an old man. Then biochemistry—with the result seen in the picture on the right!

In the second picture of Mr. Shaw, taken two months later, you see what happens when biofeeding brings new life cells to an impoverished system. His neuritis is gone; the old sluggishness swept away; he looks like another man, feels twenty years younger. Back to his business of building, working harder than ever.

"OLD acquaintances don't recognize me," says this New York contractor and capitalist. I shouldn't think they would! He doesn't look much like the man who had so recently sought the shelter of a sanitarium. Biofood has seemingly given him the energy of a dynamo.

This new form of nourishment does the most remarkable things for men and women of whatever age.

Biofood gives an old man a new impulse that is usually felt within a few days.

It brings run-down women to a tingling state of health often within two or three weeks.

The most aggravated case of constipation entirely disappears in a majority of cases where biofeeding has been followed for a couple of months.

Biofood is not a cure. It is a food. Just a highly developed, scientific combination of the elements every human system must have for growth and repair. Modern cookery has pampered our palates at the expense of our physical being. Our meals don't contain enough sulphur, enough phosphorous (of which healthy bodies must contain more than a pound!) enough iron. Biofood supplies these and other minerals; the right quantity of each.

That is why a man's physical powers that have commenced to abate are restored to a remarkable degree shortly after biofeeding gives his organs stamina.

That is why women who thought certain ailments their natural lot have found Biofood a source of joyous health they had thought gone with girlhood.

Nervous disorders are dispelled by biochemistry; so is indigestion, gastritis, and even rheumatism. Diabetics who had hoped at best for a little relief have reported a return to pristine health. All due to the readjustment of the system which takes place when it receives the right materials with which to build health! Will Biofood do these things for you? It is natural that it should. It is a scientific certainty that it would.

Can this be the same person? It is. Matilde Hoffman required five months of biochemistry to bring about this transformation, but it was worth it! Malnutrition had made her an "old woman." Proper nourishment—not dieting—brought health. How much longer will women take "tonics" for anemia? Or turn to cosmetic makers for relief from wrinkles? What "cure-all" has ever done what Biofeeding did for Mrs. Hoffman? What "beautifier" could tranquilize and smooth a face as biochemistry has done in the case above?

How Biofood Does Its Work

In no sense is Biofood a substitute for the things you are eating now. You continue to eat what you like, and as much as you like. Furthermore, you will have a new relish for your food; a robust appetite. Incidentally, you will get complete, restful sleep.

There is no Biofood "age." There are few human beings of this day who do not need it. Your age—in the medical sense—is not a matter of years, but the number of dead cells. Build new cells, by the millions, and your mental and physical being will have a buoyancy you may never have known. Christine Hollingworth, another lady who tried Biofood, had done just about everything to overcome the lassitude that had made her a mere onlooker in life. In two months she was once more a normal, energetic woman with days and nights crowded with her household duties and social activities.

So vitally important is this proper balance of nourishment that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company says in its latest public bulletin: "Eat your A B C's! Many of our physical ailments could be avoided by proper selection of food." What an endorsement!

When the Organs Are Restored to Their Full Functioning

Not all who adopt this better balance of nourishment are invalid, or even ailing—in the sense of being "sick." Many who had thought themselves normal have found that biofeeding has brought a vitality and vivacity they had forgotten. One grows accustomed to a sluggish state; becomes resigned to a general slowing up; under the quickened impulse from perfect nourishment they awaken to a new interest in life!

So, don't wait until you must have this marvelous stimulus to cells and tissues. Try it now, see if you don't soon experience an altogether new thrill to living.

For Children

Parents often think a child normal when it is only Youth that keeps active a body clogged with waste (cellular waste which no laxative can dislodge). Children thrive on a small allotment of Biofood; quickly show it in their progress at school, in their play. Biofood did wonders for a little girl who was not well; Cora Slavik made a marvelous improvement in less than a year, according to her mother's letter.

Control of Your Weight

Those who are underweight will find that perfect assimilation soon rounds out the parts that need it. If you are overweight, don't waste time and money on "reducing courses" when all you need is the full elimination that prevents the piling-up of tissue fat. A few months, perhaps just a few weeks, will correct the condition completely.

We owe the present practical form of biochemistry for the body to the patient, eight-year study which the Kühne brothers have given first in Germany, and later here in America. It is only since the many elements were combined in Biofood that its benefits were so handily available to the public. And the Kühne brothers have arranged an easy way whereby any individual may learn all about this new and remarkable means to health—and obtain a supply of it for their own use.

To Those Who Wish to Try Biofood

Biofood comprises three simple elements, conveniently taken at home or wherever you may be: A is a tablet eaten after each meal; B is dissolved in a drink of water before eating; a teaspoon of C once daily. That's all—but how fresh and fit you become! And it's a genuine, natural, and lasting improvement. Pages might be written of the countless accomplishments to the credit of Biofood. But the best way is to have you try it. This you may do—but first learn exactly what it is, and exactly why it does the things it is sure to do for you.

A book of vital truths is now offered the general public, and it will give you facts valuable to anyone who values health. No thoughtful person can ignore this new light on bodily welfare. Not until you have The New ABC of Health can you grasp a small part of the great good biochemistry stands ready to render every human being. Send this day for your copy. Those whom Biofood has built up declare it worth a thousand dollars. The specialist who did as much for you would surely be entitled to a hundred. But anyone who believes that buoyant health is worth even a ten dollar bill had better send for this free book offered below:

La, the Bridegroom!

At a wedding supper the bridegrooms was called upon for a toast. Before the supper he had pleaded to be excused, but to no avail.

In his confusion he awkwardly arose, and, placing his hand upon his bride's shoulder, blurted out, "This has been forced upon me."

In the uproar which followed the bridegroom and also the bride must have experienced their most embarrassing moments. E. S.

Even Policeman Laughed.

I had been driving a big car, so when sister asked me to drive her small car I did not hesitate to start off in it.

Everything went well until Main street was reached, and a policeman held up his hand for me to stop. Of course, I put all force on what would be the brake on my car, but went jumping like a rabbit right toward the policeman. He hopped aside and we went skipping by, to the amusement of onlookers and my chagrin.

Even the policeman, when I finally stopped and walked back, was convulsed with laughter and asked me if I thought I was driving a bucking bronco. E. D.

Apologies All Around.

We had moved to a new town and valued a letter of introduction a friend had given. It would bring us into contact, she said, with one of the finest women in the town.

Settling was a tiresome job. While I was wrestling with the problem one afternoon the bell rang. I answered, and was greeted by a woman who said she was selling a new line of desserts. My patience was at low ebb, and I informed her abruptly I had no time to consider desserts of any sort at that particular moment. To add point to my remarks, I closed the door in her face.

When we were at last installed in our new home I decided to make use of my letter. I prepared with care for my call, anxious to make an impression worthy of the friend who sent me. Imagine, then, how my poise left me when the woman who presented herself to me as the addressee on my letter proved to be the dessert agent of a few weeks ago!

She explained that in the interest of her church society she had gone about town selling desserts. When I apologized for my rude behavior she answered with an apology.

"I should not have disturbed you at such a time," she said, "but I had not learned that a new family had moved into that house," which made an easy way out of a bad situation for both of us. E. T. A.

When Hair Grew Long.

In an office where I formerly worked, the girls were left alone quite a bit as the boss was out a lot on business.

One afternoon we got into a friendly hair. A few of the other girls were to act as judges. Out went the hairpins and we sat in our swivel chairs, slowly turning around with majestic grace, awaiting the judges' verdict.

We were talking so loudly that we did not hear when the boss came down by argument as to which of the three of us had the longest and thickest the hall and before we knew it, there he stood with a customer. To tell the truth I think the boss was far more embarrassed than we were, but luckily the customer had a good sense of humor, so we were spared a bawling out. I. D.

Even Worse.

I am a jeweler in a small town. One morning a brisk looking, well dressed young man entered my store, which is next door to the hotel. He asked to look at fountain pens, chose a $6 one, and, reaching in his pockets, drew out two handfuls of dimes, nickels, and pennies, and began counting out change.

"Well," I remarked jovially, "it looks as though you had trimmed the boys at penny ante last night."

For a moment he stared at me blankly and then he smiled. "Hardly," he answered. "I am the minister who is conducting revival meetings here. This is part of the collection." G. L. K.

She Was Mistaken.

I had just read three books on palmistry and was quite impressed with my own knowledge of the subject.

Not long afterward I met an interesting young man at a dance.

In the course of our conversation I remarked, "I see by the size of your little finger that you are a much better writer than talker—in fact, you find it rather difficult to express yourself by mouth."

I thought he looked at me rather queerly, but it wasn't until his friends informed me he was a champion debater and a successful lawyer that I knew why.

And—I haven't seen him since. E. S.

Best of Intentions.

After moving from a large city to a small town I had met my neighbor across the street, who had a lovely little girl. One day while sitting on my porch I saw a strange man come along. He stopped and talked to the child as she played. Presently he started off down the street leading her.

I could stand it no longer and rushed over to inform my neighbor that a funny looking old man was taking away her little girl. She calmly replied it was her grandfather.

After that I did not try to look after other people's children. E. C.

Baby Was Busy.

My most embarrassing moment was one afternoon when I had taken my baby daughter, then just toddling around, and gone to call on a friend. A euchre party was in full swing. The women had placed their hats and coats in a room just off the living room. I sat down to watch the players. The hostess informed me my daughter could not hurt anything in the cloakroom, and not to worry, but let her play in there. I was uneasy, but let her play. Finally, upon looking up, I spied daughter coming out of the room with her hands full of fruit, cherries or grapes that she had picked off the hats. She brought them out and put them in my lap.

Every one there laughed and had a good time over it, but I never want to go through that again. H. G. S.

Fun for the Force.

The way my Bostonian boss misplaces his Rs is always a source of amusement to the clerks in our office. Recently, in his absence, another stenographer and I stepped into his private office.

I sat down in his chair, took up a letter, cleared my throat and in a pompous manner began, "Miss Mills, take a letta to Gawden. 'Yours of the 6th, will say I sawr these rawr onions, and my idear is to push theyah sale in Russiar, Indiar, Africar, Asiar, Chinar, and all the propargandar of South Americar.'"

Glancing up, I beheld in the doorway a face, crimson and seemingly ready to burst with some emotion. I never learned whether it was anger, indignation, or laughter. I didn't stay to see. The face belonged to the general boss who strikes our town about once a year, and to whom the clerks in the outer offices are as thin as air. M. S.

Trading Ties.

It was my birthday and my sister gave me a tie. It did not exactly appeal to my taste, so I asked her if she had any objections to my exchanging it, and, of course she did not. She informed me it had been bought from the neighborhood haberdasher, where I usually do my trading, so I journeyed over to his shop to make the exchange.

Upon seeing the tie, he promptly stated it was not one of his ties—but I was insistent and assured him it was bought there.

Finally he said, "Well, put it up on the rack. I'll get rid of it to somebody else, and go ahead and pick a tie out of my stock."

After considerable handling of ties and informing him he didn't have anything suitable, I picked out a tie, sarcastically thanked him for his trouble, and went home.

Imagine my embarrassment when I found out the tie had not been purchased there, but at another shop more than a block's distance down the street. A. C. H.

One Beauty

We must not overlook soft, white hands

By Edna Wallace Hopper

We must not forget hands. All our beauty impressions may be destroyed by hands that look rough and hard.

I have tried some 50 lotions to restore to my hands the texture that hard water kills. But I never secured complete satisfaction until a few months ago.

Then some famous chemists submitted me a formula. They have spent decades in skin study. They told me that here was the best hand lotion they ever hoped to find.

It has proved so. In my stage work I wash my hands 20 times a day in all sorts of water. My struggle has been to keep them soft and white, and this lotion does that as nothing else has done.

So I now supply it to all who wish, as I do everything I find. I call it my Youth Hand Lotion—one of my beauty helps. All druggists and toilet counters have it. It will do for your hands what it did for mine, and you will thank me for it.

You have doubtless used countless hand lotions, as I have. I ask you to compare them with this. Let me send you a sample free. Just mail this coupon and see in one night how much it means to your hands.

A page of eighth-floor specials for the home

This is a floor-wide event—with every section contributing certain specially priced items. At the wane of winter, rooms look suddenly shabby—and the wise householder renews in little ways the freshness and the brightness of a much lived-in home. Each one of these items represents a way in which to bring Spring color to interiors. No matter what period your house or what type your windows—you will find here suitable draperies at notable savings.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde

PILLOWS YOU'LL LIKE.

CHANGEABLE rose taffeta is used for the lovely sofa pillow that is finished with shirred ribbon across the ends. The pillow measures 15 by 30 inches and about one yard of silk will make it. Often one can buy the pillows all ready to cover, but if you can't do this it will be easy to make one.

Buy heavy muslin, tear straight and allow ¼ inch on all seam margins. Stitch together on three sides (or if one side is made by a fold of the goods the stitching will be on two sides). Then fill with feathers, if you have them, or with cotton wadding. Make it pretty full, as it flattens down so, and then overhand across the open end.

Measure the taffeta carefully, allowing one-half inch for necessary seams, and pull threads to cut by. Buy half or three-quarter inch ribbon with a picoted edge and baste three rows of it across both ends, shirring the ribbon slightly. Use two or three colors—say blue, green, and a deeper rose than is used in the pillow. Have the row nearest the end come about three inches from the end of the pillow and leave a space between the other rows of about one-half inch. Baste the ribbon across both ends before stitching the taffeta together, and have the ribbon hemstitched on. Then the pillow cover is stitched together, the inside slipped in place, and the open end overhanded together. A strip of the silk, measuring about 6 by 36 inches, is turned up across both ends in an inch wide hem, and the ribbon put on across the ends exactly as on the pillow cover. The sides of this strip should be machine hemmed, using the narrow hemmer. It is then put around the middle of the pillow and tied in a simple bow—the picture accompanying this article showing the idea. Yellow, green, orchid, or blue would be lovely colors for pillows, always using contrasting colors in the ribbons.

Another pretty pillow is shaped like a heart—the length from point to top being 15 inches, and across the widest part about 12. Delicate shades of satin or taffeta seem best suited to this sort of pillow, and if a delicate shade of blue is decided on, for instance, the shirred puffing that binds the edges would be pretty in green or pink—using the same material that is used for the pillow.

This puffing is 5 inches wide finished; and before sewing it in place around the upper side baste a frill of one inch or one and one-half inch lace around, so that the puffing edge will hold it in place. A lovely finish for the pillow will be a small spray of ribbon flowers.

Still another pillow, and it is really stunning, is oblong in shape—measuring about 20 by 25 inches. Any preferred color in taffeta or satin will be all right—the one shown being in an orchid shade of satin. Instead of the usual plain case being made of satin there are three inch wide strips of the satin or taffeta tucked across the width of the strips in quarter inch wide tucks, with only a tiny space between the tucks used all around the edge and joined to the plain parts. After the strips have been tucked and pressed, the plain material can be cut, making each plain piece one and one-half inches less than the finished size of the pillow on all four sides—stitch the tucked strips to the plain and slip the pillow inside; then blind stitch the open end together.

A gold braid ornament, to which a long tassel is attached, is sewed at each corner—bringing together the cover at those points—giving a slightly puckered or pinched together effect. The flat ornament is about half the width of the tucking.

SCENT OF VIOLETS.

JOAN, dear: I saw some violets in the subway today and their fragrance set me dreaming—dreaming of home and of you. Do you remember how we used to gather violets together in the hill pasture when we were little? And that other night, when we were older, when we walked there together in the twilight and gathered the dainty blossoms as of old?

You were like a violet to me then—so pure and gentle and true—and I loved you then as I still love you. And I meant some day to tell you of my love and ask you to be mine. Then the blow fell—my father's disgrace, our loss of the old home place and my faring to the city—and I was ashamed to tell you. But I have carried always in my pocket the violets you picked for me that last night and in my heart the picture of you as you looked then.

O, my Joan! My dream girl! I love you so! Love you more than I can possibly put on paper. Won't you let me come back and tell you in person? If I could look into your dear eyes as I say "I love you" and could hear your voice answer "I love you," as I believe it would, all the loneliness and sorrow and hardship of these years would vanish and I should be perfectly happy.

May I come, dear? If I may, just send me some violets—they must be blooming now in the old pasture—and they will be your answer to me.

Beauty Answers

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

G. H. H.: I CANNOT MAKE RECommendations of any kind through this department, but if the bleach contains lead or mercury do not use it on your face, as either one is injurious to the skin. I have a formula for a good bleach for your face and neck which I'll send to you if you will send along a stamped, addressed envelope.

JOSEPHINE: FOR TIRED AND weak eyes the following wash is recommended: Boric acid, 1 per cent; sodium biborate, one gram; water camphor, sixty drops, and three ounces of distilled water. Apply with an eye cup. Or boiled water in which a little salt has been dissolved is another good eye wash. Use just enough salt to make the water taste salty—as tears have a salty taste.

READER: READING IN BED IS not harmful to the eyes, providing you adjust the light properly. The light should come over the left shoulder and be on a level with the top of the head. Ceiling lights and side lights, removed some distance, are what do the damage.

MINNIE R.: TO PROMOTE THE growth of your eyebrows, rub yellow vaseline into them every night, but be careful not to let any of the vaseline get into the eyes, as it is irritating to them. Brush the eyebrows night and morning with an eyebrow brush or a fine toothbrush to make them glossy and train them into shape.

CLARABELLE: MASSAGE THE hands with pure olive oil or a good cold cream if you wish to make them more shapely. Let the movements be downward toward the finger tips, with occasional light strokes across the back of the hands. The inside of the palm is also massaged to the finger tips. This is found helpful in cases of enlarged joints, as it builds up the rest of the hands, making the joints look smaller.

MARCH MARMALADES.

JELLIES and jams put up six and nine months ago are now stale in a number of ways, unless the preserving was done with great expertness. The jellies have turned darker, and with the turning the taste has grown stronger, and the quality has changed for the worse.

The whole chemical problem involved in cooking cup for cup of sugar with an acid fruit juice is one solved haphazardly by most home cooks, though the better the cook and the more sure her instinct, the more likely is this piece of cooking to result in a product that will keep as sugar itself will keep.

Some of the manufacturers or packers of these fruit and sugar products do little, if any, better than the housewife. Their product deteriorates, and is only for quick consumption. I have just opened and tasted of one of the daintiest "packs" of marmalade I have ever seen, after holding it three years and having seen it gradually change from a real and light orange shade to one almost black, in its thin glass container. It was dainty, but now it would be a punishment for me to eat it.

There are cooks who do, and can get a marmalade of that objectionably dark shade and that syrupy quality and density, by overcooking the ingredients in the best recipe ever devised.

As to overcooking, the light had done to that dainty glass of California marmalade what the strong and long fire will do. The Scotch do these things better. They put up their marmalades in earthen pots.

A dark brown marmalade as an immediate product of cooking furnishes proof positive that the cooking has been poor. Usually it has been too long. That is why the advice given in this column is always to the effect that this and all jellied fruit products shall be cooked in small quantities. It is the practice of all well trained cooks to do this, although recipes which give ingredients that will make up to several quarts do not always lay down this rule, which the good cook will nevertheless follow.

A letter received about a year ago on this subject contains a point that needs also to be emphasized. It is that many a fruit juice cooked to a certain point—a point to be watched for—will, like a meat jelly, set perfectly when cold although it may look like a thin liquid when hot. My correspondent wrote:

"Well, I followed your advice after careful study, only I wished to make a larger amount, so I doubled the quantity and proceeded as per directions. I added the sugar and dissolved it on the stove, not gas. Then, keeping this kettle warm, I dipped out enough for two glasses and put it to boil, standing right by it and testing it so as to be sure not to make a mistake.

"After about six minutes it showed the jelly test, but it seemed so thin, and I wanted to be sure, so I let it cook just a moment longer. Well, after the "moment longer" I did not test it again for twenty minutes. Then it showed the test, but I saw at once that it was as you said—of the consistency of honey and too sweet.

"I decided to snatch off the next two glass batch at the first test, and did so. It seemed almost like water until cold, but it jellied beautifully and was clear and sparkling as glass and delicious! If it does no hurt to keep the whole batch warm, and one can give it undivided attention, it helps along a lot, it seems to me. I surely am crazy about it!"

Other Points in Making Marmalades.

There are two types of marmalades, or two Scotch models, but the species are likely to be endless. The model which gives the most gratification and is daintiest is a glassy bright jelly with pieces of fruit suspended in it. It may be partly cooled before being put in containers if the fruit seeks the top. If this type is dull or milky or dark, the cooking has not been good.

To emphasize the cutting of the whole fruit, skin and all, it is better to say shave it.

Choose fine navel oranges as fresh out of the box as you can get them. Their aroma, as they become warm, and their firm quality both are valuable. You cannot get as good effects with those even slightly wilted.

Choose acid fruits. If the oranges are sour enough, you can make a small quantity without the aid of lemon juice, and it is superior. Acid is essential in all jelly making besides the pectin or jellying stuff.

With thick skinned oranges almost any prescribed amount of water may be used, but more acid will be required, and if there is too much, too long cooking will be required. Train your judgment on this, keeping in mind the general rule to use three times as much water as cut-up fruit.

Use a thermometer in cooking for exact results—saves testing—and cook to 219 degrees, or in quick cooking 220 will be all right.

The three day process is almost necessary. Cut up first day. Cook a little second day, and let stand till third day and finish.

Three Orange Formula.

Take three large, firm, and fresh navel oranges, the juice of three lemons, nine cups of water. Fruit straight from papers do not need washing, otherwise both wash and wipe carefully. Use a long, sharp knife. Cut off and reject end slices. Shave or slice the rest as thin as possible. Add lemon juice here or just before cooking. Cover with nine cups of water, and let stand over night. Cook ten minutes in the morning, but longer if the fruit was not fresh, and let stand till next day. In the final cooking it is customary to measure the diluted fruit and add cup for cup of sugar. I take out two cups of the diluted fruit, dissolve two cups of sugar in it and then cook as quickly as possible, but note what is said above in quotation from letter.

Note: When orange marmalade is sealed like a preserve, it has been put up with as little as 50 per cent of sugar. It will keep unsealed with 65 per cent, but most people prefer 100 per cent and often get a honeylike product and a disagreeable one with so much. All depends on the cooking. Correctly cooked marmalade may be eaten almost like a candy. A honeylike one cannot.

Two Orange Formula.

It is a little more exact to weigh the fruit rather than to make the marmalade by the number. Two large, firm navel oranges will weigh a pound. Use with them three pints of water and the juice of one or two lemons, according to their acidity, and cook as above.

If you have no thermometer, cook until marmalade coats the spoon or drops in two drops from the edge or until a drop of it sets on an ice cold plate. But remember that while you are performing these tests your marmalade may be getting cooked too much, just as candy does while elaborate tests are being tried. When sugar is cooked to just the right point, it is in a sensitive state.

Orange Pectin.

Those who learned to make a marmalade with the skins of oranges and lemon with carrot, beet, rhubarb, apple, and so forth were really using the jellying stuff in these peels to set a jamlike product. The pectin made of these skins to use with any of the fruit juices lacking in jellying stuff is made and canned and called marmalade stock.

One way to make this is to put one cup of the white part of the skin of the orange through the food chopper, and add to it six cups of cold water and three tablespoons of lemon juice. Let stand and cook in the same way as marmalade is cooked.

Another method is to one cup of the chopped white peel, pressed down, add the juice of a lemon, and let stand an hour. Add two cups of water, heat to boiling point, and let boil five minutes. Let stand over night; add four cups of water; heat to boiling point, and boil ten minutes. Strain through a canton flannel jelly bag.

I saw this being used with great success in California in making jellies. It had been made, put in sterile bottles, and kept until needed. The process of making jelly with it is really a process of flavoring it and then cooking the flavored liquid like any jelly.

Carrot Marmalade.

Carrot marmalade recipes are perplexing since some call for a dozen carrots, others for a pound or two of carrots, and yet others for a pint or so. It seems to be almost impossible to standardize the recipes, but the following, called "Annie Laurie Marmalade," was one tested, out of a great number contributed, and found to be good:

"One pound of carrots, one orange, one small lemon, three cups of water, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, three and one-half cups of sugar. Wash and scrape carrots, run through meat grinder, add water and salt, and boil until soft. Wash orange and lemon, squeeze out juice, being careful not to get in any seeds, run the rest through meat grinder, and put in preserving kettle with the juice. Drain all the water from the cooked carrots into the kettle, and let the whole cook until tender and down to one cup. Add to this the pulp of the carrot and the sugar. Let boil twenty minutes. Put in glasses, and when cold cover like jelly.

Three good effects can be secured from this. It can be seen at once that using the carrot filler has not fulfilled its purpose from an economical standpoint. A sort of jam instead of a jelly is secured, and no more in quantity than could be made by using the orange and lemon alone. But the one who recommended this recipe first said she had found that oranges and lemons with the juice squeezed out and used for other purposes were just as good. As for me, I am undecided about the best sort of carrot marmalade, after collecting several dozen

EARRINGS A LA MODE

Paris Says They Must Touch the Shoulder.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—No woman's life is complete without a husband and a string of pearls, particularly the latter. The husband may be worried along without somehow—but the pearls not.

Pearls are almost the password on the Rue de la Paix, the shopping street of the billionaires of the world. If you are not equal to the fabulous luxury of the street level windows hereupon there are side streets, countless numbers of them, offering you quite clever imitations. Pearl necklaces are sold in thousands over the imitation jewelry counters of the department stores, and if gossip be correct you never can be sure whether or not the strand adorning the neck of the girl in the subway came from the same oyster bed as that adorning the neck of some famous woman of wealth and social position.

Universally Becoming.

These gems of purest rays serene may blush but not unseen. They are seen on practically every woman in Paris. In fact, M. Vigier, a jeweler connected with one of the most celebrated firms here, says he believes there isn't a woman in the world who doesn't possess at least one string of pearls, genuine or imitation.

"They are so universally becoming, he declares, "that women of all stages are buying them—from the cradle to the grave—dowagers, debutantes, subdebs, and mere infants. All must have them. Of course, the ambition of every woman is to have a string of real ones; that failing, she will cheerfully accept the imitation."

There is something about the sheen of a pearl that goes straight to the heart of every woman. The exceptional cases where real pearls are not becoming to the skin have the obliging oyster yielding them in such variety of color that their becomingness is generally taken care of. The real pearl is least at home, becomingly speaking, on a swarthy, muddy, or wrinkled skin. But the delicate and beautiful shades in these pearly ropes festooning the windows on the Rue de la Paix are, when one has the money to pay for them, too overwhelmingly "temptatious" to be resisted.

Colors for Every Mood.

The variety of colors shown this season makes it possible to have a string for every mood—at least for every gown. You may have long strands for evening and short ones for afternoon. These are pink, blue, lavender, cream, and pearly white, gun metal and dasher.

I saw a beauty at the Café de Paris the other night wearing in her sleek black hair an Italian comb of pearls set in old Etruscan gold. A double rope of magnificent creamy pearls fell from her white throat and over the straight tight bodice of her severe black evening dress. There were black onyx and pearl buckles on her tiny gold brocade slippers. The effect of the black and gold and cream with her black hair and exquisite creamy skin and the sheen of the marvelous ropes of pearls bringing out the natural satiny quality of the complexion was not at all hurtful to the eyes, unless perchance they might be blinded by jealousy.

Another pretty woman at an adjoining table had on pink pearls with a faintly yellow gown—an adorable combination and most becoming. Another, with beautiful gray hair, had chosen pearls also, equally becoming to her although of an entirely different shade—a gray white, large and lustrous.

Art of Wearing Bracelets.

The Parisienne has discovered that wide bracelets are more generally becoming than the tiny narrow ones worn in tiers, and that an arm glinting with diamonds is quite likely to be termed beautiful. There is something in the idea of choosing the size of the bracelet in accordance with the proportions of the arm and the shape of the wrist. Ugly bones may be covered by an inch wide bracelet of good design, while the beauty of a delicate and pretty wrist is enhanced by a band of gems. Since many of the arms seen hereabout are rather thin, the vogue of the wide bracelet may be accounted for.

The flashing of diamonds makes a woman's eyes sparkle like the gems themselves, Paris thinks, and women are going in for much larger and showier jewels than ever before. Diamonds so large that formerly they would have made any woman of good taste shudder are now worn everywhere, and the brooches shown for evening wear are simply huge. You may be pardoned, however, for suspecting that all that glitters is not diamond. Where imitations are so wonderful, why risk being assassinated for expensive jewelry. Often the real gems of worth are kept in a safe and clever imitations worn.

To Match Her Eyes.

Another trick of the French woman is to choose her jewelry to match her eyes. I saw a chic woman in the Bois the other afternoon wearing with a smartly tailored suit of maroon brown earrings of carnelian. She had large velvety brown eyes, and the effect of the reddish brown stone was good. A blonde with large blue eyes wore at an afternoon tea a short strand of lovely sapphires with a lacy blouse and simple but exquisitely tailored suit.

The earrings a la mode must touch the shoulder. Each season for the last three years has added an inch to their length. Some one predicts that if the lengthening process continues, women will soon be able to wear a combination necklace and earrings.

Calot is setting the style for earrings which fall well below the shoulders. They are made of gold or silver ovals on a chain of tiny links. The ovals graduate from the size of a pea near the ear to the size of a bird's egg at the end of the chain. Eight inches is about the length of these earrings, the last word in earring fashion.

Designs and Shapes Varied.

The shapes of these shoulder earrings are long drops, medallions, narrow panels, squares or circles suspended from narrow chains of diamonds or diamonds with links of onyx, coral or jade. The medallions of drops are often of black, red, jade green, bright blue (lapis lazuli) to match any frock or suit any mood. Carved or openwork jade is often combined with onyx and diamonds. Seed pearls play a big part in the tassel earrings.

The design runs to Chinese. Black jet earrings and bracelets are seen occasionally, and on the right type are extremely flattering to the skin. One window on the Rue de la Paix shows jet bracelet, earrings, and long ropes for the neck.

Rightly worn, earrings are the most feminine and delightful of accouterment, and the Parisienne, as in all other details of adornment, is not likely to make a mistake in her choice of the right pair for her individual self. The lines of her head and face, the whole body in fact, are studied before the earrings are bought. She knows a woman may ruin her beauty completely by choosing the wrong shape and color.

One authority advises against round coral or earrings of pink. They may look all right to you in your mirror, but at a distance they give the effect of an ugly growth on the ears.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

recipes for it and finding no two alike.

There are good and sufficient reasons why the skins of the fruits should be given the three day treatment even in making carrot marmalade, because they will toughen in a sirup if they have not been thoroughly cooked, and it is not only while they are cooking but after they stand in the sugar that they stiffen up. The quickly made marmalades are appealing, but unless you are to eat them up within a few days they are a delusion, because the skins need the long treament if they are to remain soft.

Modern Uses for Marmalade.

Sandwiches.—For open sandwiches, marmalade and chopped nuts give a pretty effect and the mixture, when the marmalade is fine, is delicious.

Baked Apples.—The insipid apples of late winter are given pep if marmalade instead of sugar is added to them when putting them to bake.

Apple Sauce.—It seems rather an expensive way to sweeten apple sauce, but marmalade may be used for that purpose and, of course, it does something more.

Other uses are in sauces for pudding and in the puddings, in salad dressings and in the salads, in drinks like eggnog and egg shake, and in plain water to replace lemonade. Add a few drops of fresh juice to the latter. It is a most useful and convenient supply for other services than the spread.

CONSTIPATION means DISEASE

These young rascals when they are well are the greatest institutions on earth. But when that insidious lurking monster—Constipation—ties up their bowels, then the world is dark. To name those who use this powder is to list the socially elect

It is now offered to more women of faultless taste

Like the aristocrats they are, the toilet requisites created by Maison Veolay (Violet) of Paris are but rarely seen in the highways and the by-ways. Their patronage, for over a century, has been confined to the socially elect.

Particularly favored in the boudoirs of society is the exquisite Ambre Royal Powder. It is to be found on the dressing-tables of the most exclusive women of two continents.

But now, owing to fortunate arrangements recently concluded, more Ambre Royal Powder can be offered to the discriminating women of America.

You will be completely enchanted by its subtle fragrance, its delicate texture, its clinging caress.

It wins instantly the approval of one of unerring taste. It makes a sure appeal to the woman of distinction.

Packaged as it is in Paris, it gives to your dressing-table an authentic note of French gayety and daintiness.

Write for brochure "In the Boudoirs of Society"

This fascinating booklet gives intimate glimpses of the dressing tables of notable women who honor Veolay with their patronage, and describes the requisites perfumed with Ambre Royal, Niobe, and other Veolay odeurs. Address Frank M. Prindle & Co., 267 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Whisper this ~

Ambre Royal Powder is now no higher in price than other fine French powders which have not, perhaps, Ambre Royal's so exclusive patronage. Until recently, owing to the limited quantity sent to America, Ambre Royal has been the highest priced internationally-sold French face powder.

DOUBLE DUTY KITCHENS.

So many kitchens serve double duty nowadays in being used for breakfast and luncheon rooms that it is well worth while to give them more attention along the decorative line than was formerly considered necessary. Young wives who do their own housework and cooking find a great saving in time as well as in energy in serving the less formal meals in the kitchen. And why not, since this can easily be made into one of the most cheerful and attractive of little rooms?

Bold colors predominate in the breakfast sets which are being shown at present. These go a long way towards transforming the old, ugly kitchen into the gay kitchen of today. Their colors, more often than not, give the keynote for the decorative scheme of the whole room.

Illustrated today is a striking enameled set, done in bright flame orange, with trim of black. The dropleaf table is a decided convenience, as it occupies little space when not opened for use. Quaint patterned chairs are certainly useful as well as ornamental. Walls in this room are painted a light lemon yellow to harmonize with the furniture, and the woodwork is a deeper tone of the same. The little hanging china cabinet is enameled flame color on the outside, black inside, with bright yellow dishes. Dull, olive green linoleum, marked in squares by means of black lines, covers the floor completely. Yellow voile is used for glass curtains, with draperies of thin, plaid, washable sunfast, in green, black, and white. Adding a final fling of contrasting color is the bright blue glass fruit bowl placed on the table.

Not quite so hilarious, but equally interesting, is a kitchen in which a milk white breakfast set is used. It is decorated with touches of jade green and black on the legs of chairs and table, with lines of the same around the edges. Walls are white; woodwork, jade green. Linoleum in alternating squares of black and white covers the floor. Mauve voile glass curtains, with valances of jade green ren, finish the windows, and an amethyst glass flower bowl decorates the breakfast table.

Black and rose are the dominating colors in another kitchen. The furniture is enameled black, with bands of bright rose color, edged with a fine line of leaf green. On the splats of the chair backs and drop leaves of the table, floral motifs have been applied. These were copied from the pattern in the colorful cretonne window draperies. Cretonne is seldom seen at kitchen windows, which is a shame, because it is so easily laundered, and brings a springlike, happy atmosphere into the room, unequaled by that effected in any other material. The cretonne draperies in this room are supplemented by white dotted Swiss glass curtains.

Walls of light French gray, with woodwork a deeper tone of the same, form the background for a soft green set, trimmed with straw color. Window draperies are of straw colored chambray, edged with green rick-rack braid. Green and cream linoleum follows a brick pattern. From the center of the little table, a bright red glass vase, filled with flowers in season, cries its note of triumph.

A deep purple set furnishes one ultra-modern kitchen. Walls of light turquoise green make an harmonious background for the daringly bright furniture. The pieces are trimmed with edgings of turquoise blue. The inside of a purple china closet is painted this same blue, and dishes are a light lemon yellow. There are no glass curtains at the windows. Draperies are of turquoise blue casement cloth.

Long French windows, overlooking a lovely garden, light the kitchen of a delightful small house in the suburbs. The breakfast set is done in pumpkin color, combined with peacock blue. Directly in front of one of these windows the rectangular shaped dropleaf table is placed. Flanking it, against the wall space at each side, are two of the little rush bottom, ladder back chairs.

Opposite the table stands an old Welsh dresser. This displays a charming set of dishes, decorated in a peasant floral pattern. In addition to the other pieces there is a tea wagon, painted to match. This is a great convenience in a kitchen of any size. The walls are done in natural colored sandplaster, and the woodwork is peacock blue. What a glorious little room in which to experiment with the new electric waffle iron!

For those who do not care for painted or enameled sets, there is a great variety done in wood stains and natural finishes, some with just a touch of colorful enamel. One which is especially interesting is finished in walnut stain, with edgings and trims of delft blue and gold. The chairs are copies of a Windsor type, and there is a dropleaf table. This set is backgrounded against a buff colored wall. Woodwork is painted delft blue, and linoleum is blue and buff. Glass curtains of amber colored china silk supplement delft blue sunfast draperies. A polished brass samovar dominated the table.

Quite unusual is an oak breakfast set in a silver gray finish. It is used in a room in which the walls are painted a light jade pink and the woodwork silver gray. Jade pink dishes, bordered in green, are set on the open dresser. The linoleum is gray and green. Pistachio green glass curtains and deep jade pink draperies complete the room.

An Italian style set, in oak, graces another attractive kitchen. The table is of the refectory type, long and narrow, with a dropleaf at each end. There is a hanging cabinet for a set of delightful Italian dishes. Walls are painted a bright canary yellow. Draw curtains at the windows are rust colored. In one corner of the room, purely as a decorative measure, stands a remarkable twofold screen—its panels done in an Italian peasant design so brightly colorful that it furnishes sufficient pattern interest for the entire room.

BEAUTY ANSWERS
by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Dry on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested? Flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelop. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

PAULINE S.: I have manicure instructions in printed form, and shall be glad to send them to you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. It will require about five minutes every day, with a manicure once a week, and your hands will be in good condition always. I agree with you, it is important to have good looking or rather well cared for hands when you are in business.

ANXIOUS: IF I WERE YOU, I shouldn't place too much faith in the results of reducing by means of epsom salts baths. The best way to reduce, and the most effective way, is by means of exercise and diet. I have the instructions in printed form, and will forward them to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

PHYLLIS: THE FOLLOWING IS an excellent tonic for thin hair: Resorcin, 45 grains; glycerin, 1 ounce; and equal parts of water and alcohol to fill a six ounce bottle. Massage it into the scalp with your finger tips every night. It will stimulate the roots of the hair and keep the scalp from becoming tight. Then brush the hair vigorously for about five minutes. To make the hair curly, I have a formula but would ask that you send a stamped addressed envelope for it.

DAN: YES, WITCH HAZEL IS good for blackheads, but you must first wash the skin thoroughly. It is well to remove the surplus dirt and grime which choke the sweat glands causing blackheads, by the use of a good cold cream. Massage the face for a moment or two, wipe off the surplus cream, and then wash with warm water, rinsing with cold cream. After this, apply the witch hazel. Squeese out the blackheads after washing the face with warm water.

TROUBLED: IT IS NOT WELL TO wash the face with hot water unless you follow it with a cold rinse or an ice rub. Warm water is preferable—just warm enough to cleanse the face thoroughly, then rinse in clear warm water and then cold. Hot water enlarges the ports, and its continued use causes aggrevated cases of enlarged pores. For toning up the skin you cannot beat the cold water rinses or ice rubs.

MARCH 15, 1925.

The Case of Dreiser —By H. L. Mencken

FEW men in profane history have been more fortunate in their enemies than Theodore Dreiser; as for his friends, that is another story. His first book, "Sister Carrie," was suppressed in alarm by a timorous publisher, and so gained an immense surreptitious vogue; his worst, "The Genius," was assaulted by the Comstocks to such good effect it sold 30,000 copies eight years after publication. He has been denounced steadily for twenty-four years, often with extreme rancor. He stands isolated today, a figure weatherbeaten and lonely. Yet I can think of no American novelist who seems so secure or so likely to endure.

THEODORE DREISER, Author of "Sister Carrie" and "The Genius."

From the start, Dreiser provoked the fury of all the schoolmarm critics of the republic, male and female, and they fell upon him with astounding violence. The attack took forms that were strange and various. He was accused of merchanting pornography, of advocating free love, of flirting with socialism and even anarchism. When the war came on the discovery was made that he had a German name, and this became the basis of a fresh onslaught. One gallant professor, furloughed from the Creel press bureau for the purpose, had at him in a gallant manner and hinted that he ought to be put down by the police. As the Ku Klux Klan arose he became the chief butt of the new Ku Klux kriticism. What will be tomorrow's bugaboo? Whatever it is, the floggers of sophomores will see in it only Dreiser in a new false face.

Silence His Answer.

So far as I know, Dreiser has never made a formal reply to these uproars or any other effort to still them. Why, indeed, should he? They have served to increase his trade far more effectively than the encomiums of his advocates—even more effectively than the idiotic enterprises of the Comstocks. For the first charge of the campus Taines and Brandeses synchronized almost perfectly with the appearance of rebellion against them in their own flocks, and so Dreiser became by rebound a sort of hero to the younger generation. That was in 1900, and the younger generation is now grown up. But its enthusiasms and aversions continue to be potent in our letters, and as the professors have gone down Dreiser has gone up.

The way was opened for him, in fact, by events in which he had no part at all, not even as a far from innocent bystander—to wit, the events of the electric nineties. The war of that decade opened in England, but was soon transferred to the United States. In both countries it was essentially a revolt against academic authority—against the dull, hollow dignity of pedants who continued to teach the Hawthornes and Emersons and were anaesthetic to the new literature that was coming to flower all around them. It was a revolt more ardent than judicious, and in England its heroes were such discordant men as Pater, Wilde, and Ibsen. In America, after some imitative wabbling, the spotlights concentrated upon Dreiser. He was young, he was (academically speaking) a bar-

THE CAST.

Nancy Dumont	Agnes Ayres
Harvey Dumont	George Irving
Cyrus Hamilton	Anders Randolf
Mrs. Hamilton	Hedda Hopper
Anthony Davis	Edward Earle
Courtney Brooks	Taylor Holmes
Kitty	Gertrude Short
Banks	Sidney Bracy

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Agnes Ayres is featured in this, and her acting is far superior to what it usually is, but I think you'll agree with me that Anders Randolf is the fair haired child of the production. He brings much good acting and several surprises to his rôle of a wealthy stock broker; giving a mediocre story an excuse for being and a not particularly enthralling picture a reason for being shown.

AGNES AYRES, cast as the heroine of "Her Market Value."

Nancy Dumont, the heroine, is left a penniless widow by her husband, who, after losing his all on the market, hops over the side of his yacht into the obliging waters waiting to engulf him and his shame.

Three friends of his, in whom he has confided before he took the fatal leap, decide to keep all knowledge of his business tangles from the wife. They donate money for her upkeep, and she is told it has been left her by the dear departed. One of the three is a rogue. From him she gets $10,000. Another is a nice fellow and loves her, and he gives $10,000, too. But this Mr. Hamilton, impersonated by Anders Randolf, says, "I'll double the amount"—and writes his check for $20,000.

Where Most of Us Make a Mistake.

The lady bravely gives up the splendor to which she has been accustomed, moves to a simple flat, and takes up shorthand, typewriting, and bookkeeping. When at last she feels herself proficient, she goes to Mr. Hamilton for advice as to how she shall get a job. He tells her he needs an intelligent woman in his office—and Mrs. Dumont is forthwith employed by Mr. Hamilton.

Now, I suppose you think the gentleman had designs upon the lady. Well, so did I—and so does everybody in the story, including the fair, false Mrs. Hamilton and the rogue who had advanced the $10,000 who is an admirer of Mrs. Hamilton. Mr. Randolf goes right along on his way letting you believe the worst of his character. It's not until the end of the performance that you realise just the sort of chap he really is, and when you DO get him you know you've been watching a regular fellow showing how a regular fellow would act under certain circumstances.

Mr. Randolf is one of the older players—a big, heavy set man with keen eyes that look out shrewdly, whimsically, or inscrutably, as the occasion may demand, from under bushy eyebrows. His work is always quiet and free from unneces-

Making a Bow to Standardization

By Edward Moore.

HAVING secured the premise of the Carnegie foundation to finance it in what looks like an ambitious program, that National Association of Schools of Music and Allied Arts is now preparing to work out the details of its undertaking.

Briefly, the association desires to define the various courses which are and should be offered by music schools, and to standardize the systems for granting credits. Its members say that at present much confusion exists, if for no other reason than that different methods of measurement use different terminologies, and that it will take time to straighten them out.

The organization just now is not one of music schools but of individuals acting in advisory capacities until such time as the various committees shall have made the necessary research and defined its policies. When this is accomplished, the conclusions will be printed and distributed to all educational institutions and schools of music. Institutional membership will then be in order and will be granted according to the various classifications established.

Every One Is Doing It.

That the music teachers should join in the universal genuflection to the icon of standardisation is no more than is to be expected. Everybody is standardizing these days. Before long the only known specimen of successful individualism will be Siegfried in such rare instances as when opera companies permit Wagner performances. And even he came to a violent end.

The first movement of this organization is, however, entirely commendable. No one can object in any way to clear terminologies, if such can be evolved out of any department of the art of music. Whether the association will be able to make any appreciable change in the general musical situation, with its students numbered in hundreds of thousands and outstanding musicians proceeding therefrom to be measured only by a most minute decimal system, is all in the future. At any rate, good luck to the association and its aims.

Kenneth M. Bradley of Bush conservatory is its president; Charles N. Boyd of the Pittsburgh Musical institute, its treasurer; and Burnet C. Tuthill of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, treasurer. Its vice presidents and committee members number about twenty more, and represent many of the leading music schools of the country. There will be a meeting of the association in this city next November.

DORIS KEANE SMILES ABOUT "STARLIGHT"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Doris Keane, playing the actress heroine of "Starlight," and trying to look and act as much like the late Sarah Bernhardt as possible, is not the least amusing of the current exhibits in the local theater.

Of course, Doris will tell you her heroine is not Bernhardt. And neither is she. But the inference is as plain as the Keane smile that the actress would like to have you think so, and talk about it.

This piece, written by Gladys Unger, was tried by Miss Keane on the Pacific coast last summer and found to be popular. It tells of a great French actress who was born in the cellar of a Montmartre café, rose to stardom on the Paris stage, loved both unwisely and well, provided a job for her lover, a father for his child, and refused to retire until she practically was carried from the stage.

Fifty-nine years of the actress' life are covered in the play, and this permits Miss Keane to change her costume many times and to play the eleven episodes with such histrionic variety as she commands, which is not enough to worry any one much.

Her activities range from the romptngs of the child of Montmartre through the preliminary and somewhat distressing incidents of an expected accouchement to the decline of the star, following a world conquering tour.

She stands at the last in the wings a bowed and broken old lady, swathed in the scarfs that will hide her china. The call boy summons her for an act of "Theodora," they hand her a glass of champagne, and she staggers into the wings. She is standing there, with the spotlight upon her erect and defiant, as the play ends.

It is a touching bit, particularly when associated so plainly with the passing of Bernhardt, and its sentimental suggestion will do much to popularise the play. In the cast with Miss Keane are Frederick Vogeding and Charles Meredith.

All About Marionettes.

There is a new play in town that has been flitting in and out of the testing territory, first as "The Marionette Man" and afterward as "The Knife in the Wall."

Now it is known as "Puppets." I can't see much chance for it unless our Mr. Joe Leblang, who sells the cut rate tickets, can interest his clientele in it as a novelty.

The action takes place in the back room of a marionette theater. The little people are strung on wires at the back of their miniature stage, and every now and then they are taken down by the manipulators and put through a rehearsal that parallels in plot the struggle the humans in the play are facing.

It is interesting to watch this back stage puppet show. Brock Pemberton, who staged "Puppets," has brought Remo Bufano, who runs, or did run, a real marionette theater in Little Italy, into the play with two of his experts and they make the wooden heads do impressive things. Trouble is,

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

ATTENDANCE is generally better, the managers say, and what they mean is, of course, that it is particularly better with regard for some of the plays and shows. The betterment, in one case, has to do with "The Student-Prince"; and for that I am happy; this is operetta with ever so little the matter with it, and with more in its favor than any other work of its immediate class in many years. . . . The competition was halved last night with the going-out of "The Dream-Girl" and "Blossom-Time," leaving the field to "The Student-Prince" and "Rose-Marie." The four loosely classify as operetta, although none is quite like any of the three others. "The Dream-Girl," with Victor Herbert's music, could easily have been made into something as good as "The Student-Prince"; but the librettist bungled in making over "The Road to Yesterday," although that half-forgotten, third-rate piece was of the very stuff from which good libretti are made. . . . As to "Rose-Marie," the report from the Woods is that, in the matter of ticket-buying, there has been no room for improvement since the beginning of the run; and, while that is in the traditional pitch of theater-talk, the report is credible, if not authenticated: "Rose-Marie" is a shrewd fabrication—a veritable rodeo of the sure-fires, the hoakums, and the jambeaus.

WILLIAM HODGE He comes back tonight in his own "For All of Us."

But, regardless of general attendance last week or this, most of the Chicago theaters are or soon will be in need of new dishes. (This, of course, with appropriate reservations as to "Ma Pettengill," yet to be examined. The Cincinnati play-reporters say it is all right. . . . And, although it comes a year late to benefit by such excitement hereabout as might have reflected its New-York run and the Pulitzer prize, "Hell-Bent fer Heaven" may survive such appraisement as shall be made in the city's newspapers. Mr. Mantle, in his year-book of the American stage for 1923-'24, puts this Blue Ridge folk-play second in his list of ten works regarded by him as the best of that season; he gives first place to "The Show-Off").

News and Such.

De Wolf Hopper, who was thought to be shutting down his shabby little opera-troupe in order to take part in a New-York revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Princess Ida; or, Castle Adamant," is, it seems, to be put into the third cast of "The Student-Prince"—presumably, for the rôle performed in the Great Northern by Dallas Welford and in New-York by George Hassell.

As to "Princess Ida," it is indicated that two revivals will be made of it—one by some hole-in-the-wall amateurs in the Village, and the other by a "professional" producer. . . . And this sudden activity with regard for one of the

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

Miss Elsie Ferguson is to try the two-a-day in Barrie's "Half-an-Hour," which I regard as his most effective one-act piece. . . Miss Grace George had the principal rôle when the play was first acted in New-York.

Another of Barrie's short pieces to be given in the varieties is "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals," a comic piece of war-time in England: Miss Emma Dunn is to act in it. . . . When I saw it in New-York, some years ago, the part of the Old Lady was acted by Miss Beryl Mercer; and she was immense!

Miss Lina Abarbanell, of whom Chicago has not seen much in the theater since the run of "Madame Sherry" back in 1910, is to be in "Sparkling Burgundy" with William Courtleigh, here earlier in the season in "Strange Bedfellows." . . . The play is from the German of Hans Müller, whose "The Flame" was acted here by Miss Jane Cowl as "Who Knows." The rôle in which Mr. Courtleigh is to be seen was acted in the Berlin performances by Emil Jannings, now an American celebrity by reason of his acting in the new film of "Quo Vadis" and in another film named "The Last Laugh."

Topping in interest such excitement as may be engendered by the three foregoing paragraphs is the announcement that Miss Laurette Taylor will dip into the varieties in "Pierrot the Prodigal," in which she is acting two afternoons a week in New-York for the actors' union.

"Better Days!" is the title of a new revue in London. "L. S. D." is the title of another. . . . The latter name is supposed to indicate "pounds, shillings, and pence."

"The Torchbearers," by the author of "The Show-Off," is being turned into a piece with music. . . It was acted two years ago in Powers' by Arthur Shaw, Miss Mary Boland, Miss Alison Skipworth, and others; and nobody went to see it.

Miller and Lyles, who were in the Woods late last Summer in their piece named "Runnin' Wild," are to try the two-a-day for some weeks, and then, it is said, go into the 1925 issue of George White's Scandals. . . . Miss Lillian Lorraine, once a celebrity of the Ziegfeld Follies, is named for the two-a-day in what she calls a "song-recital," although it is my recollection that she couldn't sing. And that doesn't matter. . . . And Miss Alice Brady, also thinking well of the two-a-day, is said to be dubious as to whether a cut-down of Channing Pollock's good melodrama named "The Sign on the Door" is just the thing for her.

Miss Irene Fenwick [Mrs. Barrymore], McKay Morris, and Ulrich Haupt are to be with Lionel Barrymore in the play from the German in which he is expected soon to act in Chicago.

Miss Janet Beecher, Miss Amelia Bingham, and Miss Katherine Alexander are to act in "Ostriches," by Edward Wilbraham: the play is English. . . . Miss Bingham's name isn't met with frequently nowadays; but she had her period of importance in the theater—less as an actress, however, than as a manager. She staged Clyde Fitch's "The Climbers" with a cast that was audacious for its day, and was just as careless with the pay roll in two or three pieces in which she subsequently acted.

The theater-part of Northwestern University has been doing John Masefield's "The Tragedy of Nan," and says that the play has not been "professionally" in this country. . . . "The Tragedy of Nan" was acted in the Playhouse in March of 1913 by Miss Hornlman's company, which had a four-weeks engagement there: the house was then known as the Fine Arts. . . . And it is a play well worth doing, although it is without commercial advantages, I fear. It contains one of the best love-scenes in all English drama—and that means in all drama. I remember that it was the most engrossing of the modern plays in the répertoire used by the actors from Manchester in Chicago, although that part of the public which took an interest in the engagement preferred Arnold Bennett's "What the Public Wants."

And Bennett has recently had staged in London a comedy named "The Bright Island," of which the critics say that it is the stupidest thing he has yet written.

Horace Hodges is the name of the actor who has the late Frank Bacon's rôle in "Lightnin'" in London, where the play is advertised as by Winchell Smith and Mr. Bacon, although the latter's name came first in the American billing. . . . Charles H. Evans, who starred for years with the late William ["Old Hoss"] Hoey in "A Parlor Match," is acting the rôle of the impressionable judge.

George Scarborough, who was quite busy for a time writing plays and then went into obscuration, is at it again: one named "Cuckoo," of which he is co-author with Miss Annette Westbay, has been staged in Los Angeles.

Nigel Playfair has made a revival of "The Rivals" in London, with himself in the part of Bob Acres. . . . "Any House" is the name of a new play by Miss F. Tennyson Jesse staged last week in the English capital.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

least successful of the Gilbert-Sullivan pieces is said to be no part of the Messrs. Shubert's project to stage a "cycle" of them, starting next month with "The Mikado"—which, by the way, is forty years old this month. . . . I am of the belief that there is high prosperity in store for a revival of the best works of the English collaborators if the proper casts can be assembled; and the if is simply staggering! Gilbert asks for a lot from the actors, and he and Sullivan ask for a lot more from the singers. If asked to assemble a first-class cast for a repertoire of five or six of the operettas, I should require at least a year, in which time I should have the selected members under instruction to a veteran of the G.-S. idiom. And, when I set out to find such an one, I think that my hunt would begin and end with Arthur Cunningham, now here in "Rose-Marie"; there may be available others; and I know none.

On the topic, I note that a Negro company is to do "The Mikado" this week in New-York, with J. Rosamond Johnson, familiar in the variety-theaters, in direction of the music. . . . Also, that the venture is being advertised, according to the current issue of Variety, in the Chinese newspapers, "in the hope of attracting Oriental patronage." "The Mikado" is nearly as Oriental as Fleet Street, London, and not quite as Oriental as State and Madison any day save Sunday at 12:08 p. m.

"Now our authors appeal to the great modern instincts of social justice. . . . and, following Wagner, bring out the meaning of the folk-lore stories. Sex-madness has been relegated to its proper subordination."—From "A Vision of Grand Opera," by Dr. Frank Crane.

"Following Wagner" is a grand little way of avoiding sex-madness. The Beyreuth genius worked hard to keep it subordinated, and was successful save for such unavoidable trifles as love-philters, seductions, and an occasional touch of incest in his libretti.

Things Are Dull in Manhattan.

But one new play is listed for New-York showing this week—"The Devil Within," by Charles Horan, with William Ingersoll, Miss Helen Holmes, Elwood F. Bostock, and Miss Mary Hall.

The "notices" of "The Fall-Guy" indicate that the piece is as much of a success in New-York as "Is Zat So?"—although it is too early to know much of the popular reaction to the piece. . . . The point is that James Gleason is part-author of both, and that his collaborator on "The Fall-Guy," George Abbott, is an actor, as is his collaborator on "Is Zat So?" Richard Taber. The latter play had its première in Milwaukee in the Summer of 1923; "The Fall-Guy" was given there last Summer, with Frank Craven in the part acted in New-York by Ernest Truex.

"Whadda You Say?" mentioned in last Friday's TRIBUNE as among the new things said to be planned for Chicago, is a making-over with tunes of a piece named "Barnum Was Right."

George S. Kaufman, in today's New-York Times, quotes George Bernard Shaw as having written this in a letter having to do with naming Bulgaria as the scene of "Arms and the Man": 'When I wrote 'Heroes' ['Arms and the Man'], I did so without giving the names of the persons or of the scene. When the piece was finished, I asked the well-known Socialist, Sydney Webb, whether he could name me a war of modern times in which machine-weapons were not used. I wanted to fix the period to a certain extent in this way. He tried, but without success, to name me such a war, and finally thought that it would be better to go back to the Serbo-Bulgarian war of 1885." . . . The frequent outbreak of Bulgarian sympathizers when the comedy is given in Europe was the reason of the inquiry which provoked Shaw into the explanation; and it is interesting,—although it is odd that a man of his wit should take so much trouble to appease Bulgarians.

The Uses of Advertising.

What the Dramatic Critics Write:	What the Theaters Print:
"A fair play, not as enjoyable and stimulating as some wonderful ones I have seen."	". . . ENJOYABLE AND STIMULATING . . . WONDERFUL."
"Good plot, but lacking in genuine thrills and interpreted half-heartedly."	". . . GOOD PLOT. . . . . GENUINE THRILLS."
"Magnificent hokum. Brilliant audience was half asleep."	". . . MAGNIFICENT. . . . . BRILLIANT AUDIENCE."

—Arthur L. Lippman in the Saturday Evening Post.

Miss Nance O'Neil, who doesn't get as far as some of her admirers think would be the right distance, is acting in "All the World's a Stage," by Alfred Sutro. . . . Sutro, also, doesn't get so far as his admirers of twenty years ago thought he would go after "The Walls of Jericho." His best play was "The Two Virtues," in which E. H. Sothern some years ago returned to long pants for a season.

THEY'RE COMING IN TONIGHT

MISS JULIA SANDERSON DENMAN MALEY MISS EDNA MAY OLIVER

MISS SANDERSON has been a frequent and familiar visitor to Chicago in the two decades since her promotion to major parts and to starhood. She had her beginnings in a weekly-change company resident in Philadelphia, and then went into the chorus of "Winsome Winnie." She has performed here in "The Dairy-Maid," "The Arcadians," "Tangerine," and in pieces with Donald Brain, with Joseph Cawthorne, and with both. . . . She comes back tonight in the principal part in "Moonlight."

Mr. Maley, too, has been in this and in that through many seasons: sometimes with good parts and sometimes with parts so far from good that they've been forgotten by all save himself. He is well remembered, however, for a hit in "The Girl Behind the Counter," and for another as the hotel-clerk in "Very Good, Eddie" . . . He is now in the cast of "Ma Pettengill."

Miss Oliver, too, is in "Ma Pettengill," wherein she has the title-part. If she possess a Chicago record, it is not vivid; but she seems to be a somebody in New-York, if report be true.

FOR SOME OF US

MISS CHARLOTTE WYNTERS

She wasn't with Mr. Hodge when he was here two years ago in "For All of Us"; and she is now. . . . The "y" is duly noted.

New Playbills

OPENING TONIGHT:

"Ma Pettengill" in the Blackstone.—A comedy by Owen Davis based on those tales of Red Gap by Harry Leon Wilson that especially concerned the doughty ranchwoman. . . . Miss Edna May Oliver is to have the title-part; and with her will be Burr McIntosh, Miss Jean Ford, Edward M. Favor, Miss Emelie Polini, and Elmer Grandin.

"Hell Bent fer Heaven" in the Playhouse.—A play by Hatcher Hughes that had a New-York run last season, when he was named as the winner of the Pulitzer prize annually given for the "best native drama." . . . John P. Hamilton, who was in the New-York cast, is still in it; and others are Miss Frances Brandt, William Crimans, Buford Armitage, Miss Gladys Hurlbut, Frank Farley, and Walter Downing.

"Moonlight" in the Apollo. — William Le Baron's comedy of "I Love You!" as made into a piece with music; it was shown for a fortnight last season in the La Salle. . . . Miss Julia Sanderson heads the cast for this engagement.

William Hodge in "For All of Us" in the Studebaker.—Return of the author-actor in the piece wherein he had a long Chicago run, 1922-'23, in the La Salle and, later, in this house. . . . Frank Losee, Miss Marion Abbott, Miss Charlotte Wynters, Frank Burbeck, and J. Warren Lyons are of the company.

OPENING NEXT SUNDAY:

"Cobra" in the Princess.—A play by Martin Brown, author of "The Lady": it was warmly praised by the New-York critics last season. . . . Ralph Morgan, of the cast there, will be in it here.

APRIL 5:

"The Green Hat" in the Selwyn.—The play made by Michael Arlen on a basis of his novel of like name. . . . Miss Katherine Cornell is expected to head the cast.

STAGE-NEWS

A. E. Matthews, who was in last week's bill in the Palace, will have in the London performances of "Beggar on Horseback" the rôle acted here by Roland Young. . . . Miss Jeanne Eagels has been out of the cast of "Rain," because of illness. Miss Georgia Lee Hall, who has the part of Sadie Thompson in another cast, was put in Miss Eagels' place. . . . And the other cast was, when Miss Hall was commandeered, was in Racine, which is as near Chicago as "Rain" has yet been performed.

"Loggerheads," a play of Irish implications recently brought out in New-York in one of the Village hideaways, looks so good that it is being moved into a Broadway playhouse. . . . Whitford Kane is in it.

Irving Berlin is to fashion something for the Marx Brothers when they finish with their rude, funny show named "I'll Say She Is!" . . . The success of these four young men out of the two-a-day has been among the mercantile phenomena of the theater in recent seasons. And they are bully entertainers.

Miss Ellen Terry (who now carries the title of Dame) has been celebrating the seventy-seventh anniversary of her birth.

IN A FOLK-PLAY

MISS GLADYS HURLBUT

She is in "Hell-Bent fer Heaven," a novelty of the week; and that's all The Tribune appears to know about Miss Hurlbut.

Doug and Charlie Amuse Hollywood

By Rosalind Shaffer.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—A mystery that is intriguing all Hollywood concerns a newly introduced director, who is dividing all film folk into two camps, those who say yes and those who say no to the following yarn:

Gags pulled by Doug and Charlie on each other have been many and varied—nothing delights either of these two quite so much as putting over some practical joke on the other. Doug was going to pull a heavy party for some boon companions out at his house, and as part of his program always includes showing some picture to his guests on his private projection machine, he gave Charlie a ring and asked him if he had any picture to suggest.

"Aha," says the devilish Chaplin, "here goes." Turning to the phone he said: "Why, yes, this film, 'The Heaven Haunds,' is a wonder." Blah and more blah by Mr. Chaplin, and finally Doug thanked him for the suggestion and showed the film at the party. It was terrible, all the guests agreed, but Doug couldn't allow Charlie to give him the laugh on it, so he started in to out-rave Charlie.

"Marvelous—the symbolism is exquisite—marvelous up de um—gorgeous blah, blah, blah."

This by Doug. Charlie was nonplussed. The safe thing seemed to be to expatiate on this new wonder, so expatiate he did—and the leg pulling went on and on until, neither of the two kidders being willing to give in and admit himself outjoked, Louis Mayer appeared on the scene. Mr. Mayer is extremely literal, and on the strength of the fervid boosting of Doug and Charlie he hired the amazed young director of the atrocity under long term contract. As things are going, Mayer is beginning to wonder just who wrapped up that gold brick for him so neatly—for gold brick it seems to be.

Another yarn that seems to be delighting the dinner tables at the popular film cafés concerns Cecil De Mille.

When De Mille was working at Catalline filming the water scenes of a recent production, he was doing his directing from his private yacht in the harbor with a megaphone. The corps of "yes men" assisting in the work was located on the pier. Cecil would shout through the megaphone, whereat the yes men would start circling about yelling "yes, chief, O. K. chief, all right, chief." This went on for some time, the megaphone booming and the yes men yessing. Finally a palsied old plutocrat vacationing at the St. Catherine up the beach, who had been watching for the first time this amazing business of making pictures, teetered up to the head of the corps on the pier and pointing a palsied cane toward the omnipotent De Mille, asked, "When does he walk on the water."

MADONNA IN PASSION PLAY

MISS MARGUERITE GAUER.
[Lavecchia Photo.]

MISS MARGUERITE GAUER will take the part of Mary, the Mother of Jesus, in the Passion Play to be given at the Auditorium theater beginning today. There are 450 in the cast. Mrs. Marie Meyer-Becker, whose role was that of Mary Magdalene in Oberammergau, will play it here. The proceeds of the performances will be devoted to the building of a home for boys under the care of the Big Brothers of the Holy Name Society.

Here's a Picture with a Surprise

By Mae Tinee.

mary heroics or movement. He gives the impression of being absolutely sure of himself and, when cast in a rôle that fits him, makes that rôle live.

Miss Ayres plays Mrs. Dumont pleasantly. She is less camera conscious than I have ever seen her. Hedda Hopper gives one of her impishly sophisticated impersonations as Mrs. Hazleton. Taylor Holmes is silly and tiresome as the rogue. Edward Earle as the man who loves the heroine true does all right, but would look better if he'd not been so lavish with the lip stick.

The picture is pretty well staged and the photography is O. K.

See you tomorrow!

VOICE OF THE FAN

Disappointed in Tess.

Dear Mae Tinée: You requested opinions as to "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." I was disappointed, with two exceptions—the scenery was lovely and the actors well chosen for their parts, especially the hero and the villain. But changing the plot here and there and modernizing it spoiled the whole thing for me. It has such possibilities, if it were only produced with as few changes as possible and with all the local color that the author gave it! As a modern picture it is ridiculous. M. L.

Grateful for Guidance.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am pleased to know that even if you "have to sit through the performance" you still have the courage of your convictions, and are outspoken. There is far too much rot being depicted on the screen as well as elsewhere, at the present time, and we may be thankful that we have a reviewer to whom we can look to guidance as to what is worth seeing and what is not. A. G.

Less Blood, Please.

Dear Mae Tinée: Re Mr. Lammele in asking for fan's opinion on what pictures they like to see, would say, please stop the murders. It is horrible to go to a theater for entertainment and enjoyment and be obliged to go back home sick with horror and have nightmare in one's sleep. Please amuse us and entertain us with less blood! MILLICENT.

Foot troubles did this

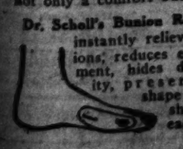
Do your shoes become run-over, worn out, spread and broken down before they should?

Foot troubles are responsible for this condition. The arches weaken and break down, the ankles tip inward and the shoe cannot withstand the strain and pressure.

Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances and Remedies will relieve and correct the foot troubles that produce the shoe troubles. There's a separate device or remedy for every foot trouble.

Call and see our foot and shoe expert. Bring your trouble to him. He's specially trained along these lines. Normal, healthy feet are not only a comfort but economical as well.

Dr. Scholl's Bunion Reducer instantly relieves bunions, reduces enlargement, hides deformity, preserves shape of shoes, 75c each.



Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer will positively relieve weak and broken down arches, weak ankles, and tired, aching feet; $3.50 per pair.

Kick Korner for the Movie Fans

Its Object—Objection. It's Your Privilege.

Dear Miss Tinée: I suppose every one, eventually, when sufficiently irked, writes in to wail on you. I saw "Greed." I read your criticism. They both irritated me. To me, the book "McTeague" was an epic, the film characters just as I'd visualized them, and the producer was to be commended for not mutilating the story. Of course, it's gaunt and stark—but are we becoming so Pollyanna-ish in our pictures that a sincere bit of realism is not to be brooked? Avaunt Dostoievsky! Hence, ho, Coupleus! Should a passing airship have swooped at the finish to lug off the swollen-tongued McTeague to "the dawn of a brighter tomorrow" and all that twa-twa?

The producer did show a few incidents in which I question his judgment rather than their authenticity.

So much in defense. But why in the world couldn't they have spent one more year of time on the production of the picture—and, if necessary, one more broken heart—and show an authentic background? The action is, I believe, about twenty years ago, and yet, excepting the principals, every one in the crowd mulls about in this year's style clothes and next year's style autos.

It doesn't seem possible a director would garble detail to such an extent—and to some of us who like to harbor illusions it spoils the flavor of a film.

Sorry to be ill humored today, as 90 per cent of the time I agree with your criticisms. They're generally great. M. M. M.

(Editor's note: Any time you disagree, you come right out and tell 'em! Your opinion is worth just exactly as much as mine. Glad you wrote.)

That Might Help, Too.

Having wheezed laboriously over equally ancient rails, the ancient engine jolted to a restful spot at no place in particular. Time passed tediously. Passengers looked out of the windows or drew their hats down over their eyes and tried to forget it.

When half an hour had elapsed the conductor came along.

"Hi, conductor," called one passenger, "as near as you can tell, what's the trouble?"

"We're taking in water," was the explanation.

"Well, why on earth don't you get another teaspoon?" V. S.

Better and Better.

"Your credentials are satisfactory," said a manufacturer to a youth who was applying for a situation as a clerk.

"Have you a grandmother?"

"No, sir."

"Any dear old aunt?"

"No, sir."

"Or any other relatives who might die during the 1925 baseball season?"

"No, sir."

"You'll do. Come in tomorrow for work." M. L. M.

It's All Over Now.

An elephant was walking in a jungle when he came to a pheasant nest and found that the mother bird had flown away. The small birds looked lonely and cold and hungry.

"Poor things," said the elephant, in a sentimental voice. "They have no mother."

And down he sat on the nest.

first of all "a seat for Every Child"

In the face of an alarming deficit of $19,000,000 in the educational fund, shockingly overcrowded classrooms and school buildings, mounting tax rates and unbridled tax-dodging and tax-fixing, there will be before the Finance Committee of the Board of Education next Tuesday a recommendation from the Superintendent of Schools to increase teachers' salaries.

Teachers' salaries can be increased in only three ways: At the expense of the children by increasing the number of children to a teacher, thereby decreasing the number of teachers in the school system; or at the expense of the tax-payers by increasing the tax rate; or by stopping tax-dodging and tax-fixing and enforcing the tax laws.

The teachers deplore the increasing of class memberships. Teachers now have from 45 to 55 children—nearly twice as many as they can teach.

Every teacher knows that she cannot do the kind of teaching to which children are entitled when she has more than thirty pupils in her class. And she knows that none of the children in classes of from 45 to 55 get the kind of training that makes for intelligent citizenship.

The Board of Education cannot legally use a dollar of the Buiding Fund to pay teachers' salaries, or to increase salaries. But it appears to be the intention of the Board to do this in effect by skimping on school buildings, thus saving in the Building Fund an amount equal to the additional amount to be expended from the Educational Fund to pay the increase in teachers' salaries. The net result would be no increase in the total expenditures from the two funds as the result of the increase in teachers' salaries. But this juggling takes from the children to give to the teachers. This skimping on the buildings is to be done by getting permits from the Building Department to build school buildings seating 816 children and then by platooning the schools use these buildings to house 1152 children. The 336 more children than seats will be crowded into the buildings, dumped on the playgrounds, into the auditoriums and gymnasiums, and all the children in the school will be kept rotating back and forth from classrooms to "dumping" places thereby increasing the fire and panic hazards and danger from spread of contagion and epidemic.

The record of the teachers of Chicago gives them the right to resent, and they do resent, any attempt to pit them against the children by making them appear willing to benefit themselves at the expense of the children. Our 25 years' record of protest against proposals of boards of education that would injure the children warrants the confidence of the public and deserves its condemnation of any present attempt to break up the organizations through which teachers speak and act.

The teachers co-operated with the Board of Education and the citizens a year ago to secure a favorable vote of the people on the proposition to increase the tax rate for the building fund in order to provide a seat in a schoolroom for every child. We renew our pledge—"A seat for every child"—and we insist that faith be kept with the public; that the increase in the building fund be used for the purpose for which the people voted; and that there be no skimping on the buildings nor overcrowding of classrooms, or new schools built with fewer seats than there are children to be housed.

The Superintendent's report recommending increase in teachers' salaries points out that the Board of Education has authority to submit to a vote of the people the proposition to increase the tax rate for the Educational Fund from $1.92 to $2.92. This report at the same time admits that less than one-fifth the total taxable values now bear the entire burden of taxation, that more than four-fifths of this value escapes. The teachers say instead of increasing the burden now borne by the one-fifth, tax the four fifths and lower the taxes on the one-fifth.

In a resolution adopted November 26, 1924, the Board of Education states that there were increases of over $500,000,000 in taxable values in Chicago between 1921 and 1923, while only $80,000,000 of this amount was added to the city's assessed valuation. We again demand that the officials charged with the responsibility of assessing and collecting taxes do their duty according to law and assess the taxable property in Chicago, thereby increasing school revenues by increasing the total valuation for assessment purposes instead of by increasing the tax rate on the people who are already overburdened.

The Board of Education, in the same resolution, acknowledge its legal responsibility in this tax matter when it stated:

> "The authority to appear before said Board of Review and to take all necessary steps to enforce the assessment of taxable property according to law is given by Section 35 of the Revenue Act of 1898 to all taxing bodies within the City, including the Board of Education."

We reiterate that it is the duty of the Board of Education to meet this issue squarely and honestly, without pretense and without evasion. The official records show that to date the Board of Education has not so met its acknowledged responsibility. It has evaded the issue, stifled the voice of the teachers, and thwarted their efforts.

As teachers, we are willing now, as we always have been, to meet our responsibilities to the community and to co-operate with every honest effort of the citizens and public officials to secure honest enforcement of existing tax laws, and to secure needed changes in those laws by lawful procedure instead of by tax-fixing and tax-dodging.

Platoon schools, double schools and double sessions, larger classes, larger schools, and all other shifts and makeshifts are shortsighted attempts to evade the real issue.

We agree with the Mayor in his message to the City Council on July 2, 1923, that if the tax laws were enforced "the financial difficulties now staring us in the face would melt away, the rate of taxation would go down, the tax burden would be more evenly distributed." Then there would be no excuse for camouflaging these makeshifts as "Educational Reforms" in order to establish them permanently in our schools.

Every child of school age is entitled to attend a middle-of-the-day school, to occupy a seat in a quiet, uncrowded school room, and to have individual attention from adequately trained teachers who are free from petty tyranny and the indignities of bureaucratic domination.

The teachers of Chicago believe, first, that adequate revenue is the fundamental need in the present critical school situation; second, that all attempts to ignore or to disguise this fact and deal with its consequences as if they were educational problems of school organization will prove futile.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation reiterates its demands—

(1) A seat for every child.
(2) Stop herding children in over-crowded classrooms and school buildings.
(3) Revise our antiquated tax laws.
(4) Stop tax-fixing and tax-dodging.

We appeal to you, Mr. Mayor, as the official representative of the children and citizens of Chicago, to appoint on the Board of Education citizens who are able, free and willing to co-operate with the teachers in securing, through enforcement of the tax laws, adequate school revenue instead of limiting the school opportunities of the children and crippling the schools because of insufficient revenue.

THE CHICAGO TEACHERS' FEDERATION,
By Margaret A. Haley,
Business Representative.

The Issue: "Shortage of School Revenue"

The Board of Education says—"Platoon the Schools"
● The Teachers say—"Stop Tax-Fixing and Tax-Dodging"

Why Your Children Are Being Platooned

Taxable Property	40	Billion Dollars
Property Taxed	4	Billion Dollars
Illegally Escaping Taxation	36	Billion Dollars

One-Tenth of the Value of the Taxable Property in Chicago Bears the Entire Tax Burden

If the tax burden of Chicago were distributed over the entire value of the taxable property in Chicago, the present school revenue could be doubled, and—

The tax rate could be cut down to one-fifth of the present rate

larly progressive along orchestral lines, and deprecates any idea that either the orchestral or choral works on the program will be of a new or startling nature. Wales is a country of small communities, with few cities large enough to support symphony orchestras, and the natural tendency of the Welsh is toward choral music, largely unaccompanied.

This concert is an attempt to interest the Welsh along orchestral lines and to bring their orchestral composers before the Welsh themselves as well as the general public. Mr. Owens plans to conduct Hopkin Evans' Brythonic Overture, Kenneth Harding's Prelude, Walford Davies' Festival Overture, Cyril Jenkins' Keltic Rhapsody, and perhaps part of Vaughan Williams' "The Wasps" Suite. The choral numbers, to be sung by the Haydn Choral society, will be "Daybreak," by Edward Broome; "The Four Winds," by Daniel Protheroe; "Arise, All Ye Nations," by Ambrose Lloyd, which is sometimes, known as the Welsh Hallelujah Chorus; Emlyn Evans' "How Sweet the Moonlight Sleeps," and a choral fantasy on Welsh airs by Mr. Owens.

The soloists will be Rhys Morgan, tenor, and Gwennie Williams Evans, soprano, who will each sing a group of songs and together a duet from one of the first Welsh operas, Dr. Joseph Parry's "Blodwyn."

Clara Clemens will begin her historical song recital series on Tuesday night at Kimball hall with a demonstration of some of the folk songs of France, Germany, Sweden, Italy, Russia, and Scotland. For reasons which may be valid, but which are unexplained, England and Ireland are omitted from the list. Miss Clemens traces the origin of European folk song to Brittany, where the druids and bards were not only singers but priests. With the advent of Christianity these guardians of tradition lost their priestly character, though not their song, and migrated to other lands, joining the troubadours in France and the Minnesinger in Germany, and carrying with them dance music as well as songs. Feared at first because of the great number of jugglers and other suspicious characters that wandered with them, they came to be greatly liked by the people because of their art, and succeeded in overthrowing church music and primitive church modes in popular esteem. Their song developing national characteristics in different lands thus became the basis of all national music.

The English performance promised by the San Carlo Opera company during its week at the Auditorium will be "Carmen," and will take place at the Wednesday matinée. The translation used will be that of Charles Henry Meltzer, which is published in the Edith Rockefeller McCormick edition. With one exception the principal singers are American born. Lorna Doone Jackson as Carmen, and Charles Hart, as Don José, will be present only in this one performance. Olga Kargan will sing Micaela, Joseph Interante, who will appear as Escamillo, was born in Italy, but received all his musical training in this country. Isaac Van Grove of the Civic Opera company, will conduct.

Among the other works will be "Aida," "Butterfly," "Traviata," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "La Bohème," "Martha," and "Trovatore." The list of singers will include Anne Roselle, Tamaki Miura, Gladys Axman Bianca Saroya, Josephine Lucchese, Stella de Mette, Mary Kent, Manuel Salazar, Gaetano Tommasini, Demetrio Onofrei, Mario Valle, and Mario Basiola. Fulgenzio Guerrieri and Aldo Franchetti are the musical directors.

Alfred V. Frankenstein and Samuel Jordan will play a sonata for clarinet and bassoon by Poulenc at the Chicago Artists' association concert at Fine Arts Recital hall on Tuesday afternoon, the first time that it has been heard hereabouts. Mme. Sturkow-Ryder and Jean MacShane will play numbers for two pianos, the Columbia chorus will sing under the direction of Louise St. John Westervelt, and Howard Wells will speak.

One might be pardoned for hesitating over a choice of recitals for this afternoon's entertainment, for three of the list are of a high order and each bears the label of being the giver's only recital appearance of the season. There is Alfred Cortot, the French pianist, at Orchestra hall, with the Franck Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, a group of Chopin Etudes, and other groups by Debussy and Moussorgsky. There is Maria Jeritza, the Metropolitan soprano, she of the blonde beauty, voice, and industrious press agent, at the Auditorium with arias, lieder, and French and American songs. There is Pablo Casals, most famous of the cellists, with a program running mostly to past generations.

Herbert E. Hyde, dean of the Illinois chapter, American Guild of Organists, will play a request program at St. Luke's church, Evanston, on Tuesday evening. The recital is free to the public.

Richard Hageman, who conducted with uncommon ability during a season of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will go to Los Angeles in September to be the conductor and artistic director of that city's civic opera season.

With the Melody Makers.

For convenience in referring to music, the Newberry library has placed its principal scores in a room on the fourth floor of the library building. A piano has also been placed in the room for the use of those consulting the collection. The music thus gathered includes the collected works of the classical composers, operas, and instrumental music for piano, organ and orchestra. Over 15,000 volumes are in the collection. Besides musical scores, there are books on the history of music, harmony, criticism, biographies of musicians, and other works relating to the subject.

"When he has lived a few more years," says a letter referring to this department and taking issue with a statement thereof, "I think he will be willing to admit that he is wrong in many of his points." The point about age is nicely put, and for a sincere though probably inadvertent compliment, the department extends hearty thanks. The rest of the argument might be followed and answered if it were not based upon a statement which I never made and never intended to make. "Music is entertainment and not a necessity to us as intellectual uplift," is what I am quoted as saying. Instead of "not a necessity," what I really said was "not necessarily."

Of events billed for later in the week, there is word of Alexander Brailowsky, who made a pronounced hit with the Chicago Symphony orchestra a short time ago, and who will give his first piano recital at Orchestra hall on Tuesday night. Beethoven's not altogether unknown "Appassionata" Sonata will be on his program, also a Chopin group and works by Bach, Scarlatti, Schumann, Scriabin, Moussorgsky, and Liszt.

Tito Schipa, whom this department firmly believes to be the finest lyric tenor in the world today, will be the guest artist at the concert given by the male chorus of Swift & Co. at Orchestra hall on Thursday night. He will sing arias and songs of various types and will also be the soloist with the chorus in several numbers. One of these will be Louis Victor Saar's "The Singers," the prize winning composition in last year's competition held by the organization.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra's program for Friday afternoon and Saturday night will contain Glazounow's "Le Printemps," Tschaikowsky's "Manfred" symphony, and Alfven's "Midsummer Wake." Hans Kindler, cellist, will be the soloist, playing Boyle's concerto.

New American Works.

The Society for the Publication of American Music has selected three more works to add to its reason for being as expressed in its title. They are a sonata for harp and piano, by Carlos Salzedo of New York; a trio for piano, violin, and cello, by Frederic Ayers of Colorado Springs, Col.; and a sonata for piano and viola (or cello), by Aurelio Giorni of New York. It is promised that two of these works will be published during the current season, and if a large number of new memberships in the society is received, the third will issue. Memberships cost $5 a year, and each member receives a copy of each work published. William Burnet Tuthill, 185 Madison avenue, New York, is the secretary of the society. The advisory committee which passed on the scores consists of Georges Barrère, Harold Bauer, Adolfo Betti, Chalmers Clifton, Rubin Goldmark, Lewis M. Isaacs, Hugo Kortschak, E. Robert Schmitz, Frederick Stock, and Emerson Whithorne.

Their Prize Band.

By invitation of Mayor Dever and Chief Collins, by permission of Mayor Hylan and Commissioner Enright, New York's prize police band will make a visit to Chicago a week from tomorrow night. They are all members of the force in New York, and the New Yorkers speak of them in high terms as musicians as well as police.

The band is making a brief tour this month, not only as a junket for the men, but with the idea of establishing a closer relationship between the police departments of New York and the cities to be visited. The greater number of the men have never been outside of New York, and their officials desire to have them become more intimately acquainted with the workings of other departments.

The organization has been in existence for twenty years, and those who know bands say that it is a good one. It will appear under the patronage of the Chicago police department, and its players will be the guests of the city. It will appear in full dress uniform and probably make a short parade under the escort of the local police. Its concert will be at Orchestra hall.

PULCHRITUDE AND MELODY

With her Nordic blonde beauty and her gift of song, Mme. Jeritza bids fair to be an assuaging influence on both eye and ear. She will function in both capacities at the Auditorium this afternoon.

SONG HISTORY.

CLARA CLEMENS.

Daughter of the American humorist, Mark Twain, and wife of the conductor and pianist, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, she will on Tuesday evening give the first of a series of seven programs tracing the historical development of song from its early folk steps down to the present. The recitals will take place at Kimball hall.

Doris Keane Smiles About "Starlight"

By Burns Mantle.

they are a lot more interesting and reasonable than the humans with whom they are associated.

The story is of a fifteen year old child who, relieved by a generous author of all her relatives, wanders into the marionette theater and becomes enamored first of its working and then of its handsome Italian proprietor. He being a particularly rapid young person, and being that night summoned to war, proposes marriage, and before she knows it he has whisked her off to the priest, licenseless but willing.

Three years later the child wife is widowed by a report of her husband's death received from the Italian consul. Immediately thereafter she is sought violently by a young white slaver and a fair youth of her own age. At which point husband returns unexpectedly and whips the two of them.

Frances Lightner is the author. Miriam Hopkins, a young, pretty and fairly talented child of 17 or 18, from the south, plays the lead. C. Henry Gordon and Dwight Frye help her.

Signs of Improvement.

Your correspondent, continuing his observations in your behalf, is pleased to report this Sabbath that there have been promising developments in the matter of cleaning up the Broadway drama. The bed that formerly figured as an exquisite bit of scenic background for "The Harem," though it had no part in either the plot or the dialogue of that play, has been replaced by a grand piano and a vase of roses.

And the bedroom scene in "Ladies of the Evening" has been changed to a street scene. Here the crusading artist, seeking to prove that the souls of bad girls can be saved, makes his proposition to a young woman he meets in the shadows that if she will tell him the true story of her fall he will reimburse her for her time.

It is practically the same conversation that formerly was held in the bedroom, but the police insist the effect is vastly less suggestive. And the police should know.

I am not so sure about "The Harem" change. The Belasco beds are always so wonderfully decorative, so rich in coverings and canopies, and so pleasantly inviting to a tired playgoer that I feel it will be missed.

On the other hand, I grant you that nothing could be more chaste than a grand piano. Unless, possibly, it be two grand pianos.

And the vase of roses! That is a clever touch! How, I ask you, can even the artful Lenore Ulrich, in harem gown, succeed in sowing seeds of sin in the minds of an audience looking steadily upon a vase of roses unless, of course, they happen to be those suggestive red roses? I must drop in again some evening to look at the roses.

Typically Ziegfeld.

There are stranger things 'twixt heaven and earth than an explanation for the success of successful showmen. It is not always a matter of judgment in the selection of plays. It is seldom a question of insight in the choice of popular subjects. But it is always, or nearly always, a reward for having done the thing that is done supremely well.

Ziegfeld, Belasco, Hopkins, Ames—they are all alike in this one particular. Ziegfeld, for example, has just moved into the Cosmopolitan theater in Columbus circle with a musical play entitled "Louie the 14th," Leon Errol the star.

It isn't much of a play, take it scene for scene. Nor is Errol the funniest man in the world. But the combination plus the Ziegfeld sense of form, pace, color, and general effectiveness of scene, makes for a show that satisfies.

It is so with all the Ziegfeld productions. I have yet to see a "Follies" that was generally acclaimed. Everybody goes and everybody complains. And everybody goes again. They complain because they get less than it is humanly possible to put into entertainment. And they go again because, even though that perfection "Follies" may impress them as being below standard, it is a lot more attractive than its competitors.

The title in the Errol show, which has a German base and was rewritten by the English Arthur Wimperis, is derived from the employment of Louie, a cook with the A. E. F., as the fourteenth guest at a rich American's party in France after the armistice. Without Louie there would have been thirteen guests, and the hostess is fearfully superstitious.

The party scene is much like other party scenes, notably that of "Seventh Heaven," with Errol disguised as a representative of the comic nobility. But the decorations for it, from a platoon of twenty-odd butlers to a gold dinner service decorating the table, are gorgeous.

Before this Louie has been the vehicle for aforementioned and a guide, with and without yodel. He is funniest as the yodeler. The music is by Sigmund Romberg, who used to specialize in Shubert scores, and contains a chorus for male voices entitled "Rosalie." That earned several encores. There is also a good topical number, "Taking a Wife," and the usual ballads, duets, and such.

In support we have an English ingenue, Dorothy Patston, a pretty girl and competent. Dorothy, it appears, has been over here seven months waiting for "Louie" to be ready and drawing her not inconsequential salary every Saturday. Ben Shutta, one of the rougher but funnier soubrettes, is well liked, and Harry Fender is the tenor baritone.

The Case of Dreiser —By H. L. Mencken

rarian; he was bold, and he was the victim of injustice (from the timorous publisher aforesaid). So the scepter was shoved into his hands.

The attack upon him during the late war served him almost as well. It was made by poltroons, and so it only gave fresh enthusiasm to his customers. The war, indeed, ruined all the literary patriots. The art of letters demobilized almost as quickly as the art of moneylending, and so left them high and dry. It would be curious to make a list of the more florid of them: Owen Wister, Robert W. Chambers, Irvin Cobb, and so on. Not one of them is taken seriously today. All the men who are talked about now were missing when roll was called by Dr. Creel: I point to Odell, Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill—and Dreiser.

"Sister Carrie" Leads.

Well, what is there in Dreiser that justifies all this good luck? What has he done that is of solid worth? It seems to me he has done a lot, both as writer and as man. He has written at least two novels of the first rank, perhaps the best ever done by an American. He has written many shorter pieces of a rare and superlative excellence. He has thrown out idea after idea that is now the common property of all of us. But, best of all, he has shown resolution, fortitude, high and unshakable purpose. Best of all, he has stuck to his guns heroically, regardless of the stink bombs hurled by embattled birchmen, regardless of the Comstocks, regardless of alarmed publishers, regardless of all the lures that have been set—many of them by his friends—to turn him from his goal.

In many ways his first novel, "Sister Carrie," remains his best, despite its grossly incompetent design. What gave it instant distinction when it came out, and what keeps glow and vitality in it today, is simply its discovery of lowly and miserable folk as human beings—its artful and eloquent evocation of the tragedy of the poor. There had been, of course, novels about poor people before, even in America. But in practically all of them the approach had been from the outside and in a lofty manner. Either the poor were sentimentalized in the manner of the Sunday school books, or they were fondled like pet dogs or amusing children, in the manner of Dickens. Dreiser viewed them seriously—and realistically. Somehow, he got beneath their skins. Somehow, he made them real.

No wonder "Sister Carrie" was talked of! It was something quite new in the federal union, and certainly not too familiar in the rest of the world. It was the ancient story of the seduced village maiden purged of all its commonplace peckmisffery and sentimentality, and elevated to the dignity of tragedy. The thing had a fine and high earnestness in it and a gusto that no sensitive reader could escape and a texture that belonged to it and to no other book. Reading it was a profound emotional experience. I doubt that many of the pious critics who denounced it ever read it, but you may be sure it was read by all the beginning novelists of the time, for its influence began to be felt within a year or two and remains in full tide today. The whole course of the American novel was changed by that one book. At a single stroke the genteel tradition was disposed of and novel-writing became a serious business in America, to be approached honestly and humbly.

Call for Serious Mood.

Dreiser himself has written no better, though "Jennie Gerhardt," which followed after eleven years, is obviously sounder in design, and in "The Titan" there is greater variety and color. But though he has not surpassed his first effort, he has certainly done no discredit to it; for the principles that it set forth have been adhered to in all his later work. I know of no other novelist, indeed, who has stuck to his ideas more resolutely. He knows more today than he knew in 1900, both of the tricks of his trade and of life itself, but he still sees the world as he saw it then. The philosophical speculations of his later years are no more, at bottom, than deductions from "Sister Carrie." And his autobiographical volumes no more than show the scaffolding for it.

Dreiser's defect as a novelist lies in his lack of superficial charm. He is quite unable to be ingratiating as, say, Sinclair Lewis is ingratiating. There is little humor in him, and that little is grotesque and harsh. He is, again, seriously insensitive to the music of words; it would be difficult to imagine a literate man with less sense of style. He seems, indeed, to have an almost pathological preference for the trite phrase, the banal word. The consequence of all this is that he seems a bit uncouth to readers accustomed to the easy facilities and ingenuities of a clever generation. Every young novelist who comes down from Princeton or Yale writes better than Dreiser does.

But Beethoven also lacked charm, and yet he still lives. For he had something more important: he knew how to be poignant. Dreiser has it, too. His writing is slipshod, he maneuvers clumsily, he often seems to grope in darkness—and yet at the end there is always that effect of somber drama, that profound appeal to the feelings. To read him unmoved is to confess that there is nothing moving in the eternal tragedy of man. His books are not to be attempted lightly, as a diversion for a rainy afternoon. They call for a serious mood. When that mood is brought to them they yield something far more memorable and enduring than charm.

W-G-N WILLING TO BROADCAST FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Asks Teachers to Decide on Details.

BY FRANK HINMAN.
[Radio Editor.]

The recent broadcasting of President Coolidge's inaugural address, to which countless school children all over the country listened, by means of radio equipment set up in public, private, and parochial schools, again has brought up the question—What is to be radio's function in the education of Young America?

No one can doubt the tremendous educational possibilities that lie in radio, but up to this time no practical method of using these possibilities has been evolved. At present very few schools have good radio receiving sets, for the simple reason that there has been little of educational value on the air during school hours.

Would Bring Celebrities.

What school wouldn't, if it could, bring to its pupils such celebrities as Fritz Kreisler, Lorado Taft, Margaret Anglin, and hundreds of others? What school wouldn't devote a class period if its pupils could listen to a concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra? Using the radio, any of the above could be brought to the pupils—not of one single school — but of all the schools within a radius of 200 miles. Two hundred miles is about the best that can be expected with daylight broadcasting.

But there are many questions and problems which must be solved before broadcasting for school children is established. W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, would willingly take its place as a "radio teacher" and have a program for school children, but it doesn't know where to begin. It does not know what the teachers want. It does not know what grade or grades of children would benefit from radio broadcasting. It doesn't know what would be the best time for the programs to be put on, how long they should be, or how often.

Want Views of Teachers.

For that reason THE TRIBUNE is making an appeal to teachers, principals, school boards—in fact, every one interested in the education of children, either in public or private schools, not only in the cities, but in the country towns as well. It would like replies to all of the questions listed below, and if enough interest is manifested in the proposition it will undertake the broadcasting of daylight programs for school children. Please address all replies to the Radio Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago, Ill.

Have you a radio set in your school or will you provide one if the broadcasting is undertaken?

How often should there be broadcasting, every day, every other day or only once a week?

What hours should the program be given? Give first, second and third choices.

Should the programs be general ones for the whole school or should they be for the different grades?

What should be the nature of the programs? Please go into details.

These replies will be carefully studied in an effort to determine just what is wanted in the way of programs for school children.

INSURANCE CO. ADDS RADIO TO HEALTH METHODS

Will Give Exercises by Wireless Daily.

The educational importance of radio has received a new endorsement in the plans just made public by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company to add the use of the air to the other health propaganda methods by which, in the last fifteen years, the company's mortality records have been remarkably improved.

"Radio right now is the biggest thing in modern social developments," declared Robert L. Cox, second vice president of the company. "In a short time a radio receiving set will be as essential to every home as a cook stove. The enormous advance of radio over any other means of education gives it a practical value which cannot be overestimated. It is universal, intimate, vivid and optional, what more can you ask for educational purposes?"

Daily Exercises by Air.

The Metropolitan officials are completing a studio in the Metropolitan tower at Madison square, New York City, from which daily morning exercises will be sent out through WEAF of New York, WCAP of Washington and WEEI of Boston.

The exercises will go on the air at 6:45 a. m. for one hour. They will be divided in three separate classes of twenty minutes each, beginning at 6:45, 7:05, and 7:25 a. m., respectively. Reception at such an hour in the morning cannot be guaranteed within any given distance of these three centers, but a vast radio audience in the New England, Middle Atlantic and southern states will be able to pick up the program every morning. Once a week a health talk in the evening will be added as a special feature.

"While radio itself is no experiment," Mr. Cox said, "the use of it for teaching health is still in the developmental stage. We are going to give the radio audience what they want in this respect. We shall be willing and glad to hear through any of the stations what people think of our exercises and our health talks."

Send Out Exercise Charts.

The morning program will be supported throughout these areas by the distribution of exercise charts and other special literature devised to give the fullest measure of health value to the work. The proper procedure in each household will be for the most energetic member to hop out of bed at the appointed hour and tune in on the Metropolitan tower.

The first thing heard will be the music of the famous chimes, which will rouse the sluggards and help them get the static out of their bones.

The exercises will be conducted to music and keyed to a happy cheerful movement, with a view to starting the members of the largest health class in the world on their way to school or a day's work filled with coursing blood and genuine good humor. "Diet and exercise are the secret of health," declared one of the officials. "An erect carriage and good humor in the morning are half the battle. If people realized the effect of such simple things on the mortality tables, many of them would add fifteen and twenty years to their lives and have a lot of fun doing it."

CLEVELAND SET OWNER TUNES IN ON ANTIPODES

Cleveland, O., March 14.—The first record of reception from a broadcasting station in Australia was set by a Clevelander, C. B. Gallatin. He has just received a letter from the operators of 3AR at Melbourne, Australia, confirming his reception. The letter follows:

"We are in receipt of your letter of the 6th inclosing postage, for which we thank you. We are very pleased indeed to hear that you have been successful in picking our station up and would like to receive further reports from you. Our wave length is 480 meters and we are at present transmitting on 1KW.

"The amount forwarded by you, i. e., postage, we purpose having framed together with your letter, as a memento of the first report which we have received from the U. S. A. Yours faithfully,

"ASSOCIATED RADIO COMPANY OF AUSTRALIA, LTD.
"E. J. HENRY, Secretary."

Mr. Gallatin was operating his receiving set at Hibbetts, O., at the time he picked up the Australian station. The set is a six tube outfit, having one stage of tuned R. F., three of untuned R. F., and three of audio, two tubes being reflexed.

"MISS LIBERTY" NOW RADIO BASE FOR ARMY CORPS

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—The little island upon which stands the Statue of Liberty, at the entrance of New York harbor, was originally used as a fortification to protect the then growing metropolis. As early as 1841 troops were stationed there to be ready to ward off the enemy. With the development of the long range gun and aerial warfare, this site has long been obsolete as a fortification.

However, Miss Liberty is gayly keeping up with progress, and now hears more secrets than probably any lady in the world (none of which she tells), for at her feet is located the army radio net base for the Second corps area, all messages being received and transmitted from this station relative to war department official business. An army post there is designated as Fort Wood, and it has again gained its strategic importance in protecting the city of New York in modern warfare.

INSULATION MATERIALS ARE GIVEN TESTS

Washington, D. C., March 14.—During the period from 1918 to 1922, the bureau of standards made measurements of phase difference (power loss) and dielectric constant at radio frequencies upon a large number of miscellaneous electrical insulating materials to determine properties of interest in some radio construction work. Among the materials upon which measurements were made are asbestos filled materials, celluloid films, cellulose nitrate, khotinski cement, vulcanized fibre, glass, marble, mica, paper, pulpboard, slate, varnish, wax, and wood. The results of these measurements are given in a paper entitled "Radio Frequency Properties of Insulating Materials," by J. L. Preston and E. L. Hall, which was published on pages 26-35 of the February, 1925, issue of QST, and in some cases may suggest materials suitable for insulation at radio frequencies.

WIRELESS FANS WANT NUMEROUS POPULAR SONGS

Two weeks ago a radio station began the compilation of the number of times various popular songs and instrumental selections were broadcast, and this is the result:

"Blue Eyed Sally," 43 times.
"I Wonder What Became of Sally," 54 times.
"Charlie My Boy," 46 times.
"Memory Lane," 24 times.
"Where Is My Sweetie Hiding?" 44 times.
"Copenhagen," 38 times.
"Follow the Swallow," 44 times.
"Too Tired," 24 times.
"Red Hot Mamma," 20 times.
"Hard Hearted Hannah," 20 times.
"Doodle Do Do," 18 times.
"Way Out in Kansas," 14 times.
"Three O'Clock in the Morning," 5 times.
"My Best Girl," 16 times.

During one night "Follow the Swallow" was heard from seven different stations and two of them were playing it at the same time.

U. S. Explorers to Take Radio Equipment to China

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—The third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History of New York, under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, will carry into the heart of China a full equipment of radio apparatus in order that this caravan of exploration may always be in touch with the news of the world. The expedition left San Francisco last Saturday. J. R. Schackelford, cinematographer of the party, will also handle the wireless equipment, designed especially by A. H. Grebe for exploration work. Dr. Mu, radio pioneer of the Celestial republic, has already offered to assist the exploration party and has tendered his laboratories to the Americans. Incidentally Dr. Mu reports that China is now supporting five broadcasting stations, each presenting daily programs.

U. S. AND EUROPE HEAR TETRAZZINI IN RADIO DEBUT

Twenty British Stations Carry Program.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 14.—One of the greatest British radio events in many moons occurred Tuesday night when Tetrazzini, the famous Italian soprano, sang her favorite arias into the microphone for the pleasure of an invisible audience, estimated at 10,000,000 in the British isles, and a much greater number counting Europe and the United States. Tetrazzini starred in an all-star concert broadcast by the British Broadcasting company through twenty wireless stations, as well as the mighty Chelmsford high power plant. Special arrangements were made to give Americans the concert through stations KDKA, Pittsburgh, and WEAF, New York. The prima donna was overcome with emotion after her successful radio debut.

"Thank you—I enjoyed myself so much," she said in a quivering voice to her unseen audience after the last song. "I very much like to thank, too, the British public. Good-by."

Papers Praise Her.

Tetrazzini parties were held in restaurants, cafés, hotels and private homes throughout London. Newspaper music critics paid high tribute to radio by their lavish praise of the clearness of the prima donna's notes over the ether, declaring the radio songs were just as fine in every respect as though she was on the stage.

Following Tetrazzini's triumph, an announcement is made of another radio treat tomorrow night, when Paderewski, the world's greatest pianist, will play from London. Paderewski's consent to play was obtained after months of most strenuous entreaties and negotiations.

Following Paderewski the next broadcasting feature will be a speech to the British empire by the prince of Wales at the end of March, before he leaves on his trip to South Africa and South America.

Real Radio Land.

The British isles are now a real radio land, according to statistics issued by the British Broadcasting company. Eighty per cent of the population of the United Kingdom are within crystal range of one of the company's services, which is the highest of any country in the world, including America. The company hopes to increase this to 100 per cent within a year.

TRIBUNE ENDS CAMPAIGN FOR SETS FOR BLIND

Last week witnessed the conclusion of THE TRIBUNE'S campaign to provide radio sets for the needy blind, a large number of Mohawk five tube, one control sets being distributed among blind persons whose names were submitted by the Council of Social Agencies. These sets are now being installed by the Boy Scouts.

THE TRIBUNE has received numerous requests for sets within the past few days, but regrets that inasmuch as the fund has been exhausted it cannot supply any more. It also wishes to take this opportunity to thank the public, whose contributions made possible the donation of the sets to the blind. The campaign has now been closed and no further contributions to this fund are desired.

BRITISH WANT RADIO TO GET YANK PROGRAMS

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—Continental competition in the electrical industry is causing concern to British electrical manufacturers, according to cable advices to the department of commerce. For example, to meet Swiss competition manufacturers require a 30 per cent cut in materials and 20 per cent wage cost reduction. Broadcast receiving licenses total 1,200,000. A steady advance is noticeable of about 100,000 experimenters from crystals to tube sets, and there is a consequent growing demand for long distance range picking up America, involving a possible market of American made apparatus, but there is a strong manufacturers' and traders' organization pledged to sales of only domestic goods.

SEES FUTURE OF BROADCASTING IN SHORT WAVES

World-Wide Programs Will Be Possible.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 14.—[Special.]—The linking together by short waves of hundreds of stations for the simultaneous broadcasting of programs is the ideal toward which radio broadcasting must strive in order to obtain the greatest flexibility of broadcasting service, according to H. P. Davis, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

In the use of short waves for relaying or boosting, according to Mr. Davis, lies the future of broadcasting as by proper use of this medium for interstation linking programs, originating in the centers of the art, may be broadcast simultaneously in all parts of the world.

Britain Picks Up U. S.

In the last few weeks the short waves transmitted from KDKA have been picked up and repeated by the British Broadcasting company in Great Britain; by the station operated by the South German Broadcasting association in Stuttgart, Germany; by station JB in Johannesburg, South Africa; by the station coöperating with the Melbourne Herald, in Australia, and by the station operated by La Nacion, the leading newspaper of Buenos Aires, Argentina, South America. This international repeating is in addition to the regular repeating of KDKA's signals by its repeating station KFKX at Hastings, Neb.

Though the international repeating of KDKA's programs recently took place at different periods and not simultaneously, there is no reason for their not doing so.

Station KYW at Chicago, and WBZ at Springfield, Mass., also operated by the Westinghouse company lately have been equipped to pick up KDKA'S short wave signals.

Heard All Over World.

Thus it is perfectly feasible for any or all the stations just enumerated to coöperate with any other station using short wave signals in repeating its broadcasts, for example, and if this should be done, a program originating in Pittsburgh could be heard simultaneously by radio in Great Britain, Germany, South Africa, Australia, South America, as well as the United States.

With the further development of short wave transmitting and receiving apparatus, any station properly equipped could pick up and repeat KDKA's broacasts and a broadcast central would then be initiated. Other short wave transmitting stations located at strategic points could also transmit just as does KDKA at the present time and from other channels of transmission. Then the stations equipped to pick up and repeat short wave transmission would have several transmission channels to choose from and thus have different programs.

RADIOS FOR PERU.

Anticipating the opening of the broadcasting station at Lima, Peru, six hundred receiving sets are in or en route to the city. It is said that the United States and Great Britain will split this new trade about fifty-fifty.

GIRLS VIE WITH BOYS IN MAKING RADIO RECEIVERS

Limited Cost of Sets in Contest Is $1.50.

BY JOHN PICKERING.

Nearly 3,000 radio receiving sets, ranging in style from a tiny instrument in a walnut shell to more elaborate jobs, are being built by boys and girls of the public school playgrounds in the second annual radio contest. One of the rules of the contest is that the cost of the instrument must not exceed $1.50.

C. H. ENGLISH.

The contest this year has been opened to girls, as well as boys, and Charles H. English, supervisor of recreation, looks for the girls to build nearly half of the sets which will be exhibited. The Fair has offered a complete four tube set valued at more than $100 to the winner.

Must Wind Own Coils.

Each set must be constructed by the boy or girl entering the contest, even to the winding of the coils, and every instrument must be able to tune in clearly on a Chicago station before it is accepted.

The cost limit has been placed at $1.50 in order that every one will have a fair chance, and the amount expended on construction, as well as workmanship, will be taken into consideration in determining the winner. All of the small novelty sets, such as pencils, match box, nut shells, and hairpins, must be mounted on cardboard.

Contest Closes March 28.

Points will be awarded on small novelty sets, large novelty sets, best construction, and greatest number from a playground. Radio construction is not new to the school children, as it is conducted in some of the elementary schools. The contest, however, makes it possible for every child to have contact with radio, and following the contest it is hoped to have the pupils build a large set for their playground in order that they may receive afternoon programs. The contest, which opened March 9, closes on the 28th.

WGY SETS PACE FOR NUMBER OF HOURS ON AIR

During 1924 WGY, Schenectady, was on the air for 1,430 hours, or an average of four and one-half hours a day, and only seven suspensions of broadcasting took place, requiring a total of thirty-six minutes for repairs.

From figures available to date, WOC, at Davenport, was a close second to WGY, having a total of 1,409½ hours for the period from Jan. 1 to Dec. 25, or an average of 4.46 hours a day, and interruptions in broadcasting amounted to only eighteen minutes for repairs for the same period.

6 KW'S RADIO SLOGAN.

The slogan adopted by station 6 KW, Tuinucu, Cuba, is: "If you hear the koo of the cuckoo you are in tune with Tuinucu."

Hints for Amateurs

If you know any radio hints or tips which you think would be interesting or helpful to other amateur set builders, send them in to the Radio Hint editor. Hints should be kept as short as possible.

Never use emery cloth to finish the surface of panels. This may leave small particles of carborundum on the panel, which is a conducting medium. Use a fine grade of sandpaper. After working the panel to a dull finish, dust it off and apply a light oil with a rag.

The success of good headphones lies in the accuracy to which the air gap between the tip of the pole pieces and the diaphragm is adjusted. The distance between the diaphragm and each of the pole piece tips must be the same, so that the maximum volume may be had without distortion.

The use of a loop for an antenna is becoming more popular each day, but there are certain precautions which must be taken to get the most out of its directional qualities.

It should be located so that it is free to rotate and not come nearer than eight or ten feet to any metallic object of any size, such as steam radiators, bed springs, metal roofs or the lead-in wire from an outdoor antenna. In such cases these articles also pick up some of the energy which would otherwise pass to the loop, causing the loop to lose much of its directional properties.

Radio fans often hesitate about running a wire from their receiving set to a loudspeaker in another part of a house, because they fear that the extra resistance of the wire cuts down the strength of the signals. Actually, however, there is already so much resistance in the loudspeaker circuit that even several hundred ohms of added resistance will have little effect on reproduction.

Never remove the caps from headphones. This impairs the efficiency of the units for the following reasons: When the phones are tested in the factory the receiver caps are tightened until the pressure upon the diaphragm is just right. This test is made with delicate instruments.

Selectivity of some circuits, such as the superheterodyne, can be increased by replacing the grid leak and condenser with a C battery. The battery is hooked between the A plus line and the filament terminal on the transformer, the positive side going to the A battery line.

KNOX COLLEGE WILL BROADCAST ON WEDNESDAYS

Galesburg, Ill., March 14.—Regular programs have been arranged by the Knox college station, WFBZ, broadcasting at 254 meters, to be given from 8:45 to 9:45 p. m. on Wednesdays. The programs will be musical in nature, and under the direction of Prof. Bentley of the Knox conservatory of music.

Numbers by the girls' glee club, piano solos, violin ensembles, and a little symphony orchestra of nine instruments are included in the schedule to date.

The Wednesday night programs from 8:45 to 9:45 will continue through the college year, it was officially announced by the committee on radio control, of which Prof. A. C. Longden is chairman and Willis Terry Jr., Prof. W. F. Bentley and Phil Hill for the student body are members.

RADIO TAXES IN LITHUANIA MAKE SPORT EXPENSIVE

Tariff Evaders Apt to Lose Sets.

VILNA, Lithuania, March 14.—It ought to make American radio fans feel good to read the tariff imposed upon listeners-in in Lithuania, which is as follows:

Yearly tax for amateur receiving sets in private homes, and newspapers offices where news received will be published for the public, $10; for receiving sets used by banks and other institutions for commercial purposes, $200; for receiving sets in cafés, moving picture theaters, restaurants, and places of amusement, $100; for receiving sets installed in places where an admission fee is charged the daily tax for each apparatus installed is $2.50.

Dealers in radios who install receiving sets in their places of business are required to pay a yearly tax of $200.

For registering and sealing each imported or locally produced receiving set or its parts the producer or buyer must pay $1.50 for each receiver, $1 for each amplifier, and 10 cents for each tube.

Radio receiving sets or parts of sets which are not licensed will be confiscated and proceedings will be taken against the owner.

SERVICE BY THE GOLDEN RULE

AMATEUR RADIO FANS TO FOLLOW FLEET BY AIR

Will Help Navy Keep in Touch with Ships.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—During the time the great United States fleet is on the cruise to Hawaii and Australia amateur radio fans throughout the country will have the most unusual opportunity for listening in that has ever been afforded to them in the history of wireless. Likewise they will have an unprecedented chance to coöperate with the navy department at Washington in keeping a closer watch on the fleet en route.

According to Lieutenant Commander H. P. Le Clair the fleet, which sails from San Francisco for Hawaii early next month, will be able to talk to amateurs all over the United States even when our ships are as far away as Australia and New Zealand, which are at the opposite end of the earth and a distance of about 10,000 miles.

Because of the three hours' difference in time between our eastern and western states the western amateurs will be able to enjoy a longer period of listening in, perhaps as much as five hours a night, but amateurs everywhere will get a good tryout.

Amateur in Charge.

The navy high frequency 10,000 mile sending set will be with the fleet from the time it leaves San Francisco until our ships reach home next October. It will be in charge of Lieut. F. H. Schnell of the naval reserve force and traffic manager of the American Radio league.

This remarkable 54 meter set was designed and manufactured at the naval research laboratory at Washington. Lieut. Schnell, who is not only well known to amateurs but is a noted authority in the matters of high frequency, will take with him several smaller transmitting and receiving sets of his own design covering a wide range of frequencies, which will also be tried out.

The call sign of the United States fleet high frequency station is assigned NRRL, no matter in what ship installed.

The scouting fleet and the battle fleet are just now assembling at San Pedro, Cal., and combined they will form the United States fleet, composed of battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, mine ships, and aircraft. It is possible the latter may be reinforced by the great dirigible Shenandoah.

Fleet Sails April 15.

The fleet will sail from San Francisco April 15 for Hawaii and about two months later the cruise from there to Australia and New Zealand will begin. Direct radio communication will be maintained with the fleet and the navy department at Washington through the Bellevue naval laboratory in the outskirts of the national capital.

The united fleet will comprise 168 vessels. It will really be divided into two fleets. The first is the scouting fleet, composed of one battleship, eight cruisers, thirty-six destroyers, sixteen submarines, eight supply and fuel, five mine sweepers and mine layers, four air squadron (tenders), and one flagship.

The second is the battle fleet, comprising ten battleships, four cruisers, thirty-six destroyers, twenty-four submarines, sixteen supply and fuel, four mine sweepers and mine layers, three air squadron (tenders), and two flagships.

Altogether the cruise will afford the most remarkable test to long distance communication since the beginning of radio. And it will be a test in which amateurs everywhere may participate and at the same time be of real assistance to the navy department at Washington in keeping a closer watch over the fleet in its momentous cruise.

NOTED RADIO "HAM"

Theodore Ostman of Ridgewood, N. J., whose call letters, 2 OM, are known all over the country and who gained fame when he communicated with MacMillan, the explorer, is further honored. HIS FALSE TEETH SO NOISY ARTIST CAN'T BROADCAST

Oakland, Cal., March 14.—Disqualified from speaking over the radio because his false teeth made too much noise for the sensitive microphone to ignore, Fred Mantle, San Francisco landscape gardener, is today considering a silencing grid to be used between the plates.

KGO control room operators declared the noise of Fred's mouth crockery sounded like defects in their broadcasting machinery so the ban was put on the landscape artist.

Aurora Church Will Broadcast Program Today

The St. Olaf Lutheran church, Aurora, Ill., will broadcast services today at 11 a. m., through the courtesy of WJJD [302.8], Mooseheart. The pastor, the Rev. Oscar J. Johnson, B. D., will preach. There will be a special musical program.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TO HEAR NOTED SPEAKER

Dr. Robert Bruce Taylor, principal of Queen's university, Kingston, Ont., who spoke before the microphone for the first time when he delivered an address at the Sunday Evening club in April last year, will be heard again before this organization tonight, when he will speak on "Sacred and Secular," the talk to be broadcast by KYW, together with the music program.

DR. ROBERT BRUCE TAYLOR.

Dr. Taylor was a favorite lecturer in the leading universities of England and Scotland before crossing the Atlantic, and served as pastor of Presbyterian churches in Aberdeen, London, and Montreal. He also served as chaplain and major in the 42d battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada, in France and Belgium.

John W. O'Leary, one of the vice presidents of the club, will preside at this meeting in the absence of the president, Clifford W. Barnes, and Prof. Archibald G. Baker, University of Chicago, will give the informal Bible talk at 7 o'clock on the subject "John the Baptist." The Imperial Male quartet will sing at this early service and the choir of 100 will give popular sacred selections at the later meeting, at which John B. Miller will be the soloist.

WIRES OF RADIO SET RESEMBLE NERVES OF BODY

If They Fail Receiver Disturbances Follow.

In the nervous system of the human body each nerve is a conductor of a current or impulse. Each individual nerve is well insulated with a protective coating of fibrous membrane. If this coating is in any way injured or destroyed, the whole system may be thrown out of balance and will not function properly.

If we picture the wires in a radio circuit as the "nervous systems" of a receiving set, it will be seen that in case proper care and thought has not been given the selection of the different wires that go to make the complete radio receiving set, or if improper or poor insulations are used, it is quite likely that disturbances will be set up that will result in the "system" not working smoothly.

Signal Energy Minute.

The signal energy from far away stations may often be less than a millionth of a volt and it is, therefore, readily conceivable that even a slight resistance introduced into the receiving circuit might reduce or destroy signals. In order to obtain the best results it is advisable for the builder to provide the most suitable conductor so that resistance and leakage are reduced to a minimum.

It is, of course, impossible to state definitely or within narrow limits what is the correct size of wire or what type of insulation is most suitable for this or that unit of any circuit. This is apparent when we consider the present state of the science, which is really as yet more or less in the experimental stage.

Choice Is Wide.

For the building of the coil units we have a large field of different types of magnet wire to select from:

Plain enameled, single cotton covered, double cotton covered, single silk covered, double silk covered, cotton covered enameled, and silk covered enameled wire.

The plain enameled wire formerly was one of the most popular types for winding of the earlier and simpler types of coils. It was soon found, however, that the disturbed capacity in coils wound with this type was extremely bothersome. The plain enameled wire has, therefore, been discarded almost entirely for this purpose and the demand is now for the textile covered wires. The best results are obtained when using the double cotton covered or double silk covered types. This does not, however, apply to certain types of R. F. transformers or A. F. transformers where enameled wire is used exclusively. In such coils the space factor is of extreme importance and it is not practical for the fan to attempt to wind these coils with the ordinary means at his disposal. The number of turns in an audio frequency transformer, for example, run as high as 20,000.

The high frequency [Litz] cable composed of a number of fine wires, each insulated with enamel, giving a laminated construction, has become very popular lately for the winding of variometers and variocouples for use in R. F. circuits. These conductors effect a great reduction in distributed capacity and also practically eliminate eddy currents.

Loop Antenna Wire.

For loop antennaes, a stranded bare wire consisting of 60 strands of No. 38 wire twisted with 5 strands of half hard phosphor bronze is especially suitable. The insulation may be a covering of cotton and over this a covering of silk, or it may have two servings of silk.

Types of Ground Wires.

The ground wires need not, of course, be insulated, but it is usual to have some sort of covering for appearance. It is advisable to use as heavy a wire as practical for the ground—12 or 14 B. & S. gauge is suitable.

Aims for Battery Leads.

The battery leads should preferably be of the rubber covered braided conductor type. For the "A" battery No. 14 or 16 B. & S. gauge, and for "B" batteries No. 16 or 18 B. & S. gauge has been found satisfactory.

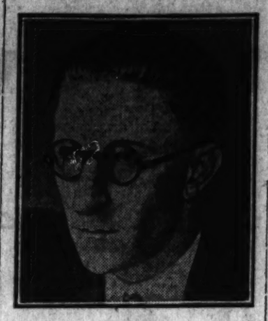
Connection to Rotors.

Always use a flexible copper pigtail for this connection. A wiping contact may be good at first, but will soon corrode and set up too much resistance.

Bulgaria Prepares to Admit Home Sets

BUCHAREST, March 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Roumanian government is preparing a bill permitting the installation of wireless receiving sets in private residences. The bill will limit the issuance of licenses to Roumanian subjects only and to provide that the government may seize all radio apparatus in case of mobilization.

Radio's Boss Here



E. A. BEANE.

U. S. supervisor of radio for the ninth district, which comprises the middle western states. He is in complete charge of the transmitting end of the radio game, keeping an eye on all commercial and amateur sending stations in the district.

WHO'S WHO IN GOVERNMENTAL RADIO CIRCLES

Country Divided Into Nine Districts.

The department of commerce has just issued a list showing the names and addresses of the government radio supervisors in the various districts in the country. These supervisors, working in compliance with the ship radio act of 1910 and the radio transmission act of 1912, have charge of the enforcement of the radio communication laws of the United States.

They have supervision over the licensing of amateur and commercial transmitting stations and they check up on these stations frequently to see that they are not exceeding the power they are entitled to use under their licenses.

Receiving sets do not come under their jurisdiction, despite the fact that they get numerous complaints from radio fans kicking about interference.

If the interference is caused by some neighbor's high powered set, by neighboring street car lines or by power leaks the supervisor can do nothing about it. Should such interference be the result of violations on the part of some sending station, either commercial or amateur, however, the supervisor can soon bring the violator to time. Following is the list:

CHIEF RADIO SUPERVISOR—W. D. Terrell, department of commerce, Washington, D. C.

ASSISTANT CHIEF RADIO SUPERVISOR—W. E. Downey.

DISTRICT 1—Charles C. Kolster, headquarters, Boston, Mass.; address, Custom House. Covers Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

DISTRICT 2—Arthur Batcheller, headquarters New York, N. Y.; address, Custom House. Covers New York and New Jersey, Passaic, Essex, Union, Middlesex, Monmouth, Hudson and Ocean counties in New Jersey.

DISTRICT 3—R. Y. Cadmus, headquarters Baltimore, Md.; address, Custom House. Covers New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia.

DISTRICT 4—Walter Van Nostrand Jr., headquarters Savannah, Ga.; address, Custom House. Covers North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Porto Rico.

New Canadian Station with Beam Circuit

With the completion of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company radio station at Drummondsville, Quebec, it is expected that connection with Australia will be made possible by the new system of radio transmission. The new beam circuit which will be operated by the Marconi organization in conjunction with the British post-office will permit messages being sent from England to Drummondsville and thence relayed to Australia.

ENTHUSIASM FOR RADIO IN CANADA IS AT HIGH POINT

Great Demand for Five Tube Sets.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—According to all reports, radio enthusiasm in all sections of northern Ontario is at its highest at the present time and the demand for radio sets and accessories is increasing rapidly, say consular advices to the department of Commerce. Although a government license is necessary for every set in operation, it is understood that many have failed to comply with the required formality and are still operating their sets without a license.

Dealers throughout the district claim that a marked change in their radio business has taken place during the past year. Last year and in previous years, since radio became popular, there was a fair demand for one and three tube sets for headphone and loud speaker use, respectively. This demand has fallen off to a large extent, and at the present time the tendency seems to be in favor of five tube sets for loud speaker and two tube sets for headphone use.

Fewer Home Made Sets.

Another remarkable feature noted by the dealers is that evidently fewer home sets are being made than in previous years; people are now buying sets complete, and that is claimed to be due to the fact that competition in the industry has enabled the dealers to bring down their prices.

According to the Canadian tariff, radio sets are dutiable at 27½ per cent; they are also subject to a sales tax of 5 per cent when imported by retail dealers and consumers. The sales tax is estimated on the duty paid value (value plus duty) and is payable at the time of entry.

To be permitted to operate a radio receiving set the owner must obtain a license from the Dominion government, the fee for which is $1 per annum.

U. S. Capital Controls Industry.

While some of the sets in use are of American manufacture, the majority are products of Canadian factories controlled by American capital. Individual purchases are made either from the more important local dealers or from Montreal or Toronto. The chief obstacle to the development of a market for the American product is, of course, the duty and the sales tax, and no small factor to be taken into consideration is the one that a buyer of a radio set desires an apparatus that uses standardized parts, so that when the necessity arises to replace any he will have no difficulty to obtain such parts at the least possible cost and with the least possible delay.

RADIO IMPROVES VOICE.

A music authority declares that many a mediocre voice takes on a new and surprising beauty when it is projected through the ether. He adds it is still a question in his mind if every type of voice can be broadcast to the best advantage.

RADIO CRAZE IN SPAIN BRINGS MOVIE PROTEST

Film Men Ask Heavy Tax for Listeners.

BARCELONA, Spain, March 14.—Spanish motion picture exhibitors are manifesting considerable alarm concerning the effect of radio broadcasting on their industry, according to the report of Assistant United States Trade Commissioner Albert Noel.

In Barcelona alone more than 90,000 radio receiving sets were sold in 1924, and in January, this year, stimulated by the announcement that the Teatro Liceo, where the grand opera stars perform, would be made a transmission station, the first production to be transmitted being Mozart's "Magic Flute," sales of radio sets bounded to an enormous height, Mr. Noel states. It is reported on reliable authority that during the ten days preceding the first night of "The Magic Flute" over 10,000 radio sets were sold over Barcelona countries.

Movie Men Kick.

The moving picture film renters interviewed by Mr. Noel declare that all this cannot be without its effect on their industry. Attendance in the Barcelona cinemas, which already was noticeably diminished on account of the radio craze, fell off, they say, more than 20 per cent during the month of January. They do not look for the radio craze to pass, but to go on increasing up to a certain point, and there to remain more or less stationary. Where that point is they would like to know.

The Association of Renters and Importers of Moving Picture Films of Barcelona [with members from all over Spain] has held a good many meetings in which radio competition has been discussed. After much discussion of ways and means of meeting this competition, it was decided to draw up a memorial for the government in which its attention would be called to the fact that the cinemas pay heavy taxes to the national treasury and that their position is threatened.

Ask Radio Tax.

The memorial also set forth the importance of the Spanish title printing industry, which gives employment to hundreds of heads of families, the importance of the film importers as taxpayers, and the importance of the Spanish production of films. In conclusion it pleaded for a substantial tax to be assessed against all owners of radio apparatus and for transmission stations to be taxed more heavily, calling attention to the income this would bring for the treasury.

W-G-N NOTES

A list of artists with good old Irish names will entertain from W-G-N on St. Patrick's night, next Tuesday. There will be Tony Corcoran, baritone; Eileen Toomey, soprano; Dan Toomey, tenor, and Joe O'Connor, baritone, in a program of Irish favorites.

It is not yet too late to send in your questions on Chicago's traction and transportation problems to be answered over the radio on Thursday evening by Mayor Dever in his "radio interview."

The W-G-N announcer will be the interviewer, but the radio audience will be the questioners. The best queries submitted will be put to the mayor and answered by him immediately before the microphone. Letters should be addressed to W-G-N, Drake hotel, Chicago.

Jack Little and Paul Small, the popular harmony team, are back in town. They will sing from W-G-N on Tuesday and Saturday evenings at 10 o'clock.

The fashion show at the Davis company store will be broadcast by W-G-N during the next week. Six of the models on parade will each be described in minute-long sketches over the radio by Mrs. Josephine Green. The daily broadcasting will open at 3:10, commencing tomorrow.

In addition to the orchestra music daily five minute lectures at the annual nature exhibit at the Davis store will be broadcast. On Wednesday nine well known movie stars will appear in person at the show and on the radio.

W-G-N'S LISTENERS TO PICK THEIR OWN MUSICIANS

So great a number of singers have responded to the request of W-G-N for tryouts for the projected W-G-N male quartet that Musical Director Charles H. Gabriel Jr. has decided to let the public choose the artists.

Beginning Tuesday, March 31, the station will start a "quartet week." Both the classic and the popular music hours will be given by either male, female or mixed quartets. A number of organizations have been booked but the station extends a cordial invitation to singers to participate.

W-G-N's audience will be asked to vote by mail on the merits of those who appear. Later, weeks will be set aside for other forms of entertainment, including trios and duets. Those proving the most popular in the public estimation will be given frequent regular appearances at the station and will be known as official W-G-N organizations.

NAVY MEN WORK ON UNDERWATER COMMUNICATION

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[Special.]—The problem of radio and underwater sound communication still continues to be an important factor in the efforts made by the navy bureau of engineering to maintain and improve the fleet's equipment. There is no doubt as to the necessity for efficient radio and sound communication in tactics, strategy, fire control, navigation, and the administration of the fleet. Every effort is being made to equip the ships with modern radio and sound apparatus, but a great deal of work remains to be done, however, before the radio and sound communication in the fleet is satisfactory.

Alabama Poly Is Given Radio Broadcasting Station

Birmingham, Ala., March 14.—The Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn will have one of the best equipped broadcasting stations in America, under the terms of a gift just made by the Alabama Power company of this city. President Martin of the power company has donated the company's broadcast transmitter, formerly known in the radio world as WSY, to the Auburn college. For some time this station was operated in Birmingham by the power company. The outfit was built for the power company.

B. L. A. REACHES OUT TO ENLIST NEW MEMBERS

Aims to Extend Influence Over Country.

The Broadcast Listeners association is continuing the energetic drive it inaugurated some time ago to extend its influence throughout the country by establishing branches in various cities affiliated with it.

Set owners throughout the country are waking up to the fact that organization is necessary for their own good. The association receives letters almost daily from enthusiastic fans from all parts of the country regarding the organizing of B. L. A. branches.

The communities now under way along these lines are Elgin and Bloomington, Ill.; Indianapolis and Terre Haute, Ind.; Marquette and Big Rapids, Mich.; Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.; Des Moines and Iowa City, Iowa.

At present the B. L. A. have members in twenty-two states, Frank H. McDonald says. Each location will without doubt develop a branch—locally the B. L. A. maintains a radio service laboratory for its members and a technical board including ten engineers. Semi-monthly meetings are held at which there are technical lectures and demonstrations of radio apparatus. At these meetings B. L. A. artists entertain the members and their guests in person.

The headquarters address of the B. L. A. is 6240 Cottage Grove avenue. Open meetings are held the first and third Wednesdays of each month.

Old Chicago Director Bosses Joliet Station

Program from Cuba Is Rebroadcast by WAHG

New York, March 14.—[Special.]—On one of the recent rebroadcast tours of WAHG, the Cuban station operated by Frank H. Jones was picked up. The station is known as 6KW and is located at Tuinicu. According to a leter from the Cuban broadcaster he had an unusually large card response in answer to his solicitation for acknowledgments.

SEPARATION OF WAVE LENGTHS IS INSUFFICIENT

Government Finds Reallocation Necessary.

Washington, D. C., March 14.—[By Associated Press.]—Present separation of radio broadcasting wave lengths by ten kilocycles has been found insufficient by the department of commerce, and another effort will be made to relieve interference between stations broadcasting on adjacnt wave bands.

The department believes this relief will have to come from one of two sources, either the refinement of broadcasting apparatus to permit of much closer tuning by the listener-in, or the separation of wave lengths by fifteen kilocycles instead of ten. The latter course is more probable.

Separation of the stations would involve a further reallocation of wave lengths and would be a move in the opposite direction from the recommendations of the recent national radio conference, which recommended the present ten kilocycles and which first favorably reported a separation of only seven kilocycles.

Such reallocation of wave lengths, in the view of department officials, would result both in making it more difficult for the establishment of new broadcasting stations and the forcing of present stations on lower wave bands.

TOUGH ON THE DEALER.

A Mitchell county, Kas., dealer went out to a country church to demonstrate a new radio and couldn't get hold of a thing but dance music.

Routine Performance

Below is a letter—one of many such—received from an enthusiastic builder who followed a Silver Super Design in building his receiver. Reception of KDKA in California is not easy—very few receivers will bring them in with even fair night time regularity. Yet a Silver Portable Super does it—every afternoon—on the loud speaker.

Silver-Marshall, Inc.
105 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Westwood, Calif.
March 3rd, 1925.

Dear Sirs:

The Portable Super that I bought from you is sure a wonder. It is the most stable of any super I have yet experimented with. I can get K.D.K.A any afternoon with tremendous loud speaker volume.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) HENRY SCHREINER

Mr. Schreiner's results are exceptional, and though they are dependent in a very large measure upon very favorable reception conditions the fact remains that of all the receivers he had built the Portable Super was the unchallenged superior.

That's just a reason why building a Silver Circuit has come to be recognized as synonymous for building the best.

That's why, wherever you find a fan with the human desire to own the best of receivers, you find him confidently operating a Silver Circuit—getting day in and day out the utmost of results.

Parts for the Portable Super, $58.15

Included are a drilled and engraved panel, low-loss condensers, special new type intermediate frequency transformer unit, rheostat, potentiometer, audio transformers, and every necessary item, down to the last screw and nut.

McMurdo Silver's booklet, "The Portable Super-Heterodyne," describes this receiver in detail. It contains a wealth of super information—data heretofore available only to engineers. Price, 50c.

Original Models of every Silver Circuit Design are always on display—ready to be demonstrated, or for you to tune yourself.

If you can't come in, just send a stamp for circulars describing all Silver designs and S-M products.

for clearest reception your radio socket must have these

3 exclusive advantages

1. Low loss. Laboratory tests in leading engineering university proved that of 13 best known makes, Na-Ald Sockets were the only ones having losses lower than a good low loss condenser.
2. Low capacity. The same test showed that Na-Ald has lowest capacity of any socket. This is very important for short wave length reception.
3. Positive side-scraping contact (not just side pressure) that cleans corrosion from tube terminals. Only Na-Ald Sockets have this essential feature.

USE Na-Ald Sockets in the set you build or buy, if not already installed by the manufacturer. Dealers: Price others 35c and 50c. Mail coupon for free booklet of tested circuits and facts about laboratory test.

Does Your Radio Make Music Sound like—

. this— or this— - or this

NOISE
(Non-Periodic Vibrations; unpleasant sounds)

TONE
(Periodic vibrations, without overtones; sounds which have mere musical pitch)

TONE plus desirable OVERTONES
(Tone color—REAL music)

Without Overtones You Get no Rich, Resonant Voice nor Tonal Beauty. You Miss the Supreme Pleasure in Radio

How Pfanstiehl Reproduces the Most Delicate Overtones

ANY good radio set can get distance, simply by amplification. There is no distinction about that. To get tone quality is quite another matter. And tone quality is the real measure of radio reception. Radios differ in this respect just as pianos differ. You judge a piano by its ability to produce a beautiful tone. You judge a radio by its ability to reproduce a beautiful tone, from a distance.

In a piano, quality of tone depends upon the manner in which the overtones are produced and controlled. Without them you could have no richness or beauty of tone. You would have a colorless, uninteresting sound. You can get beautiful piano music only from a fine piano in the hands of a good performer. Paderewski himself could not get tonal beauty out of a poor piano.

Overtones Perfectly Reproduced

In radio you have a similar situation. It cannot receive a lovely voice or beautiful music unless it reproduces the overtones which make it beautiful, exactly as they are sent out in delicate vibrations from the transmitting station.

That has been an extremely difficult thing to do in radio reception, simply because radio engineers have not known how to control the forward stream of radio energy as it passes from circuit to circuit in the set. Some of the energy strays off and feeds back. That is what causes the uncanny noises you hear, noises which have to be choked down or neutralized by a lot of complicated devices, and these distort and spoil the delicate super-vibrations which make overtones in your reception. Your tonal beauty is gone, in exactly the degree that your overtones are distorted or suppressed.

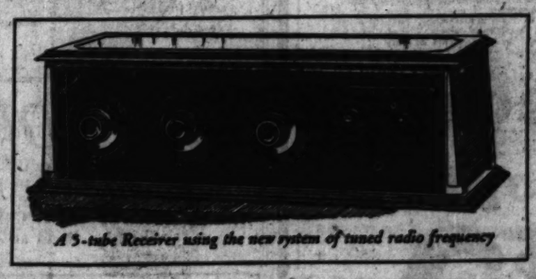
The matchless beauty of Pfanstiehl tone lies in the utter absence of feedback to disturb the delicate super-vibrations which make the overtones. These come through INTACT. There is no distortion whatever. The tone is full, rich and clear. You can enjoy exactly as transmitted the vocal charm of a beautiful singer or the tone color of a great violinist.

What an immeasurable advantage that is!

Distance, selectivity, volume, portability, are all values in radio which people want and can have to the extent that the maker chooses to afford them. There is no special problem about that. Radio science knows how.

The Big Problem in Radio Is Tone Beauty

The big problem in radio is tone beauty, a full and true reproduction of voice or music EXACTLY AS TRANSMITTED. This problem has been fundamentally solved in the Pfanstiehl. It gets the same distance, selectivity and volume as other high-grade 3-tube receivers; but in tone it is matchless, for the reasons above given.



A 3-tube Receiver using the new system of tuned radio frequency

To any radio technician who is interested, will be sent a scientific explanation of the means used by Pfanstiehl to accomplish this result. The ordinary radio user is not so much interested in that. He wants the result. The way to get it is to have your dealer demonstrate the Pfanstiehl to you. That will bring quick conviction. You will never be satisfied thereafter with any radio set which cannot reproduce the delicate overtones.

Hear the new Pfanstiehl Overtone Receiver at your radio or music dealer's. If he does not have one we can quickly get it to him.

USERS: Enjoy a personal Pfanstiehl demonstration. Send this coupon for name of nearest dealer.

MISS KATHRYN RAY

MISS RAY appears to be one of those young women who must help the drama though they swing for it. Anyway, she's swinging in the improving entertainment known as the Earl Carroll Vanities, wherein her assignment is to be lashed to an oscillating contraption and pretend that she is the pendulum of a flossy clock. . . . Mr. Carroll, who modestly advertises that his mission in life is to exalt the female form, hasn't yet figured out what pendulums are wearing as clothes in 1925; so, Miss Ray doesn't wear any as she swings.

Newsy Gossip from Hollywood Concerning the Movie Stars

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Hollywood, Cal., Mch. 14.—[Special.] Middle of the afternoon at Lasky's—Adolphe Menjou, slick, smooth heart snatcher of the shadowed sheet, was dashing through the office clad in knickers and a hurry.

"O," said he, noticing the presence of ladies, "you must excuse my appearance. While I am not actively working I make the most of this Hollywood Country club life."

Then he launched forth into an animate description of his new house and garden—and it comes out that this sophisticated villain is the proud breeder of Sealyham terriers, an ardent shovel wielder and potato bug plucker, and, in all, likes nothing better than to get home to the wife and see how the new gladiolas are coming after the rain. Be it known by these presents he is not a brunette, but a tantalizing, light auburn, with large blue eyes which roll for no woman but his lawful wedded wife.

Saturday night at the Biltmore found a party of young married and engaged couples dining and dancing together. Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan, Corinne Griffith and Walter Morosco represented the married folk, while Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor were the engaged ones.

Marie Prevost was in flesh colored chiffon sewn with brilliants, the skirt billowing gracefully at the hem. Claire Windsor set off her blonde hair with gray and orchid chiffon, and a white Spanish shawl, brilliantly embroidered, served as a wrap. Corinne Griffith, with Nile green chiffon sewn in silver flowers, wore an ermine cape. Marshall Neilan and Blanche Sweet were at a table by the dance floor, Blanche in a princess gown of flat king's blue crêpe with a girdle of brilliants at the natural waist line.

Large gold bells, Spanish flags, and Spanish dancing girl dolls helped to make Tuesday night at the Cocoanut Grove Mission night—and Mae Murray had undertaken the rôle of Little Missionary to a party of friends, in all six, who were making merry with her at her table. Bob Leonard was not present, which suggests that the tempestuous course of their ship of dreams is again hit by a waterspout. No one has seen them together for the last month—in fact, poor Mae's battle with her director, Von Stroheim, seems to have found echoes at home.

A coral chiffon, hung with little coral balls of silk made with a bouffant skirt showed off the sprightly form of the lady as she danced with Jerry Morley, her squire for the evening. Jerry seems to specialize in squiring discontented movie mammas. Not long ago, while Alma Rubens was making up her mind to divorce Dr. Goodman and fall in love with Ricardo Cortes, Jerry was on the job.

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, with 3,400 rooms

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL
Largest in Size
Most Reasonable in Rates

BY obtaining what is, in effect, a "sky-lease," the Morrison Hotel has added considerable breadth to the scope of its "economy traditions." For a long period rooms have been rented here for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other front-rank hostelry; valuable store subleases that pay all the rent have made this possible. The new Clark St. addition will, however, provide 850 more rooms—400 in the tower. These rooms will be practically free of ground rent.

The present hotel contains 1,054 outside rooms, each with bath; but the New Morrison will have 3,400 rooms—the world's largest hotel.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, renowned throughout America for its sparkling entertainments, excellent meals, and perfect dance music. The artists who will appear throughout the week beginning Monday, March 16, will be as follows:

FRED TRAVERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA
"The Reigning Kings of Dance Rhythm"
THE TEN ARAKIS
Sensational Ladder Act
EDDIE MATTHEWS
Eccentric Dancer
LAWRENCE McINTYRE
"The Indian Bard," in Vocal Selections

1875—Conn's 50th Anniversary Week, March 15th to 21st—1925

They Have Come to Fame Together

For half a century Conn and the great names in band and orchestra music have been inseparably linked. Conns are the instruments upon which the world's foremost artists and conductors have played their way to fame.

Medals of highest award at International Expositions have been the proof of Conn supremacy and a spur to greater achievements. Improvements originating in Conn laboratories have brought wind instruments to their highest development.

Every Conn a Quality Instrument

Most important of all to you who play, or aspire to play, is this: Every Conn instrument is built to that supreme standard of quality which has won the endorsement of the greatest artists. For Conn also has developed those processes of manufacture which insure uniform excellence. Among these is the famous hydraulic expansion of all tapering tubes.

With their exceptional ease of playing, beauty of tone, and reliability of action, Conn instruments afford the quickest and surest means of success, the greatest measure of musical satisfaction to amateur and professional alike.

- - - SEE THE CONN - - -
50th ANNIVERSARY EXHIBIT

The Conn dealer in your community is showing a special exhibit of Conn instruments during Conn 50th Anniversary Week, March 15 to 21. See the display in your dealer's window; inspect the instruments in his store. This is "open house week" with Conn dealers everywhere. You'll be welcomed.

Conns Cost No More

See and hear for yourself. The Conn dealer near you will gladly demonstrate the instrument which interests you most. Remember, Conn is the only maker of every instrument used in the band. You can arrange to try a Conn in your home, without obligation. Convenient terms can be arranged. Your dealer is listed below; make it a point to see him, NOW.

Signs of Spring Are Lurking Along Pedestrian's Path

By Mme. X.

SPRING is certainly at hand. One of its first signs is the odor that rises and seeps through the senses as the pedestrian strolls across the little four sided park in front of the Newberry library. It's a space that used to be called Washington square in the faraway days of the writer's youth. The saunterer is greeted by an unmistakable fragrance. It is Mother Nature in her busy, active period of the year. It is not unlike the fragrance of a busy, active, plump mother of a large family who has been hard at work over the kitchen stove all the morning. When you know what it is, you like it.

In the little park it emanates from a soft ecru coating of some mild manure that lies over the ground in windrows as if blown there by a southwest wind. Down below, the grass roots and hyacinth bulbs are already conscious of its presence and odor. They really like it, and thrill to its suggestion of rebirth and new life.

There is no more propitious moment than the present one and no more delicious book to read in this particular moment than Mrs. Walter Brewster's "The Little Garden for Little Money." Even a casual glance into it, a hurried reading of its first chapter, a swift survey of its charming pictures leaves one with the feeling that the most important thing—even more, the only thing—to do now is to start digging up the winter soaked earth and prepare it for its great mission, producing flowers, shrubs, vines, trees, and grass. She even succeeds in making decaying matter attractive; manures become alluring under her touch; hard, back breaking manual labor beckons with imperative yet charming gesture. The desire grows with reading.

What in life is more utterly seductive than to produce fragrance and color from soft black earth and moisture? O, you lucky mortal with a house and garden in some verdant suburb, how I envy you reading this booklet and putting Kate Brewster's wise and gayly imparted advice into practice. It is "the life," and nothing can touch it in the long run for happiness and satisfaction.

Wyoming's Woman Governor.

Over half a century ago, in the early '70s, word was flashed across the land that a woman named Susan B. Anthony had been pelted with rotten vegetables at a public meeting in Massachusetts because she advocated equal rights for women as citizens. One of Wyoming's legislators read this item out in a meeting of the state legislature, and said that because of the insult put upon women by this action in a public meeting in New England and to offset it, as far as possible, he would offer a bill in the Wyoming legislature giving the same suffrage to women as men enjoyed in the state. This law was passed, Wyoming being the first state in the union to provide for our American women what is now a nation-wide law.

Therefore it is more than fitting that Wyoming should be the first of our forty-eight commonwealths to elect a woman governor. And such an uncommonly attractive one, too, she is! Ye gods and little fishes! She is pretty and chic enough to have come right off 5th avenue, or even from one of those smartly dressed summer colonies in Long island. She is of medium height, with soft brown hair, charming features, lovely, what the French call "matte," complexion, a gentle voice, pretty hands and feet, and a manner both easy and well bred. She wears becoming mourning for her late husband, whose place she holds now by the largest majority ever cast for any candidate by the voters in Wyoming.

During her husband's administration of state affairs she was with him and his confidante in all his many sided interests as governor, so she has had a training that equips her better than many a man is who takes up the office. She is accustomed to public speaking, having worked in many a state campaign. She is a striking example of the woman in politics today, a new species which is leaving far behind the short haired, ill dressed, loud voiced kind that tradition—among men—associates with the pioneer movement in woman's suffrage, though why I don't know. All of the great leaders in this movement that I ever met had soft, persuasive voices, gentle manners, and attractive personalities. These charming characteristics, according to report, belonged to Miss Susan B. Anthony. Her successors, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, certainly had them to a marked degree.

When she appeared at the U. S. senate during the recent inauguration ceremonies Gov. Ross received an unprecedented ovation. It is against the unwritten law of that tradition ridden body to applaud any one, but the senators forgot restrictions and when she entered on the arm of Senator Warren of Wyoming—now the ranking senator in that body—with one accord the entire company rose and clapped and cheered the first woman governor of the land.

It is a tremendous thing to be the first in any forward going movement. If Gov. Ross keeps her present poise and level head, she may go far on the path of political preferment. Though she is a Democrat, she was elected by both parties, which bespeaks a popularity of unusual quality and dimensions.

Woman's Fair Nears.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman gave a hastily organized tea for Gov. Ross on Tuesday afternoon at the Casino, to which were invited some of the leading women in town at the moment, including a number who are busy organizing the woman's world's fair. This growing enterprise is fast nearing completion and will be ready on time for its opening on April 18 unless all signs fail. Mrs. John A. Carpenter is designing a most gay and charming setting for the fair. The huge floor space of the exposition palace in the outer Lake Shore drive will be alive with brightly tinted tents and awnings; picturesquely garbed girls and men will stroll about with cigarets and candy and other wares, or playing and singing folk and other songs.

Of the 280 booths for exhibitors all but eighty are already sold. Mrs. Parmelee McFadden, who is in charge of the advance sale of tickets, reports that of her 50,000 she has disposed of 35,000, an amazing achievement.

The public will learn, among other things, of the unrealized variety in avocations followed by women. A woman plumber and a woman manufacturer of steel barrels will be among the exhibitors. There is hardly a line of industry in which women cannot be found today and in which they are not making good, if one can believe reports.

It will be a good show and well worth making a long journey to study and enjoy. Granted good weather, that vast structure out there on the city's eastern edge should be chock full of visitors for the six or seven days of the exposition.

Military Ball on March 28.

On Saturday evening, March 28, the fifth annual Army and Navy ball will be given in the gold room of the Congress hotel. It will be what is called a Mi-Careme affair—that is, mid-Lenten. These military balls are always exceptionally gay affairs, all the youth of the land responding to calls of our soldiers and sailors—doughboys and gobs, to speak technically—and heartily agreeing with that famous song in that once popular operetta, "The Grand Duchesse," entitled, "O, comme J'aime le militaire, j'aime le militaire!" Capt. Louis Loeser is general chairman, while the committee in charge of the entertainment is headed by Maj. F. L. Beals and John J. Finlay, and the chairman of the pageant is Mrs. Robert H. Gardner.

The pageant will consist of a set of Society has been focusing its attention and interest for the last week and a half on the wedding of Mrs. Courtney Letts Stillwell to John Borden, which took place yesterday in the apartment of Mrs. Frank C. Letts at the Wardman Park hotel in Washington, D. C. The new Mrs. Borden's sister, Mrs. George F. McLaughlin (Hollis Letts), went to Washington to be present at the ceremony.

The Letts sisters, daughters of Mrs. Frank C. Letts, have been popular and admired members of Chicago and Lake Forest's young married set since their debuts several years ago. Mrs. Stillwell's divorce from Wellesley Stillwell was consummated in France last summer.

Mr. Borden, who was divorced from Mrs. Ellen Waller Borden in December, is a sportsman and popular clubman. He has recently purchased the Charles Garfield King residence at 1550 Astor street. Mr. and Mrs. Borden will spend the summer abroad.

Miss Edith Walker, who is touring Europe with her mother, Mrs. William Ernest Walker of 6 Scott street, will be among the next winter's group of debutantes.

tableaux presenting the famous women in American history, beginning with Pocahontas and including Betsy Ross, who made the flag; Martha Washington, Mary Lindley Murry, Molly Pitcher, Dolly Madison, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Barbara Frietchie, Charlotte Cushman, Clara Barton, and a group of girls representing the Red Cross, Yeomanettes, Salvation Army, motor corps drivers, and ambulance drivers.

Just to look back for a moment, perhaps you do not remember that Mary Lindley Murry enabled Gen. Putnam to save his little army of 4,000 men by entertaining and detaining Gen. Cornwallis. Also, you may not have known that Charlotte Cushman, the great actress, aided our government during the civil war by being a northern spy—it sounds like an apple, but was a valuable job. I did not know either of these bits of history until John Finis told me of them, so I pass them along to you.

The young women who are taking part in the pageant are the Misses Louise Tyler, Marjorie Allen, Claire Childes, Harriet Fields, Clara Hollis, Mary Ann Beckwith, Louise Sanborn, Frances Thorne, Elsie Blatchford and Freda Gross, and Mrs. William Rend, Mrs. Hallett Thorne and Mrs. Robert Andrews.

It sounds like an uncommonly attractive program and one to feed the fires of patriotism as well as to fill the cup of joy. What more can you expect a ball to do? Added to which that much talked of, decidedly romantic figure, Gen. William Mitchell, late head of our national air service, will probably be the guest of honor that night. It will be worth the price of admission to see and perhaps meet the man who ventured to sit up and, as it were, "sass" the army and navy, and even the government.

Red, White and Blue.

Apropos of balls, there is going to be what the users of classic language would call a "humdinger" of a ball next autumn. It is to be called the Red, White and Blue ball, and is being organized by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman to raise funds for the maintenance of that engaging and useful enterprise, the Red, White and Blue club. It is over on the northwest side of the city, where that remarkable personality, Mrs. Sophie Edelstadt, and her pretty daughter, Miss Vera, are making sunshine for over 700 little Poles, Slovaks, Lithuanians, and so on, and, incidentally, turning them into ardent Americans, knowing our national hymns better and singing them with far more enthusiasm than either you or I do, and having visions of citizenship in the greatest country in the world that will in time be of incalculable value to this nation. By the way, Mrs. Edelstadt is the sister of the well known Polish composer and musician, Max Rabinoff.

Well, that is neither here nor there, but the ball is taking shape and form, and promises to open the social season of 1925-6 with a resounding bang. It is to be given in the new Hotel Sherman ballroom, which will be one of the largest and most effective in this part of the country. It is to be 180 feet long by 80 feet wide. It is to have an encircling balcony, and opening out of it will be a dining room almost as spacious as the ballroom. This new and brilliant setting will be background for what its authors want to make a red, white and blue ball, where all the women should wear gowns of one or the other of these national hues. It will make a charming and colorful effect, and be symbolic of the club to be benefited. The rooms have already been donated, and these getting up the ball hope that most of the rest of their expenses will be defrayed by well wishers, so that they may turn almost every cent that they take in over to the coffers of the Red, White and Blue club.

On Mrs. Coleman's committee are Mrs. Charles K. Corsant, Mrs. E. R. Fifield, Mrs. W. F. Cleff, Mrs. William A. Yager, Mrs. William R. Odell, Mrs. Leeds Mitchell, Mrs. Claude Hopkins, Mrs. William Pittman, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. E. S. Beck, Mrs. Wallace Kirk, Mrs. Warren Ripple, Mrs. George Hallock Taylor, and Mrs. James Offield, and Miss Mary Waller and Mill Helen Gilbert.

Hand of Fate.

Mrs. Julian Mason was in town last week for a few days with her sister, Mrs. Henry B. Reuss of 239 East Delaware place, having been brought here by the sudden and tragic death of Mr. Reuss, who lost his life ten days or so ago while yachting with his brother-in-law, Walter Gray, in Shark river, Florida. He slipped when he was stepping from a small boat into the launch and, as he fell, struck his head with sufficient force to stun him, sinking immediately into the depths of the river. The accounts of his death were mixed with descriptions of sharks and his being enmeshed in fishing nets with them, which were not quite accurate. When divers did not find Mr. Reuss' body, Mr. Gray got fishermen to stretch their nets across the river to catch it when the current should sweep it out to sea—a device that succeeded. But no man-eaters were present. The tragedy was accentuated for Mr. Gray, however, by the two days' trip from Shark river to Key West, when the launch, a small craft at best, was caught in a terrible storm which tossed it violently about and made it seem not unlikely that the survivors might never see land again. The body of the drowned man was lashed to the deck, and its fastenings were menaced by the racking tossing the Gulf of Mexico gave them.

It was one of those catastrophes that seem to have no meaning and to come out of a ghastly and inexorable reservoir of fate that hands out suffering with no reference to the person receiving it. It is the seeming impersonality of the power that shapes our lives that sometimes causes a start of terror in even the most thoughtless mortals. Could anything be simpler than to step from a rowboat into a launch? Yet it was enough to change the current of several lives.

Julian Mason is just recovering from a serious attack of pneumonia which laid him low a month or six weeks ago. The Masons have a quaint little farmhouse on Long island, not far from Oyster Bay. They live in the same neighborhood as do some other ex-Chicagoites, the Bruce Clarks and the Marshall Clarkes, while the Frank Remingtons, also former fellow citizens, are likewise in that region.

Chicagoans who remember Mrs. David Bigelow when she lived here a decade or so ago, will be interested to hear of her engagement to Francis Goodwin Smith of Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Bigelow left many friends here when, at the death of her husband, she went to reside in New York, and has often returned to visit them either in town or in Lake Forest, where she and the late Mr. Bigelow lived for about ten years. She is giving up a fine business in a New York decorative firm to take care of the four children of her husband-to-be, a youthful quartet to which she is devoted.

Up to the Voters.

Always in the front rank of those working for the public good, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank has accepted from the mayor the chairmanship of the woman's nonpartisan committee to promote the passage of the street railway reorganization bill, which comes up for the vote of the citizens of Chicago on April 7. She and her committee will go about making addresses explaining the purposes of the bill and its advantages to the residents of Chicago.

Up in the forefront in other civic improvements, this city is out of date in its street railway equipment. If this proposed reorganization goes through it will assure us as quick a reformation of our antiquated surface lines as can be put through and will further secure to us the beginning of a subway that will in time grow to meet our great needs. This means more to us than any other measure of public convenience now under discussion. The various committees promoting this project are going to school to learn the intricacies of the subject they are to explain to you and me and the next man.

If the measure does not go through it means years of delay in securing adequate transportation. All of those thousands who today have to suffer the discomfort and physical humiliation of our present street cars night and morning should make it their business to see that they and their families and friends vote for the ordinance. The present congestion is an intolerable affront to the third largest city in the world today.

Latest Art Exhibits.

There are at the moment at the Arts club in the North Whigley building two of the most interesting exhibits that this extremely up to date and alive association has had this winter, and it has been a brilliant season for this organization in the matter of pictures and sculpture shown. There are in one gallery four oil paintings and six water colors by the Boston artist, William E. Schumacher, which catch the eye and delight the soul by their exquisite coloring. He paints in planes, that is, in a curious combination of angles out of which is evoked a Madonna, a saint, a child, all in opalescent tints. It is like light shining through water in the translucency and almost throbbing quality of the result. The pictures suggest to the onlooker that their true medium is glass. They would make wonderful stained glass windows. In fact, there is one done on glass and hanging in a window which achieves just the fulfillment one instinctively demands.

The other collection hanging in an adjoining gallery consists of nine canvases done by a Spanish painter, a true Iberian, to judge by his delightfully complicated name—Hermengildo Anglada y Camarassa. How's that for an appellation? His pictures are as colorful and tremendous as his name. He is of the extremely modern school of Spanish painters of which Zuloaga is the best known exponent.

The Spanish painters of today seem to be transfused with the strong colors, the passionate shadows, the clear atmosphere of their native land. Spain is no land of pale mists, of soft twilights, and meditative dusks. Barren and bleak is its landscape, and nature to compensate paints the barren and bleak with gorgeous hues and spreads over it vividly blue skies and really intoxicates the beholder with this feast of clashing, crashing tints. Against it it would be impossible to set a race of pale blonde or anemic men and women. The race inhabiting this land of violet hues suits it perfectly and blends into the background as do Chinese figures into their weird and strange landscapes. Go to see Anglada's works, and take in Schumacher's at the same time. There is a great deal of contrast in them and yet an underlying sincerity of purpose that makes them real, not imitation art.

Women's Clubs Sponsor Annual Nature Exhibit

By Kate Webber.

A NATURE exhibit sponsored by twenty-four organizations, including the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs, will occupy the fifth floor of the Davis company store during the coming week, opening tomorrow morning. Its object is to interest the public in nature study and in the conservation and protection of plant and animal life.

Annually, for the last six or seven years, the Illinois chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation society, organized some ten years ago by Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson, has been holding midwinter exhibits in the Art institute with this object in view. Also it held an exhibit on the Municipal pier last summer. In each of these it had the cooperation of other conservation groups.

This year the chapter invited all the groups of Chicago and vicinity interested in conservation to join with it in the largest nature exhibit ever held here. The result is the one to be held this week, which bears the descriptive title, "All Out o' Doors Annual Nature Exhibit."

In a setting representative of a dense forest, collections of wild flowers, grasses, mosses, and lichens, plant fossils, fish in aquaria, sea shells, stones, birds, butterflies, and insects will be displayed by the organizations participating. There will also be shown model gardens, a model farm, bird houses, and like examples of the handicraft of students of the manual training classes of the schools, radio sending and receiving sets made by amateurs, and kodak pictures of nature subjects taken by children.

Boy Scouts will demonstrate their knowledge of woodcraft, Girl Scouts such practical sciences as first aid and camp cookery, and Campfire Girls will show their handiwork in copper, silver, and ivory, Gesso work, bead weaving, block printing, and batiking.

In addition there will be three lectures a day by authorities on nature subjects, illustrated by stereopticon views. The first of these will be given tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock by Mrs. A. A. Michelson on "Wild Flowers and Butterflies." There will also be an exhibition of paintings by well known artists of the national parks of the United States, the forest preserves, the Dunes, and such beauty spots.

On Thursday the annual conservation luncheon, which is given under auspices of the Illinois Wild Flower Preservation society, the conservation committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Chicago Woman's club, will take place at 1 o'clock in the Davis store. Mrs. Theron Colton, general chairman of the exhibit committee, will preside. "Good Manners Out of Doors" will be the theme of short addresses which will be made by Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, chairman of the conservation committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Ransom Kennicott, who will speak for the forest preserve; Judge Ninian H. Welch, president of the Prairie club; Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, president of the Chicago Woman's club; the Rev. Lewis A. Convis, pastor of the Jefferson Park church; Everett Millard, president of the conservation council, and others.

Miss Carrie Blair Neely, 4929 Greenwood avenue, is chairman of the luncheon committee and in charge of reservations.

Miss Rose Egan is past grand regent of Leo court, Daughters of Isabella, which will celebrate its fourteenth anniversary on Thursday evening at 6:15 o'clock at the Chicago Beach hotel. Several prominent speakers will be present at the banquet, which is given for retiring officers.

MRS. THERON COLTON. [Moffett Photo.]

Mrs. Theron Colton is general chairman of the nature exhibit to be held this week at the Davis store, an account of which is given in today's club news. Mrs. Colton will preside at the annual conservation luncheon to be given on Thursday under the joint auspices of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, the Wild Flower society, and the Chicago Woman's club.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swaim Evans.

"THERE'S Mrs. De John with her cousin in tow again. I'll wager that this is the fourth or fifth time she's had her to our meetings this season," the member of long standing observed to the life member during the social hour. "She should know a person is not supposed to be the guest of the club more than two times during the same year."

"I've always felt that to be a wise restriction," returned the life member, "otherwise a woman might be a guest so often that she'd have most of the privileges of the club and not any of the responsibilities—such as paying dues."

"Some one should bring the matter to the attention of the board," opined the member of long standing. "No, I wouldn't want to do it. It seems to me clubwomen should know better than to do such things—and they do, as a rule."

"Just what action would the board be likely to take in a situation like that?"

"O, probably instruct the secretary to write Mrs. De John a tactful letter, calling her attention to the rule, and to her infringement of it. That would be enough. It may be that the cousin is anxious to come and that Mrs. De John doesn't like to refuse to take her."

"We had a somewhat similar case in a professional club to which I belong," recalled the life member, "only the woman came to our meetings without the formality of being a guest of any member. Our roll is a large one, and she slipped in half a dozen times before the social chairman spotted her and inquired whether she was a member or a guest. The poor woman had to admit that she was neither; she'd come because the programs were so attractive. The social chairman explained, as nicely as she could, that the meetings were for members and their guests only; and, of course, that was the last we saw of her."

TENDRILS AND PROTECTION.

THE stem of the plant supports the leaves in the light, but in many plants a weak stem bears the weight of the leaves by twining round some stronger neighbor. The twining movement is of immense importance to plants like our honeysuckle, hop, and bind weed, which are thus much superior to the bramble, rambling over a stone wall secured only by its spines, or the goose grass, rambling over the bramble secured only by its hooks. In the great forests of the tropics a great proportion of the vegetation consists of such types—the lianes—twining round trees, twining round each other, forming an impenetrable confusion of coiled and twisted cordage, reaching out to the light above the forest roof, supported on the dead pillars of trees they have strangled. Robert Louis Stevenson gives a graphic picture of this form of the struggle for existence in his poem of "The Woodman." The twining movement, like the movement of the root tip, is regulated by gravity.

Tendril bearers respond to another influence, that of contact with a solid body. Like the tip of the hop, the whiplike tendril of the bryony sweeps round in a circle. This movement is not directed by external stimulus, but is purely automatic. But if the tendril touches a twig, a wire, a leaf, or another tendril it is stimulated by the contact to more rapid growth on the side away from the exciting object, and so curves towards it. As it goes on curving fresh portions come into contact and are stimulated, so that the whole tip becomes tightly wrapped around the support. Later the basal part twists into a corkscrew spring once or twice reversed and then becomes thick and woody. This spring breaks the force of the tug of a passing animal or of a gust of wind and saves the plant from being torn from its support. In his "Climbing Plants" Darwin describes the conspicuous success of the bryony in riding the storm which battered many other plants.

The tendriled plant is more highly adapted for climbing than the twiner. The latter loses a third of its length in its coils, and while it can use only such supports as are nearly vertical, the tendril encircles anything that is solid and not too thick. The tendril represents some part of the plant turned to a new use. In the sweet pea it takes the place of the apical leaflets, in some vetchlings is replaces the entire leaf, in some tropical orchids it is a root, in the bryony and in the vines it is a branch.

If we gently stroke the under side of the bryony tendril we can readily observe the answer back; after a few minutes the tendril curves towards the side touched. Only a solid body can induce the response; a stream of water, a violent rain shower, even rubbing with a stick of semi-solid gelatin has no effect. Here is a fine example of delicate adjustment, for response to rain drops would be of no use to the plant, would even deprive it of opportunities of clasping proper supports. The tendril responds only to the touch that helps it. It is to the same stimulus that the sundew tentacles react when they fold on a struggling fly, though the movement is intensified by the insect's chemical action.

Light and Other Influences.

The seeding, fresh from the protection of the seed coats, young and delicate, is at once affected by all the influences of the world into which it has come. Gravity is not the only directive agency. The root grows against some shard, is slightly wounded, and turns away from the source of injury. It rubs gently against grains of soil, and the contact causes it to move gently to and fro; it feels its way through the crevices of the soil. It comes to a dry region and bends to the moister side. But the shoot, subject to all these stimuli in the soil, finds yet another director in light when it reaches the air.

Every one knows the window plant with the shoots bent to the light, the leaves twisted round and spread flat to catch the rays. Light interferes with the action of gravity on the stem and is the primary cause of leaf movements. Its action is complicated by the fact that, unlike gravity, it is constantly changing in intensity and direction. Few plants can react so quickly as to follow the sun; moreover, as growth ceases the power of movement ceases except in the case of those leaves which have jointed stalks. So it comes about that most leaves as they mature adopt a fixed position in relation to light.

Sensitive Plants.

The sensitive plant is a vigorous shrub, usually reaching a height of some feet in our hothouses. Each graceful leaf has a stalk jointed to the stem, from the tip of which spring four secondary stalks, each with a double row of leaflets. The foliage stands out from the stem, the leaflets are expanded. If the plant is gently shaken, instantly the leaf stalks droop, the secondary stalks fall together, the leaflets fold up; the whole scaffolding of green light screens has collapsed. In nature, a wandering animal or a shower of rain brings about the same result, a series of movements so rapid that the reaction is complete in a few seconds. Soon a reverse sets in, and a quarter of an hour later the plant is in its normal condition again.

A violent shock is not necessary; touch the lower half of the joint of the leaf stalk and it droops; a little later the secondary stalks come together, then the leaflets fold up in succeeding pairs. Singe the apical leaflet and the chain of reactions is reversed. Make a cut in the stem, and first the nearest leaf reacts, then the next, then one further away. The shock stimulus is passed on. It is conducted at the rate of an inch in the second; this is a thousand times slower than the conduction along an animal's nerve, but a hundred times as quick as the rate commonly developed in plants. The movement itself is slow compared with the wink of an eyelid, but fast in comparison with that of an inverted root bending downwards.

The movement is different from that of a curving root or stem. It depends on a sudden diminution of pressure in the cells of the lower half of the joint, which thus loses its rigidity and collapses. This allows of a rapid fall; it also allows of the occurrence of the movement long after growth has ceased.

Of what use to the plant is this spectacular reaction? It has been suggested that the rapid closing shakes off small insects feeding on the leaves. It has been suggested that the plant thus avoids damage by violent rain or hail. It has been suggested that browsing animals are frightened by the sudden change in the appearance of their pasture and repelled by the thorny appearance of the world into which it has

ART AND ARTISTS

Institute to Open Variety of New Exhibits Tuesday

By Eleanor Jewett.

Still are the sands, lulled to languid quiescence
By the innumerable kisses of the sea.
Gold are the sands under the warm magic of the sun's bright rays.
And gold is your hair, my love, who sleeps beside me.

Still and gold are you, my love. Soft in your tresses
Burns the red flame that kindles in your heart.
Are your eyes like the sea? Do the innumerable kisses
I press upon them, warm the sweet tears that fall when we must part?

On the altar of the divine content that we have known,
In days and nights of palest sheer delight,
I yield my prayers. The sickly, wailing wind of time that bears
Our future in its puny hands, blows cold—tonight.

THE inexplicable melancholy that wells up in our hearts with each passing of a perfect moment or event must be ours in the assurance of the exodus of the Chicago Artists' exhibition of paintings and sculpture from the east wing galleries of the Art institute a little more than a week ago. The vacant spaces left by the withdrawal of that surprisingly perfect exhibition are being filled by the installation of the various exhibits announced for their opening on Tuesday of this present week.

Two, instead of one, of the scheduled exhibits have been changed. Fire prevented a representative exhibit of Alfonso Iannelli's sculpture and now, for cause unknown, the paintings by Eugene Speicher will not be shown. To replace the work of these two artists in the galleries reserved for them there will be seen decorative paintings by Eduard Buk Ulreich, and lithographs by C. O. Woodbury, these latter two, Chicago artists.

From Brooklyn and the Brooklyn museum, where the first exhibition by this society has been held, comes the mural painters' exhibition. Sketches or studies for the completed work comprise the most of the paintings shown in this group, and they afford the student an interesting insight into the thoughts and manners of the men who are doing today our big, inside, artistic undertakings. The painters are not confined to those from our side of the Atlantic alone. Several foreign artists of note will be met with. Of these, probably Puvis de Chavannes bears the most familiar name.

Puvis de Chavannes, to whom all contemporary mural painters look for the first great expression of the art in modern times, is represented by four cartoons for the dome of the Pantheon and a design for the hall of Amiens museum. Two other French artists of distinction and fame who will be represented by various works are Albert Besnard and Maurice Denis.

Nearer home, the names of Elihu Vedder and John La Farge are representative of the older generation of American mural painters. Among the other artists exhibiting will be W. T. Benda, Charles J. Connick, Frederick C. Frieseke, Gardner Hale, F. Luis Mora, Julius Rolshoven, John C. La Farge, and J. Monroe Hewlett, president of the society.

"Signora Lidia Rismondo," a portrait bust by Nancy Coz-McCormack, will appear in the exhibition of her work that will open on Tuesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. Signora Rismondo is the widow of the Italian war hero, who was executed, with two of his comrades, in Austria. The bust was shown at the second international exposition in Rome two years ago. This model is plaster. The finished portrait is in fired terra cotta, mounted on a base of ebony. It is a rarely lovely thing with a beauty that fairly haunts one.

The news that is being circulated concerning the abilities and achievements of Anglada y Camaras, who replaces the promised paintings by Eugene Speicher with his one-man show at the institute, reads well. It tells us he is one of the foremost exponents of the modern Spanish school, which carries on the national tradition with brilliance and vivacity. Whether this makes him brother under the skin to Sorolla or to Zuloaga remains for us to discover. Has he sunshine or insolence for his keynote?

"The One with the Green Eyes," by Camaras, though from its title it might easily be a detective thriller, is a painting that for several years has hung in the Art institute as a loan. The artist was born in Barcelona in 1871. He lived for many years in Paris, returning to Spain for inspiration each summer. He has exhibited in most of the great centers of Europe, many of which own works by him. He holds the medal of honor awarded in the International section of the Centennial exposition of Buenos Aires; the grand medal of honor from the exposition at Venice; and one of the eight first prizes awarded in the great international congress of art at Rome in 1911.

The first time Camaras exhibited in the United States was with a group of five canvases in the International Exhibition of Modern Paintings at Carnegie institute, Pittsburgh, in 1924. His exhibition at the Brooklyn museum, which closed the first of this month, is his first entire one-man show anywhere since 1917.

Buk Ulreich, another painter who is helping to fill the vacancies caused by Eugene Speicher and Iannelli's being compelled to postpone their exhibits, was born in Austria-Hungary, but has lived since childhood in the United States. He has delved deep into primitive sources for the material with which he builds his pictures. He has lived in our west among the Sioux Indians and among old civilizations abroad. Winner for several years of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts traveling scholarships, he returned to America after service in the war and went to California. His exhibition here will consist of decorative paintings.

In a way complimentary to Mr. Woodbury's lithographs, and in another way entirely on its own, the Chicago Camera club's annual exhibit of photographs by its members will grace another of the galleries in the Art institute's elastic east wing from March 17 to April 24.

C. O. Woodbury, an artist resident in Chicago, will show a group of lithographs.

The Chicago Society of Etchers saw their exhibition brought to a close recently in the print rooms of the Art institute with a pang. It was by all odds the most successful exhibit they had as yet managed to hold.

Two weeks before the closing date, March 10, 412 prints had been sold for a total value of approximately $4,000. Last year 477 etchings in all were sold. This year's complete sales will undoubtedly surpass that total.

The Taos colony of painters is famous here, with its increasing additions each season of Chicago artists. Among the Chicago men who have permanent homes and studios there are Walter Ufer, Victor Higgins, E. Martin Hennings, Joseph A. Fleck, Frank Hoffman, J. Cestmir Svoboda and Irving Manoir. Gustave Baumann and Raymond Jonson of Chicago have studios in Santa Fe, about seventy-five miles away. Mr. Hennings, who is on a flying trip here, says high rents have not yet fallen like a plague upon Taos. He rents a house with a kitchen and dining room and a studio, 34x17 feet, for $15 a month. The famous Finnish artist, whose paintings of South African scenes and of Finland were shown a few months ago at the Art institute, is the most recent addition to the Taos colony.

An expedition to Persia to collect art treasures for the Art institute has been financed by Frank G. Logan and Martin A. Ryerson, trustees of the Art institute, and Henry J. Patten, a governing life member. On Feb. 21, Arthur Upham Pope and Henry J. Patten, F. R. G., left Chicago to direct the work. Arthur Aldis, another trustee of the institute, expects to join the party later. The rarity and value of Persian art is suggested by the fact that $20,000 was recently paid for a small ivory carving, and a gold velvet brocade, which formerly was worth $2, brought $500.

The children's room at the Art institute has a current exhibition of dolls. Dolls of all kinds may be found there. Costume dolls, character dolls, dolls from Japan, dolls from the orient, dolls from Spain, old fashioned gentlewomen from Philadelphia and cultured blue stockings from Boston, even the buckskin papooses dear to little Indian girls, will be discovered in the collection.

Lorado Taft, Chicago's great sculptor, has received signal honor in being appointed by President Coolidge to a membership on the national art commission. Ralph Clarkson, one of the most noted of our painters of portraits, states that this recent appointment by the President constitutes "the first time the midwest has been so honored."

A young Chicago artist, Glen Mitchel, has recently finished a striking portrait of Maude Martin Ellis, which will be on exhibition in the near future.

Miss Marion H. Gheen is giving a series of three extremely interesting lectures on the subject of interior decorating, dealing with her subject in a masterly and broad manner. The first two talks were given on March 5 and March 12. The concluding lecture, in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel, will be heard on Thursday morning, March 19, at 11 o'clock.

The Palette and Chisel club has been holding an exhibition of twelve paintings by Joseph Chenoweth.

The Scammon lectures given this year by Prof. Charles R. Richards will draw to a close this week. The lecture on Tuesday in Fullerton hall at 4 o'clock will be on "The Modern Movement in Sweden, Denmark, Holland, and Switzerland." The lecture on Thursday, the last of the Scammon lectures, has for subject "French Decorative and Applied Art of Today."

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall Helen Gardner will speak on "What to See in Greece." NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Passion Play Opens Tonight at Auditorium

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Passion play, under the auspices of the Archdiocesan union of the Catholic church and for the benefit of a home for boys sponsored by the Big Brothers of the society, will begin this evening a two weeks' series of presentations at the Auditorium theater. There will be in addition several matinées.

There are 450 performers in the cast. Improvements in the decorative and lighting effects have been made over previous years. The statue representing the central figure of Jesus has been executed with such skill that few would detect he was not personated by a living actor. All the other characters—Mary, the mother of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, St. Peter, Caiaphas, Annas, Pontius Pilate, and others—are taken by men and women who have made a long study of the play. The costuming is rich and true to the period in which the memorable scenes were enacted.

A ten days' mission preached by Franciscan friars will begin this evening at Calvary Episcopal church, 3162 West Monroe street, the Rev. H. R. Neely, rector. The Rev. Father Joseph, O. S. F., and the Rev. Brother Marius John, O. S. F., will be the preachers. Father Joseph is the head of the order of St. Francis in the Episcopal church, which devotes itself to the service of God in absolute poverty. Instruction will be given in addition to the preaching after all services or by appointment.

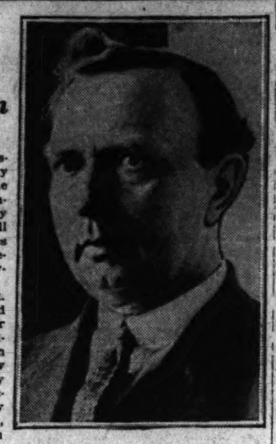
Two of the Catholic churches which will hold impressive religious ceremonies in connection with St. Patrick's day next Wednesday will be St. Patrick's church, Des Plaines and Adams streets, and St. John's church, 13th and South Clark streets. At St. Patrick's solemn high mass will be celebrated at 10:30 by the Rev. William Minnick, C. S. C., South Bend, Ind. The address will be by the pastor, the Rev. William R. McNamee. The combined choirs of 120 voices will sing. At St. John's high mass will be celebrated at 12:15 noon. During Lent a noonday mass is celebrated every day at St. John's. A three weeks' mission will begin today at St. Patrick's at high mass at 10:45. This week will be for men. Next week will be for women, and the third week will be for non-Catholics. The mission will be conducted by the Oblate fathers, the Rev. William J. Stanton and the Rev. James J. McCartin.

This evening the choir and soloists will present Stainer's "Daughter of Jairus" at the First Lutheran church, Fullerton avenue and Ballou street.

President J. G. K. McClure of McCormick Theological seminary will be the convocation speaker at Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, next Wednesday at 2:30.

The Dominican missionaries, the Rev. W. R. Lawler and the Rev. J. C. Timony, will hold a three weeks' mission beginning today at St. Ita's church, 5500 Broadway. The first and second weeks will be for women and the third week for men. Evening devotions begin at 7:45.

The fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of the temperance crusade in Chicago, a part of the movement which resulted in the Woman's Christian Temperance union's organization and work, will be celebrated this evening at the Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets. Miss Anna A. Gordon, national and world president of the W. C. T. U.; Miss Helen Wood, Illinois state president of the W. C. T. U., and Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the church, will take part. It was in March, 1874, the women marched from the First Methodist Episcopal church, which stood on the present site of the Chicago temple, to the city hall, where they presented a petition asking for the closing of the saloons on Sunday.



THE REV. F. W. DOEDE.

The Rev. Ferdinand W. Doede is pastor of the Englewood Evangelical church, which will begin this spring the erection of a new $60,000 church. The site of the church now in use is at 6642 South Sangamon street. It is a frame building, and the trustees expect to sell the building and ground. The new church will be of brick with stone trimming, and will be erected at West Marquette road and South Peoria street. A part of the money is now in hand, and a community drive for the rest needed will begin on March 16.

The Rev. Mr. Doede was educated at Northwest college and theological seminary, Naperville, Ill., and has been pastor of the Englewood church for two years. The Evangelical church as a denomination, which has churches in thirty-four states of the union and in nine different countries, was formed by the merging of the United Evangelical church and the Evangelical association.

The Rev. Watts O. Pye of Fenchow, China, who recently interested, not to say thrilled, a large body of men at the Hotel La Salle, will speak at the Congregational ministers' conference tomorrow morning at 19 South La Salle street. The management requests that those who heard Mr. Pye at the Hotel La Salle meeting will not attend tomorrow morning so that others may have a chance to hear the address.

The Rt. Rev. James M. Maxson, bishop coadjutor of Tennessee, will speak every noon this week, 12:10-12:30, at the Lenten services at the Garrick theater. Bishop Maxon is a graduate of the University of Chicago and served as rector of Grace church, Galesburg, Ill., for three years. Bishop Maxon will also speak at St. Chrysostom's on Tuesday evening; Grace church, Oak Park, on Wednesday evening, and at the Church of the Redeemer, Hyde Park, on Thursday evening.

The Second Presbyterian church, 30th street and South Michigan avenue, has illuminated the John Crerar Memorial window so that it may be seen by those passing on the avenue.

The Universalist denomination has entered on a five year nation-wide program with the special objects in view of building a national church at Washington, D. C.; creating a pension fund for ministers, strengthening the mission work in Japan, and adding to the service fund for philanthropy outside the denomination. Of the service fund, $7,000 has already been donated to the commission on industrial relations of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and $1,000 to help build a chapel on the United States government reservation at Fort Snelling.

The Church Athletic association of Chicago will hold its annual indoor meet at the Bartlett gymnasium, University of Chicago, next Saturday at 7:30 p. m. Inquiries answered by Alexander Trostrud, telephone Albany 1152.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE . . . . . Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

BRANCH OF WILD CAMOMILE (MATRICARIA CHAMOMILLA).—The left hand photograph was taken at midday and shows the flower heads flat; the right hand photograph was taken at 8 p. m. and shows the flowers reflexed. Most flowers close to a bud at night, but the camomile folds its petals farther back. The advantage of this is not clear, and it may be merely an exaggeration of the normal movement of the expanding flower, but there may be some purpose served. [Photos: J. J. Ward.]

THE "SENSITIVE PLANT" (MIMOSA PUDICA).—1. When one leaf tip is touched or injured, all the little leaflets fold up one after the other, then the secondary stalks drop, and the main stalk of the leaf droops downwards. Soon the next leaf acts in exactly the same way. The closing of the leaves may be produced by a severe shaking or by holding a lighted match below the leaf tip. The illustration shows the expanded position of the leaves in the daytime.

2. Showing the leaves in closed or night position. A shower of rain will cause the leaflets to fold up in a few seconds.

parance of the closed plant. It cannot be said that these explanations are convincing. They do not apply at all to a dozen other plants which show similar but less active leaf movements. The only animal that shows a distaste for the sensitive plant is the goat, which is not a native of the plant's original home in South America. We know, too, that repeated movement is actually harmful. A plant which had been stimulated twelve times daily for three weeks attained to only one-third of the height of another left undisturbed. It was handicapped in assimilating power, but probably, in addition, the constant irritation upset its constitution in some profound way. Is it better to take the chance of being eaten or the certainty of being stunted?

The reaction to shock brings with it clear advantages in other cases. The leaf of the Venus flytrap folds quickly together on the slightest touch of one of its sensitive hairs. In nature the touch is that of an injudicious insect which is subsequently crushed, drowned, and digested. The little filaments or stalks of the stamens of the cornflowers contract instantly by 30 per cent when touched. The result is that the anthers, from which the pollen has been shed, are pulled down over the brush of the stigma, and the pollen is swept out and exposed to visiting insects which carry it to other flowers. The bilobed stigma of the musk closes on the pollen. In this case, and in others like it, the movement has an obvious biological advantage.

Do Plants Sleep?

As night falls, the trefoil leaves of the clover fold their leaflets up, the daisy flower closes, the tulip becomes once more a bud, the leaflets of the wood sorrel droop and close: the plants sleep. The term sleep, consecrated by long usage, is not a happy one, for with the sleep of animals this movement has nothing to do. It brings no recovery from a nonexistent fatigue. It is in reality an active movement, not a collapse. Only in the seeming relaxation recurring as darkness comes on is there a superficial resemblance to the real relaxation of the animal and to the drooping of its drowsy lids.

The tulip flower, like that of the crocus, closes as the air cools and reopens in the sun's warmth. By alternately raising and lowering the temperature it may be made to open and close several times in one day. The daisy and the marigold open in the light and close in the dark; the night stock opens in the dark and closes in the light. The marigold, too, may be made to open and close as many as three times in the twenty-four hours; it may be made to open at night and close through the day by suitable changes in illumination. But its case is not so simple as that of the tulip, for, when kept in continuous dark, it opens and closes day and night. Even a flower which has opened for the first time in the dark, and has been kept thereafter in continuous dark, which has never experienced the daily change, carries out the periodic movement regularly.

In the case of leaves the movement is induced by the change from light to dark. But in leaves, too, it may take place in continuous light or continuous dark. A scarlet runner may be raised from the seed in darkness and an even temperature, and under these conditions the leaves rise and fall day and night.

periodic movement independent of external changes in illumination and temperature, though these changes certainly strengthen and emphasise the normal daily swing. In some cases the periodic movement may be due to an after-effect of the induced movement. But in the scarlet runner raised from seed, in the marigold brought to flower in continuous dark, this cannot be so. It is likely that the effective influence is some change in the electrical condition of the atmosphere; but the possibility of an inherited periodicity must be considered.

The significance of these sleep movements is still a matter of discussion. Darwin tried to show that they benefited the plant by saving it from excessive radiation and cooling on clear cold nights. Other investigators see a use in the avoidance of the deposit of dew. Flowers may save their pollen from being spoiled by rain by closing in dull weather.

How Plants Protect Themselves.

Even this short survey shows that the power of limited movement in plants is widespread. The tropisms are specially important, for with their aid the plant arranges its organs so as to make the best of its environment. The ultimate position of leaf, stem, and root is the result of balanced reactions to all the influences that play on the plant throughout its growth. But the power of movement is nearly always restricted and gentle, confined to arranging the members of a stationary organism. Active locomotion belongs to the animal kingdom. Perhaps the nearest approach is in the telegraph plant [Desmodium gyrans] from the plains of the Ganges, in which there are continuous movements of the leaflets in little orbits; but no one knows why this plant should be so busy.

We have said that plants live their lives much as animals live theirs; like animals they have to protect themselves against natural enemies.

Many animals live exclusively on a vegetable diet; as there are plants that strongly object to being eaten, they take effective measures to protect themselves; if they did not, the herbivorous animal itself would suffer, for its means of subsidence would in time disappear from the face of the earth. One means of defense employed by the plant is poisons and corrosive fluids, which it uses to good effect. But sometimes what is one animal's food is another's poison. For instance, the leaves of the deadly nightshade form the most important food of a small beetle, but the foliage is poison to the larger grazing animals.

It is not clear to us how grazing animals discriminate between what is harmful to them and what is not harmful. Many plants have characteristic odors offensive to us. Others are odorless to the olfactory nerves of man, but they make themselves known to the animal's sense of smell. Wild animals probably recognize the dangerous plant by color, smell, or taste.

The leaves of nettles, etc., have stinging hairs or bristles as protection against the attacks of large herbivorous animals. The stinging hair plays an important part, as it penetrates the skin and injects into the wound a poison which causes the painful "burning" sensation.

In the cactus-like plants the variety of weapons is considerable. A single species often bears three or four kinds of weapons. They are armed with large spines and small bristles, short, thick and thin, knotty and smooth, straight pointed and barbed. And so by thorns, spines, and prickles plants often protect themselves.

The nectar of some flowers intoxicates the bees, who are believed to acquire a taste for it. In his "Botany of Today" Prof. Scott Elliott describes a well known orchid which has a hinged lip:

> When the unsuspecting insect enters the flower and passes over the lip it is suddenly jerked forward and thrown into a sort of bath of liquid; as it painfully crawls out, with wetted wings, it has to carry away the pollen masses, and so effect pollination. There is no cruelty in this, for the insect is supposed to visit another flower and cannot be much harmed.

A Beaten Path

Emerson says: "If a man make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door." This applies to service as well as material things.

Sears, Roebuck and Company for thirty years has been building a reputation for excellent merchandise and service. Nine million families throughout the United States have worn a beaten path by mail to the door of this great organization.

Chicagoans are now given the opportunity of following this lead—outside the crowded loop where a million wayfarers surge back and forth daily! Our new Retail Department is easy of access by automobile, street car or elevated. The Man Who Invented Interest Was No Fool and equally famous is the man who said, "A penny saved is a penny earned." Let every rent payer consider those words carefully. The rent you pay is interest and profit on what your landlord has saved. Cut waste at a place where it starts. That is economy.

The Co-operative Plan of apartment home ownership has done wonders for many people. When you move this spring let it be to a place of your own, where you have nothing to worry about, and things are as you want them.

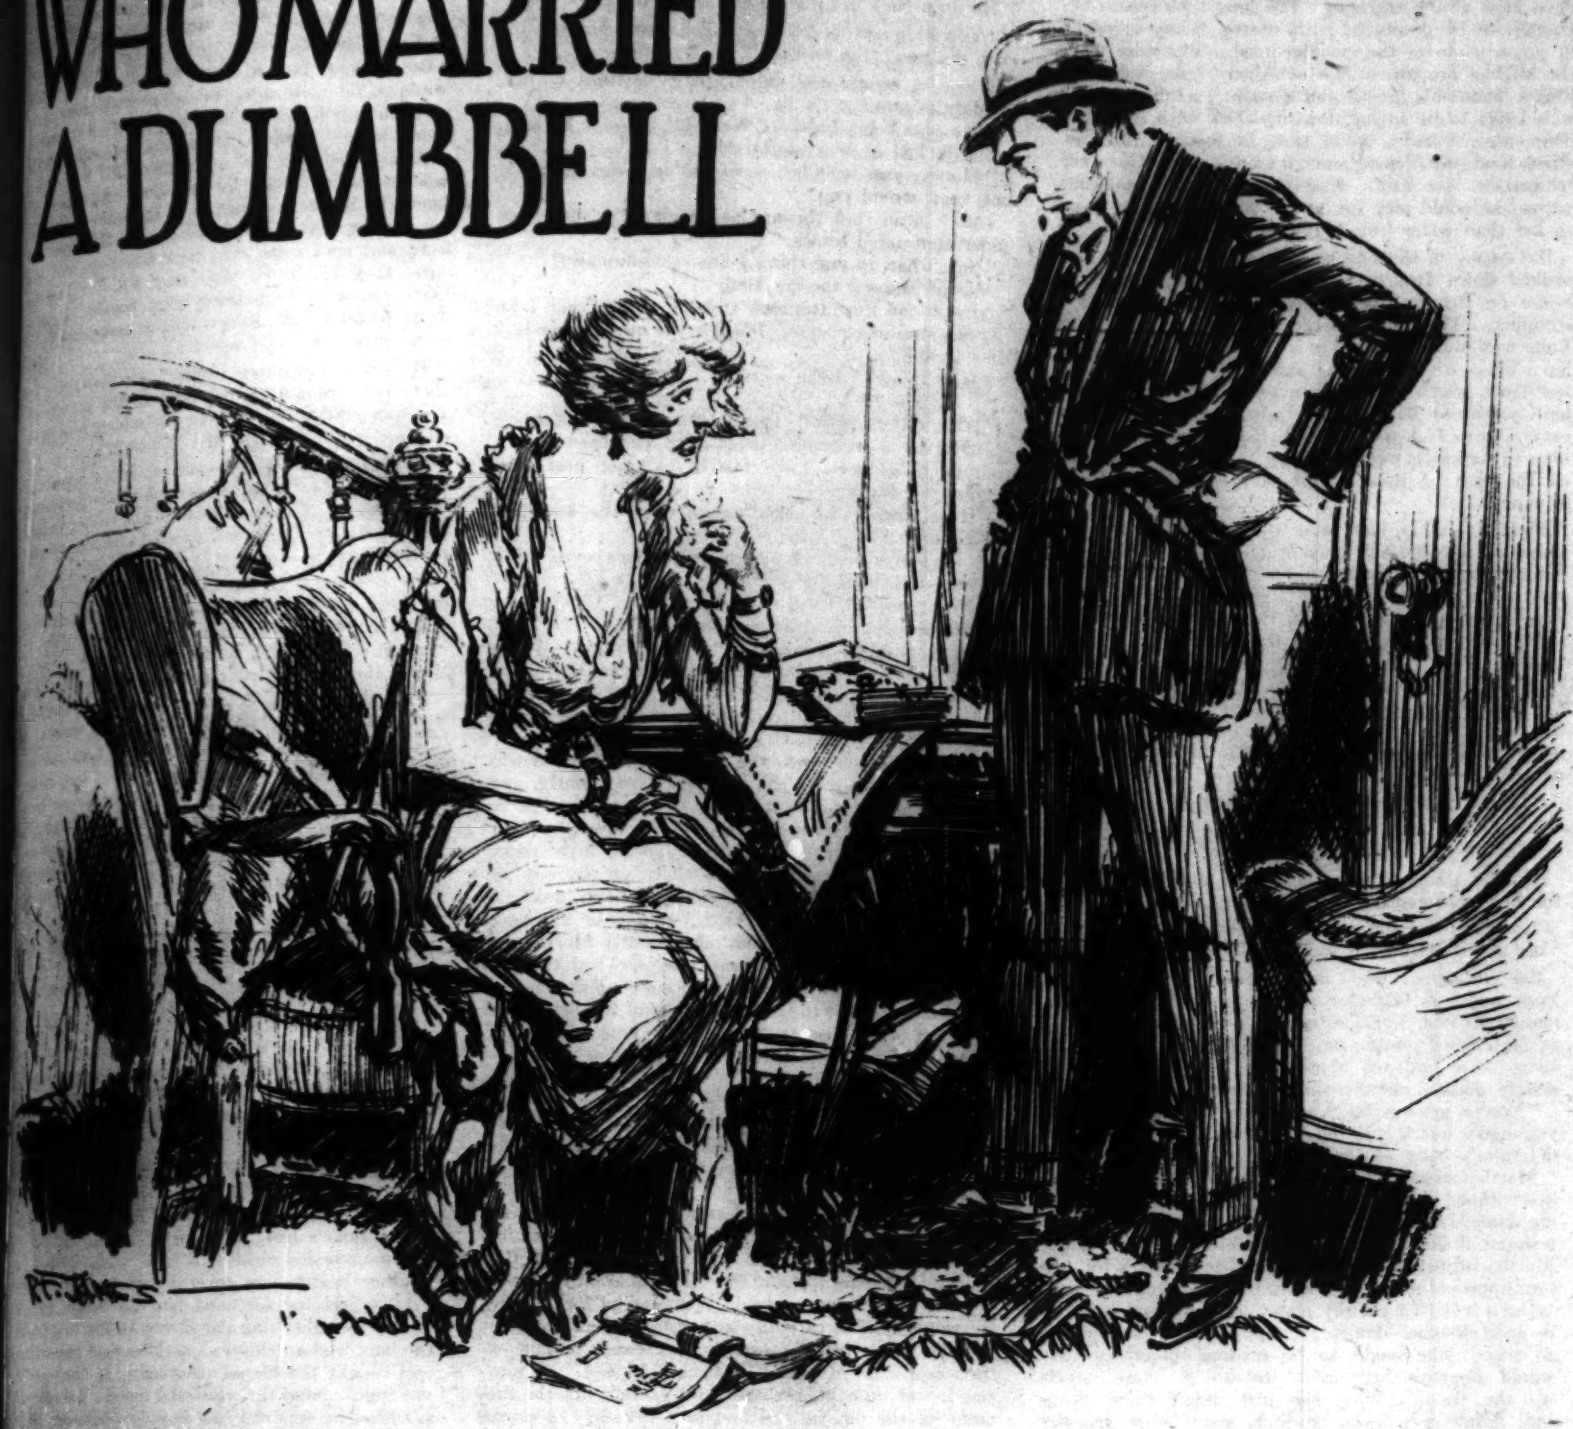
The MAN WHO MARRIED A DUMBBELL

by Theron Bamberger



"So," he said, melodramatically, "that's the kind of woman you are!"

Luke Harker Could Train Seals, but He Found that Training a Wife Was O!, So Different!—A Corking Good Story of Circus Life

ON the train which carried the Big Wonder Show from Baltimore to Philadelphia for its last stand of the season, Captain—by courtesy—Luke Harker and his wife, Martha, staged another wordy engagement in the Battle of the Fur Coat.

Martha wanted a fur coat like the one Malina had. Malina, you will remember if you were lucky enough to see the Big Wonder Show, is the flying rings girl whose stunts in mid-air made you gasp. Luke was opposed to the idea, not that he did not want his wife turned out in swell style, but because he felt he could not afford it. Luke always balked when expenditure of money was proposed.

Anyway, whatever the reasons, Martha was for it, Luke was against it, and there, in plain sight, you have the conflict which all the wise ones will tell you is the essence of drama.

Martha, after nursing the desire all summer, started the actual battle in Pittsburgh, continued it in Washington and Baltimore, and renewed it on the train to Philadelphia with the determination to make it the final encounter.

"Only two hundred dollars, Luke," she pleaded. The train was passing through Chester. She knew that in half an hour the journey would end, and she wanted to clinch matters. "There's a place in Philadelphia where I can get a knockout of a coat for that. Please, Luke."

Luke, his legs crossed, swung a foot back and forth, frowning the while. This thing was getting on his nerves. Two hundred dollars; let's see; that meant, with shrewd handling of the purchase, it could be had for a hundred and a half. To look at Luke's narrow slits of eyes, his thin lips and sharp, elongated nose, you could tell he would buy shrewdly. And yet even a hundred and a half was too much for a coat. When he bought a coat for himself, once in three years, thirty was the limit. Why couldn't women be sensible, like men?

Since the matter of Luke's features has been introduced it may be well to add that the area of his chin was in inverse ratio to that of his nose. You noticed his nose the minute he hove into sight. You had to rack your memory afterward to recall that he had a chin. Certainly its build did not indicate that he could oppose permanently Martha's insistent demands, particularly since he was rather proud of her statuesque beauty and actually eager, in his fashion, that her attractiveness be properly displayed.

Luke was sick of the argument. Martha had jawed all the way from Baltimore. She would jaw all through the week in Philadelphia, and for an infinite number of weeks in New York, where they probably would spend the winter, since Captain Harker's Trained Seals had not been able to obtain vaudeville booking this year.

"They're all sour on seal acts," Luke's agent had explained.

The tempo of the foot swinging increased. Luke glanced sidewise at Martha's profile. She would look like a million dollars in a fur coat, he thought, and scratched the back of his neck uncertainly. If he gave in now, he reasoned, he would be spared weeks of nagging.

By the time the train was shunted onto a siding in North Philadelphia the battle was apparently over, decided in the only way it could be decided—in Martha's favor. Luke had capitulated with bad grace, it is true, for he was still unreconciled to the expenditure, but the point is—he did surrender.

THE next morning he accompanied Martha to a place on Arch street where a garment was selected at a price somewhat above Luke's absolutely last offer. The furrier assured him he was positively losing money at that figure, but agreed to set the coat aside, to be paid for the following day.

After luncheon Luke and Martha separated. Some time during the early afternoon Martha found time to see the muscular and daring young woman known as Malina. She told of the fur coat proudly and how much it was to cost. Malina pointed her nose skyward, and performed a facial gesture best described as sniffing. She uttered a few remarks on the subject of fur coats in general and her own in particular. Her own did not suffer in the comparison. Martha left Malina and journeyed downtown again.

It was pay day in the Big Wonder Show, and after his act was over and he had dressed Luke took his place in line before the treasurer's wagon, sandwiched between a husky lion tamer and a broad shouldered acrobat whose heavy figures accentuated the slenderness of his own. There was an eager light in Luke's narrow eyes as he waited impatiently for his turn. The prospect of money was always pleasant, even though he knew that on the morrow he would be spending the best part of it for a nonessential fur coat.

He seized the manila envelope thrust out to him, slipped a finger under the flap and ripped it open with a quick jerk. He thumbed through the bills hastily. Then, nodding verification, he picked his way across menacing tent ropes to the street.

From a tent on the other side of the street came the rattle of dishes and the odor of cooking food. Luke stood for a moment looking through the partly open flaps at the entrance. The long tables were beginning to be decorated with coarse, heavy crockery in preparation for the evening meal. The odor from the kitchen brought a flow of saliva; Luke rolled his tongue about his mouth and thought ruefully that he would like to be sitting down to chow with the boys. They always had a good time at meals. But, no, circus food wasn't good enough for his wife. Gave her indigestion, she said. Had to eat in a restaurant, where she could pick her grub. Money was no more to her than water from a fountain.

But eating in the tent was out of the question. He walked down Hunting Park avenue to the rooming house on Broad street where he and his wife were stopping. They had a large, comfortable room, and Luke was suited thoroughly. Martha, however, would have liked a hotel. That argument was one of the few from which he had emerged victorious, and he had continued to hold the advantage. With food extra, it was bad enough to be paying anywhere from nine to sixteen a week in a rooming house, depending on the city. A hotel would have cost several times as much.

Martha's father had been a bricklayer in Passaic. Luke thought her extravagant ideas wide of all consistency with her humble origin. She ought to realize what a drain she was on him, financially. Why, if he were single he could sleep on the cars at the railroad siding and eat all his meals in the dining tent.

AS LUKE entered their room Martha was seated by a window, reading a book. He pushed his derby hat to a position on the back of his head, and greeted his wife with a drawling "Lo-o." He kissed her briefly on the forehead as she looked up at him.

"I'll be finished with this chapter in a minute," she said.

"I'm hungry," Luke said petulantly.

Martha slammed the book shut and tossed it on the bed vehemently.

"Been waiting for you half an hour," she remarked; "but now you're here I suppose I've got to move fast."

She shrugged, flicked an imaginary speck from her knee, and rose. Leaning against the footboard of the mahogany bed, Luke watched her through the mirror as she dabbed powder on her nose and smoothed back some stray ends of blonde hair. She was a tall, stately woman, already amply proportioned.

"You're getting fat," he commented briefly. "If you don't watch yourself, you'll be looking like one of Anita's baby elephants."

Martha added a touch of rouge to the already red lips without deigning to answer. She was a good looking dame, Luke thought, now as always. It would be a shame if she started putting on more weight. While Martha adjusted her hat and twisted herself for her own approval, Luke picked up the book from the bed, favored it with a cursory glance, and dropped it again. A good looking dame, all right, if only she wasn't so silly. She ought to be reading something that would improve her mind, instead of these novels all the time. Why, she just didn't know nothing; didn't even know anything about seals, and her the wife of the best seal trainer in the country.

The hat adjusted satisfactorily, Martha moved off to a closet. Luke assumed the place made vacant at the mirror, and pulled tightly at his white four-in-hand tie. Looking down at his fingernails, he completed his toilet with a toothpick drawn from his coat pocket.

In a restaurant in York road, to which his wife guided him, he momentarily forgot his appetite as he glanced down the right side of the menu card. Martha ordered soup, lobster salad, and fried oysters. Luke referred to the card and scowled.

"Bring me roast beef and mashed potatoes," he told the waiter.

"Vegetables?"

Luke scrutinized the menu. "Do they come with the beef?"

"No, sir," the waiter said. "They're extra."

"Just the beef," Luke said, decisively.

He buttered a piece of bread, and bit off a large mouthful.

"Act went great this afternoon," he announced. "Knocked 'em under the chairs."

"Always does," Martha said, unimpressed.

Luke drew forth a clipping.

"Look what Variety said about the act: 'One of the favorite acts with the children is Captain Harker's Trained Seals, who juggle in remarkably clever fashion.'"

He dropped the clipping in front of her. She looked at it for all of two seconds, and handed it back.

"Fur coats are going to be all the rage this winter," she said.

Luke bit off another chunk of bread.

"Got a new idea I'm going to work on next season. A balancing act on a ladder."

Martha's eyes were fixed on a rather flashily dressed young woman at a nearby table.

"Uh-huh," she said, without looking at Luke. She continued to examine the young woman's apparel. "I'm not going to take that coat we saw this morning."

"What's the use of shopping around?" Luke protested. "I thought it was just what you wanted."

Martha fingered her fork for a moment.

"Honey," she said. Luke squirmed uneasily. Experience had taught him that when she called him "honey," it was well to be prepared for the worst. "Honey, I just found out that ain't real fur."

He drew back in his chair and smirked.

"You didn't think you could get a real fur coat for that, did you?" he asked.

Her eyes sought the empty plate in front of her. "I didn't know."

Luke shook his head. "Well, I'll be——" he said. She looked at him plaintively.

"Honey, you wouldn't want me to wear an imitation coat, would you?"

Luke's head shot forward as he glared at her from under contracted brows.

"Say, what do you think I am—a millionaire?"

Martha ignored the question

"I saw one this afternoon that's a pippin," she said. "Looks stunning on me. It's like the one Malina has. Hers is real."

"How much?" Luke asked.

THE waiter placed food before them, affording Martha a welcome opportunity for renewing her courage in silence. Luke tasted his roast beef, and grunted approval.

"How much?" he asked again, when the man had moved off.

A frightened look came into Martha's eyes. She continued chewing for a moment.

"Nine hundred," she replied.

Luke dropped his knife and fork noisily.

"Holy smoke," he said. "You're crazy. Where would I get nine hundred from, with me putting every cent I can spare into a farm so we don't have to be beggars when we get too old for this game? Nine hundred!" he concluded scornfully.

Martha did not press the point, but the meal was ruined for Luke. He ate his roast beef silently, and drank a cup of coffee in the same manner—that is, silently so far as conversation was concerned.

Presently he remembered that reposing in his back pocket was his pay envelope. Usually, on pay day, he disposed of the bulk of his money in two ways, in pursuance of his plans for thrift, but now he had been holding it to pay for the coat. Apparently Martha did not want the garment—at any rate, she had changed her mind about the one they had selected that morning. Luke decided to take advantage of her hesitation.

"Want to get over to the lot early tonight," he said. "How about you going to the movies?"

Martha shrugged sulkily. "I'll go home and finish my book," she said.

Luke escorted her to the rooming house, and left her at the front door. After asking a policeman at the corner the way to the nearest postal substation, he boarded a trolley car.

On the car he grinned pleasantly. He had not expected to be making this visit to a postoffice. Unfortunately, it would be the last trip of the sort that season. The season would close the end of the week, and then no more money would be coming in for months. He would see his carefully accumulated bank account dwindle away, dwindle rapidly too, thanks to that extravagant wife of his. "The dizzy blonde," he muttered, and thought, perhaps a bit ruefully for the moment, of the day he had first seen her—in the chorus of a burlesque show in Jersey City. She was a stately creature, with an amazing head of the loveliest yellow hair. He had been smitten almost instantly when he was introduced to her after the show by the stage manager, a friend of his. She ought to be grateful to him for having rescued her from that dog's life, he felt, instead of bleeding him, keeping him perpetually poor with her hoity-toity ideas. Who did she think she was—Ethel Barrymore or somebody?

AT the postal station he drew forth the bills from his pay envelope, counted out a portion of them on the glass writing shelf, and returned the remainder to his hip pocket. He bought two money orders, inserting each of them in an envelope, and addressed the envelopes in a rude, shaky scrawl. He examined the addresses with the utmost satisfaction. One of the remittances was destined for his bank in New York, a contribution to the fund which would keep him and Martha through the winter. The other was a slightly smaller sum—much too small, he thought—yet more important. His future seemed bound up in that remittance and the ones which had preceded it. It was going to a real estate firm and was bringing him that much nearer to his goal.

Luke knew the circus game, all right. He had seen a lot of fellows, headliners who had reached the heights of success in the sawdust arena, tossed aside by fortune to end their days in poverty. Some of them were with the show now as property men or hostlers, fellows who had earned two, three hundred a week or more in their day, but who had nothing to show now for their former glory except conversation, and some tattered clippings. They had gone broke because they had no foresight. Luke Harker would never be caught like that. No, sir! He had bought a farm in California and was putting into it in installments every spare cent, so one day he would own it unincumbered. When the circus tired of him or when he tired of the circus if that happened first, there would be a business awaiting him. He planned to operate a seal training academy.

Luke prided himself that no one in America understood seals better than he did. No one had more skill in teaching them those cute tricks of jugglery to be seen in at least one act in every circus. He would train seals to sell to other performers. He would take trained seals to board during the winter months when the circuses were closed. If that did not produce a reasonable livelihood, he would piece out his income by cultivating the farm.

But farm products would be a side line. Seal training would be the main thing, even if he made more money from the side line. He loved seals, and felt he knew all about them. He was not only a practical expert in handling them; he was, in addition, if it is possible to imagine Luke Harker in that light, a student who knew the habits and history of the whole seal family, not only hair seals, but fur seals, too. He thought and lived and read seals. He knew how they lived, what parts they inhabited, what they ate, how long they lived, and what, if anything, they thought. A government report on the subject was as fascinating to him as his conception of a novel.

He never read novels himself. Martha's raving over them but strengthened his opinion that she was silly. His own reading, aside from the subject of seals, was confined to Variety and the Billboard.

When he had closed the two envelopes, he examined them meticulously, to reassure himself the addresses were correct. Then he tilted his hat, rubbed his hands in the manner of man well satisfied with life, and passed to the street.

He boarded a trolley car to the circus lot, dodged through the crowd in front of the sidewalk tents where lusty ballyhoo men barked, and shuffled his way through the tanbark at the main entrance. He cut across the big top to the performers' entrance. In the open space beyond he passed down an aisle formed by a double row of red and gold iron barred wagons.

He glanced quickly, disdainfully, at lions and tigers and leopards lolling behind the bars. "Ugly beasts," he thought. At the end of the aisle he stopped before a wagon labeled "Zolophos Californiensis," and gazed proudly. His narrow, stooped shoulders straightened, his sunken cheeks seemed to fill out, as he watched the shiny, black creatures flopping about their cramped quarters.

"Real beauts," he muttered, a reiteration of his most daily reflection, and experienced a thrill such as Ruskin might have had at contemplation of a Turner landscape.

HE looked about until his eye fell on a stalwart figure in loose gray uniform, the points of whose unbuttoned coat trailed in the dirt as he bent over, coiling a heavy rope near the entrance to the men's dressing tent.

"Hey, Gus," he called. "Did you get them herring?"

Gus nodded. "Yeh, wait a minute." Presently he appeared from behind the tent hauling a pail, which he set at Luke's feet. "All right?" He tilted his cap and scratched a disheveled head which surmounted a weather beaten face covered with two days' stubble.

Luke inserted his hand into the bucket and drew forth a fish, glittering and silvery. He flipped it through the bars, and an elliptical, neckless head rose suddenly and caught the morsel unerringly. It disappeared in one gulp behind the whiskered mouth. Luke nodded his head in approval, his tiny eyes beaming. He repeated with four more of the herring, each thrown in a different direction, each caught as accurately as the first.

"Smart," he said. Then, with another herring clasped between his fingers: "Where's Bolo?" he asked. He seemed to be addressing the query to the five which were visible.

Almost as if in answer to his question a black form, noticeably larger than the others, emerged from the small tank at the corner of the wagon and extended what might be described as a nose through the bars. Luke flung the herring and saw it vanish instantly. The animal grunted discordantly. Luke grinned. Bolo was his favorite, the star performer of the sextet.

"Ain't it grand," he said, "the way they know me! Them seals are the smartest animals in this show."

Gus bit a chunk of tobacco from a frayed plug. "How's the act going?" he inquired.

Luke looked at him scornfully. Such a question! The act always went well. Still, Gus was a good fellow; he meant nothing by the question; just trying to be polite.

"Wonderful," he answered enthusiastically. "They love it. You ought to heard the hand I got this afternoon. It's the biggest act in the show, I tell you. Of course, the old man won't admit that. He falls for the woman stuff; crazy about Malina. Why, I've played my act all over this country and Europe and I had it to Australia one year. Never a performance when it flivved. Gus caught up the handle of the pail.

"That's right," he said, and disappeared behind the dressing tent. "Hey," he said, hailing his partner, Ed Duffy, "you ought to heard the earful I got just now from Luke Harker. Says——"

Ed's wide mouth curled.

"Yeh," he interrupted. "I know. Best act in the show. That's what Mark Monson was just telling me about his trained bears."

Luke stood staring at the seals for several minutes after Gus had departed. Not for a minute did the light of admiration in his eyes dim. No use talking, seals were wonderfully intelligent animals. He felt he would rather own those six seals than all the elephants and lions and tigers in the show. Affectionate creatures, too, and you could count on them always to be the same. They seemed to have a peculiarly calm, even temperament, not tricky and changeable, like tigers, for example, or—he twisted his insignificant lower jaw as the thought came to him—like women. They didn't make demands on a fellow, either. Ate the herring he threw them, and that's all there was to it. If they were like women, he reflected, they would be crying for orchids.

He drew a long breath. He wished Martha were like that. There would be no telling what she would want next. A string of pearls, probably; nothing would surprise him. He kicked his toe into the tan bark and threw up a cloud of dirt as he reflected that if once she should seize that idea, well——

THERE was the fur coat problem now to be solved. Nine hundred dollars—why, the woman was out of her mind. He shook his head gravely and clicked his tongue. Always thinking up some scheme that would cost him money. He cast a calm, contemplative eye toward the splashing seals, flopping about contentedly in their narrow quarters, and he relaxed into a satisfied smile. If only women was as easy to get along with as seals, he thought.

Presently he heard the blaring notes of the brass band, playing vigorously within the big top. The fast, noisy music soothed him and he whistled a low accompaniment as he strolled to the men's dressing tent. It was more than an hour before his act would be called, but nevertheless he began to change into his blue military uniform with its plentiful gold braid. Perfunctorily he smeared a spot of red over each cheek.

A storm of applause came from the big top. Probably for Mark Monson's bears. Luke wondered if people really thought they were as good as his seals. Why, any one could train bears.

He felt people didn't appreciate seals. They didn't understand them, that was the trouble. There was Bolo, his favorite; as intelligent and affectionate as any animal could be. He watched him as he splashed into the tank, and experienced a sense of pride which can only be compared with the feeling of a mother for her young.

People didn't understand seals, that was the trouble, all right. Well, some day he would change that. There came to him a resolution he had often made—he would write a book about seals, pointing out for the edification of the public their great virtues, and emphasizing the difference between seals and sea lions, fur bearing seals and hair seals. Only circus people really knew what seals were like. You had to travel with a show to have an idea at all about them.

He loafed about until his act was called. He stood by watching carefully as the uniformed attendants made ready to haul his wagon toward the entrance to the arena. Then, at a signal, he leaped agilely into the full glare of the lights, mounted a platform at the center, and bowed. In a moment the act was under way. The seals were bouncing rubber balls with uncanny accuracy. He received the applause calmly, bowing stiffly, almost disdainfully, as he removed his gold braided white cap. The spectators loved the act, but how could they help it?

As he stood supervising the return of the seal wagon he noticed that Bolo, usually lively after the stimulation of performance, lay listlessly in a corner of the cage. The sight disturbed him. Peering through the bars, he cooed: "Whassamatter, Bolo? Ain't you feelin' well?" One of the attendants covered his mouth with his hand, but Luke failed to notice. He was gazing intently at his favorite performer.

"Something wrong," he said, and shook his head gravely.

A moment later he poked his head into the dressing tent.

"Ho, Doc," he yelled. There was no answer. "Anybody seen the Doc?"

"Gone out," some one volunteered. Luke scratched his head.

"Anybody got a small bottle?" he asked. He knew where the Doc kept a supply of tonic which he had used scores of times.

One of the clowns stopped in the act of smearing cold cream over his whitened face.

"Guess I can fix you up," he said. From his trunk he produced a small empty bottle. It bore the label "Poison." Luke examined it for a moment. "That's all right. Much obliged." He found a hydrant and washed the bottle carefully. In a corner of the dressing tent he selected a large bottle from among the veterinary's supplies and filled the small vial. He procured a spoon from his own trunk and entered the seal wagon through a door in the side.

"This is what you need," he said, addressing the remark to Bolo, and inserted the spoon in the animal's mouth. Bolo grunted. "A little of that will fix you up all right," Luke said. When he had dressed he thrust the bottle into a coat pocket. A few days of administering tonic and Bolo would be himself again.

THE performance was over, the spectators departed, by the time he left the lot. As he walked home he hoped his wife would be asleep. He dreaded a reopening of the fur coat subject. Nine hundred dollars! Why, you would think he was made of money. As he ascended the steps he noted a streak of light under the door of their room and knew she was not asleep. She threw her arms about his neck as he entered and kissed him.

"You're late, honey," she said pleasantly. Luke untwined himself from her embrace, and wondered when the discussion would begin.

He was not kept long in suspense. After an exchange of trivialities, Martha drew from the leaves of a book a folded clipping.

"Look, honey," she said, "what I found in the evening paper. I don't have to pay nine hundred at all. Look how cheap these are."

The Doc emerged with a bottle and a large dropper. Followed by Luke, he entered the cage.

He examined the display type of an advertisement.

"Genu-wine sealskin coats," he read aloud, "only eight hundred and ten dollars."

He crumpled the paper and threw it on the floor.

"I ain't got eight-ten for a fur coat," he said. He removed his derby, and hung it noisily on the peg of a clothes rack.

Martha stooped, picked up the crumpled clipping, smoothed its creases, and laid it away between the covers of the book. Luke ripped off collar and tie and flung them on the bureau.

"Ferget it," he said.

Martha did not pursue the matter at the moment, but Luke knew from experience he had not heard the end of it. His wife had wanted things of that sort before. He thought with dismay now that she usually obtained what she wanted by dint of the most unpleasant persistence. He wondered whether history would repeat itself.

She mentioned the matter casually as she prepared coffee next morning over a canned heat device in their room. She touched on it at dinner and again the next day. Luke realized the campaign was on, and that his life would be made unbearable until one of two things happened—either he would give it or she would come to the conclusion that the project was hopeless. Well, this time he would not give in. He was determined.

He spent three days during which he dreaded to wake up in the morning or to come home when the performances were over. Twice he ate his meals in the dining tent so that he might avoid her, braving her wrath for his desertion rather than submit himself to her unflagging urgings. Once he took part in a game of craps in a corner of the dressing tent when the performance was over so that he might arrive home so late his wife would be asleep. He lost ten dollars, and walked home in a frenzy.

Obviously a man cannot avoid his wife altogether.

As a matter of fact, Luke Harker had no wish to do so. He dreaded her in her nagging moods, and at no time held a high opinion of her mental powers, and yet he loved her with as real devotion as one has reasonable right to expect. Perhaps his love was inarticulate, but from the day he had met her backstage in Jersey City she had been the only woman he had ever given a thought to. He hated her extravagant notions, he scorned her taste for novels; but these were, after all, minor discords. In most day to day matters he found her companionable, even if she did fail to show proper interest in his seals. Her yellow hair still fascinated him, as did her liquid, clear blue eyes. He admired her ample build, perhaps all the more because he himself was slight, and was proud to be seen with her. He wanted her to be well dressed because attractive clothes pleased her and reflected credit on him. But a genuine fur coat, costing nearly a thousand dollars, was going a little too far. Besides, he actually did not have the money, unless he were to draw from the store he had set aside for the winter. If he did that he had no notion how they would survive until the season reopened in the spring.

Luke mentioned this phase of the matter on several occasions. Apparently it failed to convince his wife, for she pressed her conversational campaign at every opportunity. But for the fact that he did love his wife he might have ignored the matter entirely, might have staged a big scene and commanded her once and for all to dismiss the idea from her mind. Martha whined and cajoled. He dreaded her pleas, yet he stood his ground with surprising steadfastness.

FINALLY, upon his return from the circus one night, he found her stretched on the bed sobbing.

He leaned over her with as much tenderness as he was capable of betraying, and said: "What's the matter, Martha?"

The sobs continued. Then, as though with an effort to control herself, Martha rose, dried her eyes, and surveyed herself ruefully in the glass. She dropped heavily into a chair, and sat grimly silent. Suddenly, burying her face in her hands, she let out a muffled wail.

"You—you don't love me," she gasped.

Luke banged his derby hat on the clothes tree. He bit his lip and rubbed his hands uncertainly. Then, crossing the room, he stood looking down at her.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked, not rebukingly, but seeking information.

Martha gulped. "You don't love me," she repeated. "You think more of your old seals than you do of me, and you know it."

Luke placed his hands on her shoulders.

"Why, Martha, where do you get that stuff?"

She shook herself free of his touch and crouched in a corner of the chair.

"I ask you a simple favor and you turn me down," she said. "It's because you don't love me."

Luke clenched his fists. His body tensed as he made a conscious effort to control himself. The effort was successful, for his answer was calm, betraying neither anger nor impatience.

"I have told you I ain't got the money," he said, evenly.

Martha rose and flung an arm about his shoulder.

"Honey," she said softly, "I know you ain't got the money, but you don't need it. Get rid of one of the seals."

Luke felt his mouth go dry. Get rid of one of the seals? He could raise money that way, to be sure, but the thought of parting with one of them in exchange for a garment which was a mere luxury shocked him. The seals were at once his pets and his stock in trade; he made his living through them. How could he part with even one of them?

"You don't need six," Martha said. "You can get along with five just as well."

Luke's thin jaw was set as he turned away without answering. Martha did not pursue the suggestion, but the thought remained in Luke's mind. He lay awake many minutes, unable to dismiss the idea. It was an outrageous proposal, he thought, and once he became wrought up to such a pitch he felt he must cry out in protest. But Martha was asleep; that was something to be thankful for. No sense in stirring a hornet's nest!

In the morning he had scarcely finished dressing when Martha opened fire again.

"Honey," she said, "please get rid of one of the seals."

Luke did not answer. He expressed his protest by seizing his hat and stalking out without a word. He drank a cup of coffee in the dining tent, and crossed the street to the big top.

He stood in front of his wagon for a long time, watching the seals. His wife was right: he could get along with five instead of six next season, but the thought of parting with one of them chilled him. He wondered how much longer he could endure this nagging. He wondered—he could sell one of them, advantageously. There was Hastings, who had a seal act in the Biggest Show on Earth, who had made him a proposition earlier in the season which he had rejected. Hastings had offered him fifteen hundred dollars for any one of his seals, and two thousand for Bolo. Bolo was well worth two thousand. He was the star of the troupe, the biggest the most intelligent, the most lovable. He had turned the offer down flatly, but now, for the first time, as he recalled unhappily Martha's suggestion, he considered whether he should accept it. Of course, he would not sell Bolo, but one of the others—perhaps he would.

"Get rid of one of the seals," Martha had said. If he failed to do so, she might continue pestering him indefinitely. Perhaps it was better to get the agony done with, and have peace again. If Martha could get the coat she wanted for eight hundred that would leave a margin of seven hundred. He might be able to pick up a young seal cheap, and train him himself, or, at the worst, he could get along with five next season, as Martha had said.

IN the deserted dressing room, he pushed two trunks together, and stretched out on the improvised couch. He lay there for an hour, turning the matter over and over in his mind. On the one hand, as he saw the problem, was the question of parting with one of the seals, whom he loved. On the other hand, pitted against his affection for the seals, was his wife, whom he also loved. There was the success of the act to be considered, too, and the fact that Martha would nag him if she didn't get the coat. Then he thought how well Martha would look in a real fur coat, and the mental picture pleased him, brought him to a decision. He pulled himself to his feet, pushed one of the trunks to the position it had formerly occupied, and inquired his way to the nearest telegraph office.

The decision made, he felt relieved of all antagonism toward Martha.

At about the same time Martha also came to a decision. She had passed an active morning—not physically active, but mentally. The sudden departure of Luke had angered her. Had there been any one present, it might have been noticed that her lips were pressed together and that she was not reading the book which lay open on her knee. For perhaps an hour, save for occasional futile attempts to pursue her story, she sat staring ahead of her, her chin cupped in her hand. Now and then her mouth twitched nervously. She would show him. After all, saving money was not everything. Just because Luke was careless about how he looked was no reason for her not being well dressed. She was tired of this saving and scrimping. She wanted a fur coat, and there was no real reason why she should not have it. Suddenly her hands closed, and she pounded with her fists on the arms of the chair. Yes, she was going to have it. Luke had refused her. Very well. She would have something to say about that herself. She closed the unread book noisily, and banged it on the bureau.

Luke surprised her by returning at noon. Nonchalantly, he asked her to lunch with him. She accepted the suggestion without enthusiasm, merely shrugging her shoulders.

"All right," she said, indifferently.

At the table she was silent, almost grim. Usually talkative, she answered with monosyllables Luke's attempts to open conversation. At dinner she was the same. Luke surely expected her to introduce her favorite topic, but she did not mention it. Several times he was at the point of telling her of his telegram but a perverse instinct led him to withhold the good news. Time enough when he received an answer. It would be fun to watch her pleased surprise.

He went straight home that night after his act had been completed. He saw no light under the door of their room as he ascended the stairs, and decided Martha had gone to bed early. But when he turned up the light, he saw the room was empty. A novel lay on the bureau, and he thumbed through it, studying the pictures. No doubt Martha had gone to the movies for the second show and would be in presently. When a half hour had passed and she did not return, he started to pace up and down, disconsolate. Fifteen minutes later he concluded he might as well go to bed, and after tossing restlessly for another fifteen minutes, still wondering what was keeping his wife out so late, he fell asleep.

It was not until an hour after midnight that Martha returned. She crept softly up the stairs, undressed in the dark, and carefully crawled into bed without awakening Luke.

NEXT morning, over her coffee, she was again silent and grim. Luke noticed she seemed pale, abstracted, ill at ease. The reason she had arrived home late, she explained, was that she had gone to the movies and afterward had accompanied to a restaurant a woman whose acquaintance she had made recently.

When they had finished breakfast, there came a knock at the door. A yellow envelope was slid across the sill. Luke opened it and read:

ACCEPT YOUR OFFER OF ONE TRAINED SEAL, PRICE FIFTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS. CHECK FOLLOWS BY MAIL.

HASTINGS.

Luke passed the yellow paper to Martha, and watched her intently, prepared to enjoy with her the pleasure of the surprise. She read it, then stared at him with eyes wide open. Her forehead was puckered into a mass of lines.

Suddenly she gasped. Her head fell forward. The paper fluttered to the floor.

"What does it mean?" she asked faintly.

Luke picked up the telegram.

"What does it mean?" he repeated, with the air of a proud husband who has bought for his wife her dearest wish. "It means I've done what you suggested. I've got rid of one of the seals. Hastings has bought him, and you can have the fur coat."

Martha let out a terrified shriek, and rose to her feet. She covered her face with her hands, then a moment later burst into sobs.

"O, O," she cried. "Why, why, O, O, you shouldn't have done it, you"—sobs choked her off. She sank into a chair, and wept without restraint.

Luke gazed at her, stupefied. This was a feminine reaction beyond his understanding. He did not know how to act; what to say. After a moment's hesitation, he approached and laid a hand on her head. She shook him off.

"Go 'way, go 'way," she shrieked.

Luke retreated. From a distance of several yards he stood contemplating her with a troubled frown. Certainly this was not what he had expected. He waited for her sobs to cease, and when, after several minutes, she had apparently become calmer, he said:

"I'll be hanged if I understand you. You wanted a fur coat and now you can have it. What's the idea of the weeps?"

Martha did not reply. Luke again approached and attempted to take her hands, still held before her face. His touch renewed her agitation. She twisted away from him, rose, and dashed to the opposite side of the room, where she stood facing the wall, her arm across her eyes.

"Please," she moaned, "let me alone. Go away."

Luke shrugged. His mouth curled expressively. Slowly, deliberately, he removed a cigaret from a package, lighted it, and tossed the burned match through the window. Before the mirror he jerked his white tie into a more satisfactory position, seized his derby from the rack and passed his elbow about the crown.

"All right," he said with affected indifference, "if that's the way you feel about it."

He closed the door quietly behind him.

From force of habit he turned in the direction of the circus, walking rapidly. His scowling countenance revealed plainly his state of mind. His angry thoughts were concerted with the strange inconsistency of woman. There was no way in which he could explain it. "Get rid of one of the seals," Martha had said, and he had done as she suggested. Instead of gratitude his reward had been hysteria, a scene, an inexplicable demonstration. She had nagged him unceasingly, from the moment she had set her heart on possessing such a garment; surely he had a right to expect some sign of pleasure, of gratitude, that he had made possible, at sacrifice to himself, the gratification of such a whim.

He had been a fool, a weakling. He should have put his foot down firmly and said no, once and for all. He had brought this upon himself because he had no stamina. He would know better next time. He had acquiesced in a foolish notion and had expected that his wife's pleasure at his generosity would bring him joy, but instead he had only the memory of a ridiculous scene, that left him sour and disgruntled. He had even been put out of his room, to pass the time somehow until his turn would go on in the afternoon.

He strode into the circus through the main gate, answering the salutations of the few attendants present with a curt nod. At the seal wagon a strange sight met his eye. Bolo, standing upright, was running around and around, madly, flapping his fins excitedly. At Luke's appearance he set up a loud series of grunts. Luke was terrified. He had never seen Bolo act that way before.

"HEY!" he called to an attendant. "For the love of God, get the Doc, quick, will you!"

It seemed an age before the veterinary appeared. Luke, in a strained, breathless voice, explained briefly. He told of Bolo's apparent collapse of a few nights before, and how he had administered the tonic.

"Overstimulation," the veterinary said.

"Can't be," Luke argued. "Only gave him a few doses. He was all right after that, and I quit. Perfect health yesterday."

The Doc shrugged.

"Well, that's what it is, anyway. I'll soon fix him."

He disappeared into the dressing tent. "Good thing I got here," Luke thought, and for a moment felt kindlier toward his wife. But for her, several hours might have gone by and Bolo might have been dead.

The Doc emerged with a bottle and a large dropper. Followed by Luke, he entered the cage. Luke held the too energetic Bolo while the man of science dropped liquid down his throat.

"He'll be all right soon," the latter asserted. Luke

INSTALLMENT III.

"I Should Try Surmises."

NSPECTOR RODES, one morning about a month after the disappearance of Ernest Fernham, looked at his notebook and found himself down for a consultation with the chief of his department. He made his way to the latter's office at the time appointed, and accepted the chair to which he was motioned. The two men sat facing one another on either side of a plain office table.

"I wanted to talk to you, Rhodes, about this Fernham disappearance," Major Lorton, the assistant chief commissioner, commenced.

The inspector indulged in a slight grimace. There was no subject at the present time more utterly distasteful to him. He waited in silence to hear what his chief had to say.

"Of course, I know," the latter continued, "that a case is a case to you, and that you'd work as hard on it for nothing as for the five thousand pounds reward which has just been offered. There's more than the matter of the reward to it, however. The efficiency of our whole department is being questioned. A young man in evening clothes, without an overcoat or hat, with apparently a blameless past, is spirited away from the family mansion in Norfolk and not even a trace of the message which summoned him has been discovered. On the face of it, the thing seemed incredible!"

"It is incredible," Rodes admitted.

"What about his daily life?" the assistant commissioner asked. "You went into that thoroughly, of course. Was there no weak spot in it at all?"

"Not one," was the confident reply. "The young man—like so many of his race—seems to have been exceptionally domesticated. His father had offered him rooms of his own, but he preferred to live at home. He moved out often at the Ritz and Claridge's, but always with his sister or friends in her circle. He had some acquaintance with a few young ladies in the theatrical profession, but they are quite the best of their type, and he was seldom in their company. He had a large allowance and a large income, and, although he seems to have been fairly liberal, he was quite unable to spend either. His private balance at his bank today stands at over fifteen thousand pounds, and he owns a quarter of a million pounds' worth of shares in the Fernham business.

"He lived a pleasant, harmless life, and never seems to have committed a single action which might produce enmity on any one's part. He was rather particular about his men friends, and he has never been seen with one of those whom we have upon our doubtful list as probable blackmailers. You can rule out the possibility of financial embarrassment, intrigue of any sort with a woman, enmity on the part of any one whom he may have wronged, or blackmailing threats."

"That," the assistant commissioner remarked, "does not leave us much to go on."

"It leaves us nothing," the other assented.

MAJOR LORTON frowned.

"We can't sit down under this, you know, Rodes," he said. "Let us leave the inner springs of the thing for a minute or two and come to the few details we have."

"I went over the whole of the ground myself," Rodes declared, "starting from the gun room at the back of the house where he was last seen. He must have left the house by a certain back door, as otherwise he would have met servants or passed the main kitchens. There were slight indications in the drive of some one lightly shod having passed along as far as a gate about a hundred yards from the house, which leads on to a rough road, chiefly used for carting timber. I found faint traces of a motor tire in the ruts here, but I subsequently learned that both Lord Honerton's agent and the merchant who comes to buy the timber use that road in their cars. Naturally every possible inquiry as to the strange automobiles in the vicinity has been pressed home—without the slightest result, however. Neither has a description of the young man himself produced any credible story."

"Then there was the telephone call," Major Lorton observed. "What about that?"

"I have visited the telephone exchange at Fakenham and the head office at Norwich," Rodes replied. "The young woman who took the call declares it came from a call office, but she was busy and made no note of its exact source. The company has made every effort to discover this for me, without result. The smashing of the line afterwards was without doubt an accident. They were felling timber in a plantation around which the wire comes, and one of the trees on which they had started had been left till the following morning half sawn through. It had been a perfectly still day, and the tree itself seemed absolutely safe. A sudden wind sprang up that evening, however, and the tree fell, cutting the branch wire to Honerton Chase and another one to a house beyond. It was a cruel coincidence, but nevertheless it was a coincidence."

"You will admit, I presume," the commissioner went on after a moment's silence, "that the situation is extremely unsatisfactory."

"I admit it most heartily," his subordinate agreed.

"Have you any theory on the subject whatsoever?"

"I have worn myself out with theories," Rodes acknowledged. "In the end only the shell of one remains, and that's too vague to be of any value or interest."

"All the same," Major Lorton urged gently.

"It comes to this," Rodes interrupted. "I defy any one to explain the disappearance of this young man by any ordinary means. He hadn't an enemy in the world and he's one of the richest young men in the country. The one possibility left is that he has been abducted for the sake of a ransom—or possibly for the sake of the reward if his people can be induced to open their mouths wide enough. But when you come to ask me by what means he was induced to leave the house that night and to place himself in the power of any one, all I can say is that, considering the affair on the basis of everything that is known to us at present, it is absolutely inexplicable."

"I note your reservations," the other observed. "Continue, please."

"If I do," Rodes sighed, "I wander straight into the realms of nonsense. Science, however, is making fools of us every day, and I ask myself this question—is there any fresh discovery pending which might have been anticipated perhaps by some criminal brain before it has been announced to the world? If science won't help us here, what will? After all, why shouldn't a man be able to make himself invisible, for instance? Maskelcyne and Cook have done it, or produced the same effect."

"THIS is very interesting from the point of view of pure speculation," the commissioner remarked dryly, "but it isn't exactly the sort of thing the public are expecting from us."

"We haven't the goods the public want in this case, and they may as well know it," was the blunt reply. "I can't lay claim even to the possesison of a clew. If the young man had gone as far as the back door to see his keeper off, one might build up an interesting hypothesis. He didn't, though. The keeper is positive as to that. Get him as far as that back door and the possibilities have become more interesting. A flash of light in the lane. A call for help. A shadow in the drive. Anything might have tempted him out that little way."

"And when you have him at the gate, what then?" Major Lorton enquired. "He must have gone willingly. There were no signs of any struggle. It was market night and a good many carts were about. A young man in evening dress would have been a somewhat noticeable occupant of any vehicle."

"I am still presuming at the back of my mind," Rodes continued, "the existence of special ways and means for the transportation of this young man and a special influence to control his actions."

"You're harping back to the supernatural again?"

"Supernatural to the vulgar," Rodes objected. "Science to us."

The commissioner sighed.

"I have to make a report to the home secretary on this case," he announced. "You don't suppose this sort of stuff is any use to me?"

"I am not suggesting it is," Rodes rejoined. "I was talking to you as man to man, and I still say, although I believe in the supernatural as little as you do, that there are circumstances in connection with the disappearance of Ernest Fernham which cannot be accounted for except by the admission of some new agency."

"What a confession!" Major Lorton groaned. "For heaven's sake, keep it to yourself!"

"You don't suppose I want to talk about it," was the dogged response. "It's got on my nerves already more than any case I've ever handled in my life."

"You keep on earth sufficiently to admit that you think it's blackmail that's intended—I mean a ransom?"

"There isn't any other conceivable motive," the other agreed. "If the home secretary wants sound advice to hand on to Lord Honerton, I should advise him to make the reward twenty thousand pounds, and no questions asked."

"It's a humiliating position for us," the commissioner grumbled.

"It's worse for me than for any one," Rodes pointed out. "It's my department, my responsibilty. I can't even talk intelligently about it, as you've realized. Isn't it the most hopeless confession that an official in my position could possibly make to his chief? I can't find the young man. I haven't a clew as to the perpetrators of his abduction. I am driven to recommend the offering of a reward of twenty thousand pounds and no questions asked."

RODES walked gloomily westward after his interview with the assistant commissioner, apparently the same as ever; keen eyed, watchful, pugnacious. His outward appearance, however, was no index to his feelings. The spirit had gone out of his work. He felt the humiliation of failure, the unspoken censure of his department acutely. He was depressed and miserable. At the corner of St. James street the most beautiful young woman he had ever seen in his life stepped out of her limousine, glanced at him with recognition in her eyes, and then paused.

"How do you do?" she said. "It is Inspector Rodes, isn't it?"

"It is," he assented, "and, of course, you are Lady Judith Fernham. I have just come from a consultation at Scotland Yard on your brother's case."

"No news yet?" she asked, a trifle wistfully.

"None," he admitted.

He was prepared to pass on, but, although she did not immediately continue the conversation, she seemed anxious to detain him. Inspector Rodes, worried though he was, permitted himself for a moment or two the pleasure of watching her. She wore a chinchilla coat and hat, the latter a turban with a flash of unexpected color. He knew little of such things, but he realized that the geranium scarlet of her lips owed nothing to artifice, that her silky eyebrows, though their perfection seemed to make them appear unnatural, were untouched by any pencil. The cold had brought a faint flush of color into her usually ivory tinted cheeks. Her eyes—almost black they were—fascinated him by their exquisite setting and softness. Her brows were a little knitted. She was evidently pursuing a thought which had crept into her mind.

"Mr. Rodes," she said, "don't think I agree with all those stupid criticisms in the papers, but isn't it rather an astonishing thing that a disappearance like my brother's should be possible nowadays?"

"If we don't clear it up soon it will be the greatest humiliation of my professional career, Lady Judith," he acknowledged. "I cannot tell you how badly we all feel about it—I, worst of all, because it is my department."

"I am going to say something which may sound foolish, perhaps," she went on, "but you know I am an imaginative person, and I sometimes think that where logic fails imagination steps in and helps. Did you ever hear of the incident which happened thirty years ago in that very dining room under precisely similar circumstances?"

"I did, indeed, Lady Judith," the inspector admitted. "That was even a greater tragedy."

"You've never thought of connecting the two, I suppose?" she asked, abruptly.

"Connecting them? Not seriously," he assured her. "Stop a moment, though," he corrected himself. "I made the obvious inquiries, of course. I discovered that the family of Heggs had been extinct in Norfolk for twenty-five years and that your present keeper, Middleton, is a bachelor and a Dorset man."

"That sounds convincing enough," she murmured. "And yet——"

"And yet?" he repeated, after waiting patiently for a few moments.

"Well, you see," she continued, "I have only the imagination to suppose things. I am like the water diviner who taps the ground where other people dig, but if I were you and had come to the end of all my resources I should discard facts for a little time and try surmises. . . . Good-by, Mr. Rodes! Let me hear from you if you adopt my suggestion and anything comes of it."

She passed on across the pavement and entered a shop. Inspector Rodes continued thoughtfully on his way.

WITH all his faults, and Joseph, second Baron Honerton, had many, it could never be said that he was ashamed of his origin or of the source of his wealth. He was never happier than when showing distinguished strangers over the marvelous works from which his fortune flowed. Distinguished strangers were common enough, especially foreigners, for the works themselves were in every way unique. Royalty, however, even in somewhat remote connection, was entirely a new departure, and royalty introduced and accompanied by his daughter was an honor which made him for a moment forget his troubles and remember only the mighty organization of which he was the head. The presence, too, of Frederick Amberleys was extremely gratifying. It was as well for his prospective son-in-law to realise the source of that vast wealth, a portion of which was to pass some day into his keeping.

"This warehouse, now," Joseph pointed out, standing in the midst of it and indicating an immense vista of counter and shelves, "is absolutely the largest room of its sort in the United Kingdom. There is an electric tramway, as you see, running its entire length. The stores are kept up this end; the packing is done at the other. The duty of all these people," he went on, directing his visitors' attention to forty or fifty young men and women in white overalls, "is to examine the products as they come up from the factory and pass them down to the packing room. These casks which are coming up, for instance, contain 'Maltby's Honey Milk.' They will be sent down to the other end and packed in jars or tins, according to it is for the home or the export market."

"So you make 'Maltby's Honey Milk'?" Amberleys exclaimed. "Topsole stuff! I had it when I was getting over the fever."

"We manufacture at the present moment," Joseph declared, "three hundred and thirteen different kinds of patent medicines and foods, including, I am sure, more than half the specifics you have ever heard of, 'Phillip's Lung Tonic,' for instance; 'Mandrake Tea,' and dozens of others. We're the largest manufacturers of pills in the world, and, though we have the plant going day and night, we find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"I am always interested in these absorbing patent medicines," the prince remarked. "Our doctors warned against them, but I suppose some of them must be quite good."

"The drugs and foods that are turned out from this establishment," Joseph announced, "are absolutely entirely pure. Patent medicines have an undeserved bad name. Manufactured as we manufacture them you could not get purer stuff. The preparation is all the result of studied medical labor, and no chemist can command drugs of the quality we use to buy. Our head chemist is a wizard—the most celebrated young man in Europe."

"Do you ever take any of your medicines yourself, sir?" Frederick Amberleys asked.

"When I have anything the matter with me I never hesitate," was the prompt reply. "We make 'Dandy,' the celebrated cure for indigestion. I take it when I have an attack, and it never fails to relieve me. I have confidence in it because I know how it is made. The prescription is there, with the others, in my safe. Come, and I will show you some of the manufacturing processes."

The trio dutifully followed their guide and saw strange sights. They saw great vats of a liquid, 'Nervine' being stirred by slowly turning wheels to the proper degree of consistency, pills flying from an amazing looking machine at the rate of a hundred a minute, roots and hard, knobbly nuts without end being ground into a powder by yet another machine. They started from the basement, where the floor was of stone and huge vats full of liquid, some upside down and some the reverse, were being warmed, tested, and mixed, and mounted by slow stages to the fourth floor, where the bottling was done. On the fifth floor, which they finally ascended, there were long rows of men bending over fixed receptacles which glittered like silver.

"Let me present you, Sir Lawrence," Joseph said, rising to his feet. "Sorry to disturb you, but we are much honored this morning. Sir Lawrence Paule, our head chemist—his highness Prince Edgar of Galwey; my daughter, Lady Judith—Lord Amberleys."

The newcomer acknowledged the introductions with composure. Judith's eyes had scarcely once left his face.

"Surely I have met you lately, haven't I?" she asked, wonderingly.

"Indefinitely," he admitted. "We met in the lawn tennis competition at Queen's last week. I was playing with Lady Ferber, if you remember."

"Of course I remember!" she exclaimed. "You wiped the floor with us. Lady Ferber's introduction was almost inaudible, and I never caught your name."

"Your partner was much off his game," Paule remarked. "I am so sorry to have kept you waiting this morning. I was trying a slight experiment in the inner analyst's room and was obliged to see it through. Would your visitors care to see the private laboratories, Lord Honerton?"

"We should like to very much," Judith declared promptly, without waiting for any one else to reply.

SIR LAWRENCE turned away for a moment, with a word of excuse, to give some instructions to the young man, who was obviously his secretary. Judith's eyes continued to follow him. There was, indeed, in the light of her father's information, some cause for her surprise. She had been expecting to see a studious if not gray headed veteran of science stooping and bespectacled, with all the aloofness of the savant. Lawrence Paule, on the contrary, although he was one of those men whose age would have been at any time difficult to determine, was obviously under middle age. He had the long, lean body of an athlete, a clean shaven, thoughtful face, with a somewhat prominent forehead, gray eyes, hard and keen, a cynical twist to his mouth, black hair, glossy, yet slightly unkempt, and worn a trifle too long. He was wearing, over his clothes, a loose linen duster, and he carried in his hand a pair of thick magnifying spectacles. A single horn rimmed eyeglass hung by a cord from his neck. Judith leaned across her companions.

"Dad," she asked, under her breath, "how old is this amazing scientist of yours?"

Her father grinned.

"Better ask him, my dear," he suggested. "He wouldn't tell me."

"I've heard of the fellow," Amberleys whispered. "Tell you something about him later."

Sir Lawrence finished his conversation with his secretary and rejoined them. He moved to the inner door, opened it, and motioned them to pass through.

"I am afraid," he said, "you will find very little here to interest you. This department is devoted to purely technical experiments. My assistants are busy this morning testing a shipment of suspected drugs from South America."

They all looked around, no one with very great enthusiasm. In front of a great uncurtained window was a long marble table, on which were ranged a seemingly endless collection of glass vessels of various sizes and shapes, underneath some of which little electric fires were burning. From several of the others a faint brown vapor was being emitted, over which one of the four young assistants was holding some sort of ball instrument inclosed in a silk mesh. On the farther side of the room a certain space was shut off by a solid mahogany rail, with iron lattice work beneath. In the center of this space, overhung by powerful electric lights, was a marble table on which were several more glass retorts and a large number of gleaming scientific implements.

"What exactly goes on here?" Judith inquired.

"Every parcel of drugs which comes into the place," Paule explained—"drugs, herbs of any component parts of our medicines—is tested and according to any divergence there may be in its strength or purity, from the recognized standard, so our mixer in chief varies his preparation. Sometimes, of course, we have to condemn parcels of drugs altogether. All our eucalyptus oil lately, for instance, has been most indifferent."

"And what goes on inside that jealously preserved space?" the prince asked, pointing to the enclosure.

Paule strolled over to it and opened the iron gate with a key attached to his watch chain.

"This is one of the places where I make experiments," he said. "Sometimes, for instance, it is possible to substitute a far less expensive drug for some of those we have been in the habit of using and procure exactly the same result. This is where I try to justify my existence as a commercial asset to the firm."

"And succeed, too," Joseph declared heartily. "You'd be astonished, all of you, if I were to let you into the secret of how much money has been saved to the firm inside that little inclosure."

PAULE remained impassive, watching a blue flame over some brown powder. Judith found herself standing by his side.

"What on earth does that signify?" she asked, pointing to it.

"Just this," he replied.

He plunged into a highly technical exposition, winding up with a little movement of his hand towards the expiring flames.

"You understand?" he asked.

"Not a single word," she admitted frankly.

He smiled, as the flame died out with a small report.

"No," he murmured. "Well, I didn't think you would."

"Why did you trouble to tell me about it, then?" she demanded.

"Because you asked," he rejoined.

She turned away. Joseph had himself been explaining the procedure of the room to his other two visitors.

"Well, she declared, "I am a little disappointed. Is there nothing more for us to see, dad?"

Her father pointed to a solid mahogany door at the farther end of the laboratory.

"Not unless you can persuade Paule to take you into his holy of holies," he replied.

"Has Sir Lawrence anything so intriguing?" she queried. "Is there anything beyond that door, Sir Lawrence, more exciting than a silly blue flame, a brown powder, and a lot of stupid technical terms?"

"Vastly so," he assured her, without moving from his place.

"Then lead on," she begged. "I am in the humor to be thrilled."

He shook his head gently. Her father intervened.

"I ought to have warned you, Judith," he said, "that Sir Lawrence is rather by way of being a martinet about that Bluebeard's chamber of his. Can't quite make up my mind whether it's perpetual motion or something of the monkey's gland order he's after. Only been allowed to peep inside the door once myself."

"There is nothing going on there at the moment likely to interest any of you," Paule insisted coolly. "In fact, the whole of this department is a little technical for the ordinary visitor."

"Very interesting, all the same," Prince Edgar declared, stifling a slight yawn.

Judith leaned towards her guide, and dropped her voice.

"Aren't we to be allowed just a glimpse inside that room?" she pleaded.

He shook his head. He had somehow the air of one addressing a child.

"To tell you the truth," he confided, "there are ghosts and evil spirits loose there. They recognize me as their master, but they object to visitors. An evil spirit evolved from gasses is a terrible fellow to meet when he's not in the humor for amenities."

She made a little grimace to cover her anger.

"And a distinguished chemist when he is in the mood to be disagreeable can also be an unpleasant person when he chooses," she observed.

Paule locked the gate through which they had issued and passed in front of them to the farther door of the laboratory.

"I am sorry not to have had more to show you," he remarked with a bow of obvious dismissal. "Perhaps you may honor us on some future occasion when we are making some more interesting experiments. We have an idea, for instance, of a new cure for rheumatism, which if it succeeds will make England a brighter nation."

"Insufferable person!" Judith declared, as soon as the door was safely closed.

Her father shook his head deprecatingly.

"My dear," he confided, taking her arm, "he is sometimes very rude to me. I pretend not to notice it. I shall go on pretending not to notice it. Last year he increased the profits of his department two hundred thousand pounds. So long as he goes on doing that, he can be as irritating as he chooses."

JUDITH, reclining in a chaise longue, skillfully arranged in a corner of the rose garden at Honerton Chase, threw the volume of "Who's Who" which she had been studying on to the grass by her side, and reflected for a few moments. An early heat wave had driven her with her parents out of London for the week-end, but already they were realizing that the expedition was scarcely a success. Rachel had refused to leave the house, some invited guests had failed to arrive, and in the absence even of tennis as well as other distractions, Judith was frankly bored. There was nothing to help her to forget the shadow that brooded over the place.

"Dad," she asked abruptly, "how did you come across Lawrence Paule?"

"Come across him?" he repeatedly, irritably. "One doesn't come across a man like that. I own the biggest drug business in the world, and I wanted the best chemist, if money would buy him. As a matter of fact, I offered Sir James Lenton twenty thousand a year if he'd come to us, and he declined. At that time he was considered a better man than Paule—not today, though. Paule's easily the best man in the world, and I got him for ten thousand—and what I thought would be an ordinary bonus," Joseph concluded, a little ruefully.

"What do you mean by an ordinary bonus?" Judith inquired.

"Well," he said, "I'll explain. It's this way. We put a lot of preparations on the market, as you know, but the bulk of our business is done in twelve of them, all household names, all bought up at odd times. It is the job of our chemist to buy the drugs for these—drugs or whatever else they may be made of—and turn 'em out at the price. We offered Paule—it was Samuel's idea, and it seemed quite a sound one—twenty per cent of any economy he could effect in the manufacture, provided the preparation, of course, was turned out up to the standard. What do you think, Judith—the first twelve months he worked for us, he saved on the manufacture, in black and white, something just over a hundred thousand pounds."

"Jolly good for you," she murmured.

"Good for us, but what about him?" her father exclaimed in some excitement. "Who ever thought of his scooping up a bonus of nearly twenty thousand pounds apart from his salary? The man's a perfect wizard in drugs. He buys them from Botamia, and South America, India and Cochin-China, Japan, and no end of out of the way places. He seems to have correspondents everywhere, and he knows precisely what he wants. Not only that," Joseph went on solemnly, "but he's actually invented a cure for rheumatism which really does people good—we've tried it upon old cases. If I cared to spend the money on advertising it, there's another fortune waiting there."

"I suppose he would want a share of it," Judith observed.

"That's just it," her father assented. "We Fernhams have always made money for ourselves and the members of our family, and we've kept the others out. Twenty thousand a year that young man is making from us in bonuses, besides his salary! And if I take this new thing and give him a fifth of the profits, however we work it, he'll make another ten. I can't bear to see money going out of the business like that."

Judith turned her head, and looked at her father admiringly.

"No wonder you're a multimillionaire, dad," she said. "What I was really going to ask you, though, was why don't you ask Sir Lawrence Paule to dinner some time?"

"Ask him to dinner!" Joseph repeated blankly.

"Yes," Judith went on. "He seems all right. I've been reading about him. He was born at Wormley in Surrey—no date given. His father appears to have been the headmaster of Wormley Grammar school. From there he went to Oxford, Leipzig, and several other universities. He seems to have accumulated all the letters of the alphabet, tacked on to his name in a sort of nightmare procession. He was knighted for valuable services during the war, and his chief recreations are research, tennis, and shooting. I think you might safely ask him to dinner."

"I thought you disliked the fellow?" her father remarked. "I've never seen you so nearly angry with any one in my life as when you came away from the works."

Judith smiled faintly. It was a smile which her father knew well, and if his own feelings towards Lawrence Paule had been of a more friendly character he would have been sorry for him.

"It is because I don't like him," she explained, "that I wish you to ask him to dinner."

Joseph stroked his chin.

"It isn't my job anyway," he reflected. "He isn't the sort of man you can ask to come home and take pot luck with you. You've got parties two nights next week. You'd better ask him to one of them."

"We will," Judith assented. "I'll write on mother's behalf, and invite him to dine on Thursday."

"He won't come," Joseph warned her. "He's often at the works till nine o'clock at night, and he sleeps there two or three times a week."

"Sleeps there?" she repeated.

Her father nodded.

"He has a slap-up suite of rooms—bedroom and all," he declared. "Holderness, who was his predecessor, had to have something of the sort, as, [illegible] when they're experimenting, these things must [illegible] ing for twenty-four hours on end. Paule's gone the thing thoroughly, though—spent some of his money on fitting up the rooms and has his servant."

"How interesting!" Judith murmured. "Still, think he'll come. Dad, I've got the fidgets. I'm to walk around."

JOSEPH rose suddenly.

"Judith," he confided, "it's hell! I wish we'd come. There's your mother there, under the [illegible] with her back turned to us all, just knitting and ting as hard as ever she can and saying never a [illegible]

"Poor mother!" Judith sighed.

They were almost in the shadow of one of the beautiful houses in England, softened with age, ful and stately, its only note of modernity the which flew from behind one of the top chimneys. rose garden, through which they were passing, dream of delight; beyond, the park sloped away miles, a paradise of green verdure, with [illegible] closed plantations and here and there a huge [illegible] rhododendrons. There were peacocks strutting on the terrace, a noisy tumult of crows from tall elm trees.

"It's a wonderful home," Joseph declared. "[illegible] grandfather worked for it, and I own it, and I if I spend another day here I shall go crazy. your mother's the same. I'm beat, Judith. We'll it out today, but I shall motor back tomorrow. I I'd never brought your mother here. It isn't death, this. One gets over that, somehow, along just the same. We've had our share of It hurts, and that's all there is to it. But, there's madness at the end of this, Judith! I'll find Ernest's skeleton tomorrow than have this haven't."

"You mustn't give up hope, dad," she insisted.

Her father stopped in the middle of the [illegible]

"What, in God's name, is it that you hope for?" he demanded. "How can he come back? Where he come from? Why did he go away? Can answer me one of those questions?"

"I can't," she admitted. "I've left off thinking about it. I just have a feeling. I cling to that, dad," she went on, hurriedly, "you came down for my sake, I know. I told you I wanted to, and I did. I told you I had no engagement. I had a dozen. I broke them all. I should have come here whether you had come or not—and I can't you why."

Her father stared at her for a moment. Then he felt in his waistcoat pocket, produced [illegible] and lit it.

"Well," he said, more calmly, "you've had your way. I wish I thought something would come of it. I'm going to talk to your mother. Perhaps I can get her to drive around the park with me."

THE MAN WHO MARRIED A DUMBBELL - - - By Theron Bamberger

watched in front of the cage for an hour. Good thing his wife had driven him out, all right; otherwise it might have been too late.

Gradually Bolo's wild gyrations ceased. Luke was relieved, but the reasons for the strange symptoms continued to puzzle him. He knew he had not administered too much of the tonic himself, and no one else would have dared tamper with his animals. Besides, he had left the bottle containing the tonic in his room.

Suddenly he drew himself to his full height. His fingernails dug into the palms of his hands. Scattered threads wove themselves into a single strand in his mind. Was it possible? Yes, he understood now. So that was why she had come in late! The movies, indeed? What a simp he was; believed everything that was told him.

He turned quickly and passed to the street. Bolo was normal again, but he would find out what had happened. Head thrust forward, he set off at a rapid pace. He slammed the front door behind him, and ascended the stairs two at a time. Martha was sitting inertly in the armchair as he entered the room.

Ignoring her, he went straight to a closet and flung open the door. He had placed the bottle marked "Poison" on a shelf. The bottle was gone.

He closed the door and locked it. Removing the key, he hurled it savagely to the floor. Martha's first words told him the story.

"L-Luke," she sobbed weakly, "is he dead?"

Luke glared at her. "So," he said melodramatically, through clenched teeth, "that's the kind of woman you are!"

Martha's head fell back limply, then forward again. There was a look of terror in her eyes. She drew a long, sobbing breath.

"I'm sorry," she said weakly.

Luke folded his arms, his angry eyes still fastened on her.

"Sorry," he hissed scornfully. "Sorry!" Then, no longer able to control himself, he advanced toward her, shaking his fists.

"Why did you do it?" he roared. She did not answer, and again he yelled "Why?" hoarsely, savagely.

She placed her hands on the arms of the chair and braced herself.

"Because," she said, "I wanted a fur coat like Malina has, like other women have. You wouldn't buy me one."

Luke stood towering over her.

"But why kill my best seal?" he demanded. "Would that get you a fur coat?"

SHE did not answer immediately. Then, timidly, she said: "Honey, I found a place where I could have the skin made up into a coat for fifty-five dollars."

"What?"

Martha nodded. "Only fifty-five dollars."

"What kind of a coat?" Luke growled.

"Sealskin, of course."

Luke blinked. He locked fingers across his forehead and his eyes sought the ceiling. He broke into hard, mirthless laughter.

"You dumbbell," he said.

Martha looked at him with an aggrieved air.

"I asked you to get rid of one of the seals," she said, "but you wouldn't do it. So I decided to get rid of it myself. I never thought of selling a seal. I thought it would be all right just to have a coat made out of the skin of one of them."

Luke's lower lip shot out and twisted scornfully.

"You dumbbell," he said feelingly.

"Honey," Martha pleaded, "can't I have the skin?"

"Have the skin?" Luke repeated. "Much good it would do you. To think that you, a seal trainer's wife, didn't know. Ha, ha! You dumbbell."

Then he added, almost triumphantly: "They ain't seals. They're sea lions."

He broke into loud laughter again. To think that his own wife, after years of traveling with the show, didn't know the first thing about circus seals. [illegible] ignorance! If some one had written a novel about circus seals she might have been better informed. She might have known then about fur bearing seals, whose skins were made into expensive coats for vain women; about sea lions—hair seals—whose skins were practically valueless. Thank God, Bolo was alive.

His thin lips parted; his eyes narrowed as he bent forward.

"Not only that," he said sneeringly, "Bolo is not dead."

"Isn't dead?" She rose. "O, I'm so glad!"

Luke laughed again.

"That wasn't poison," he said. "That was—is—that was tonic you gave him."

Martha's mouth opened. "O," she said, and breathed a deep sigh of relief. She clasped her hands. "Then you've sold one of the other seals to Hagen for fifteen hundred?"

Luke nodded. Martha's face brightened.

"Hurray!" she exclaimed. "I'm going to get a fur coat after all. Luke, you're a dear!"

Luke sat down abruptly. He pounded a knee with his fist. The impertinence of that woman! To kill his best seal and then acts as though nothing had happened. Well, he'd show her. She would regret this. He would put the entire fifteen hundred on the farm. No woman could pull a trick like that on him and get away with it. No, sir. He'd—

Something inside him seemed to snap. He felt so weak.

"You don't deserve it," he said, "but if you do get it, I suppose I'll never have any peace. Fifteen hundred and ten dollars for a fur coat! It's outrageous!"

Martha smiled broadly, then bent over and threw her arms about him.

"Honey," she said. "The one marked eight-ten is so nice. Can't I have the one for nine hundred?"

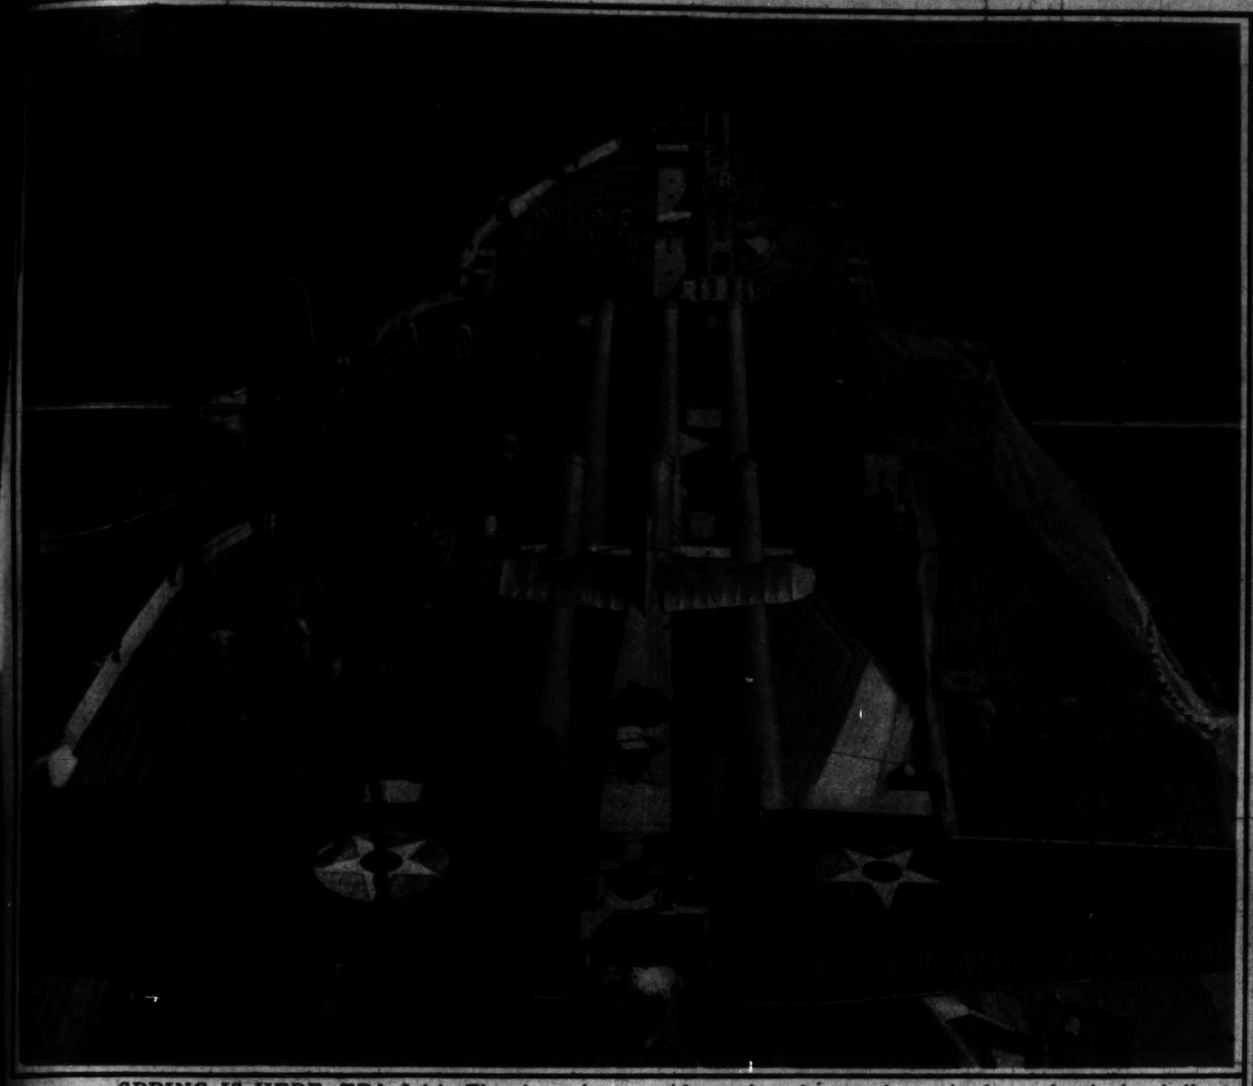
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

March 15, 1925



SPRING IS HERE, TRA LA! There's no better evidence than the vernal practice begun by the baseball team of the battleship Mississippi, champions of the Pacific fleet for three consecutive years, on their $50,000,000 training camp. Wild ones overboard might complicate matters, except for specially constructed net stretched over the quarterdeck. (Photograph from International.)

TAKING THE HELM OF THE SHIP OF STATE—Frank B. Kellogg (at right), former senator and more recently ambassador to Great Britain, being sworn in as secretary of state. The oath is administered by Pierce Butler, associate justice of the Supreme court, with former Secretary Hughes and Mrs. Kellogg as witnesses in the immediate background. TARGET FOR ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS in the recent tests at Fortress Monroe. Lieut. M. McFeren is fastening a glider to an airplane. When the plane reached the desired altitude the glider was cut loose and the guns turned on it. It is claimed these tests justified the charge of the ousted Brig. Gen. Mitchell that our army's defense against aircraft is woefully weak. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE, dispatches narrate, is Nicholas Longworth. But the real speaker of the house so far as domination of the Longworth menage is concerned, it's safe to say, will be Miss Paulina. When the youngest of Roosevelt lineage left Chicago, upon which she first opened her eyes, it was in the arms of a nurse, accompanied by her mother. And she was muffled in garments of pink and white and blue, gifts of Mrs. Medill McCormick. (Tribune photograph.)

GENERAL MITCHELL'S SUCCESSOR as assistant chief of the army air service will be Lieut. Col. James E. Fechet, if the Senate approves the choice of Secretary of War Weeks. Col. Fechet now is commandant at Kelly flying field in Texas. He has risen from the rank of private in the air service. His new post will make him a brigadier general, while Brig. Gen. Mitchell will revert to his old rank as colonel. (Photograph copyright by Harris & Ewing.)

BACK IN THE FRENCH ARENA—Joseph Caillaux (at right), the former premier of France imprisoned for dealing with enemy during the war and lately pardoned under the amnesty act, at the Paris banquet that marked his recent return to politics. It is universally expected that he will make a speedy bid for the premiership as leader of liberal elements. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

The character of the homes heated by Oil-O-Matic indicates the quality of its service

This way of oil heating ends all doubt

THIS is to people who loathe coal, but continue to use it. Who want an oil burner but are slow to accept them. Particularly to those who do not realize that the oil burner problem was solved six years ago.

Everyone once thought that oil heat was an experiment. But now Oil-O-Matic has given people a new conception of oil heating.

Proved for six winters

In more than 20,000 homes, Oil-O-Matic holds the same balmy temperature from fall to spring. Sudden zero blasts register no decline on their indoor thermometers. All this without their giving it a thought.

Their homes, they boast, are brighter and cleaner. No odor pervades their homes. No unpleasant noise is heard.

This is what Oil-O-Matic offers you and everyone with any type of good heating plant. In any size home or building.

Six years ago our engineers found four principles that were being disregarded. These explained the difficulties others were having in trying to heat with oil. No oil burner can ever be made to work right if its principle is wrong. The four natural laws of oil combustion are vital to successful operation.

Then we built Oil-O-Matic. It was the first to make use of these laws. It cost us $250,000 before we installed a single one in anyone's home. But now it has proved these laws for six winters. Not one single important change has ever been necessary.

The four laws demand this

No hot plates are used because oil must be nebulized, not vaporized. No part is inside the firebox because oil must burn in suspension to avoid forming soot. There's no manual control of dampers because an exact amount of air must be supplied. We line the firebox with brick because reflected heat assures better combustion. The four laws demand this.

There's no continuous pilot light—it has no place on a modern oil burner. No adjustment is necessary if you change from one grade of oil to another. No worry about the oil not lighting or blowing out.

Nothing but constant, automatic heat, pure and simple.

Every installation guaranteed

So Oil-O-Matic is unlike any other device that burns oil. It will interest you to see this burner that has finally solved the problem. There is an authorized dealer near you. Let him give you a demonstration. He guarantees every installation he makes.

Oil-O-Matic is sold and serviced by trained heating men in about 800 cities. Most of them are graduates of the Williams Institute of Heat Research. They have experience, facilities, organization, and financial responsibility. They are backed by the largest producer of automatic oil burners in the world.

THOUSANDS OF THE NATION'S BEST paid tribute to the new chief executive in the most impressive of national ceremonies. This striking view shows the inaugural stand and a section of the huge crowd which witnessed the swearing in of Calvin Coolidge as the thirtieth President of the United States. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

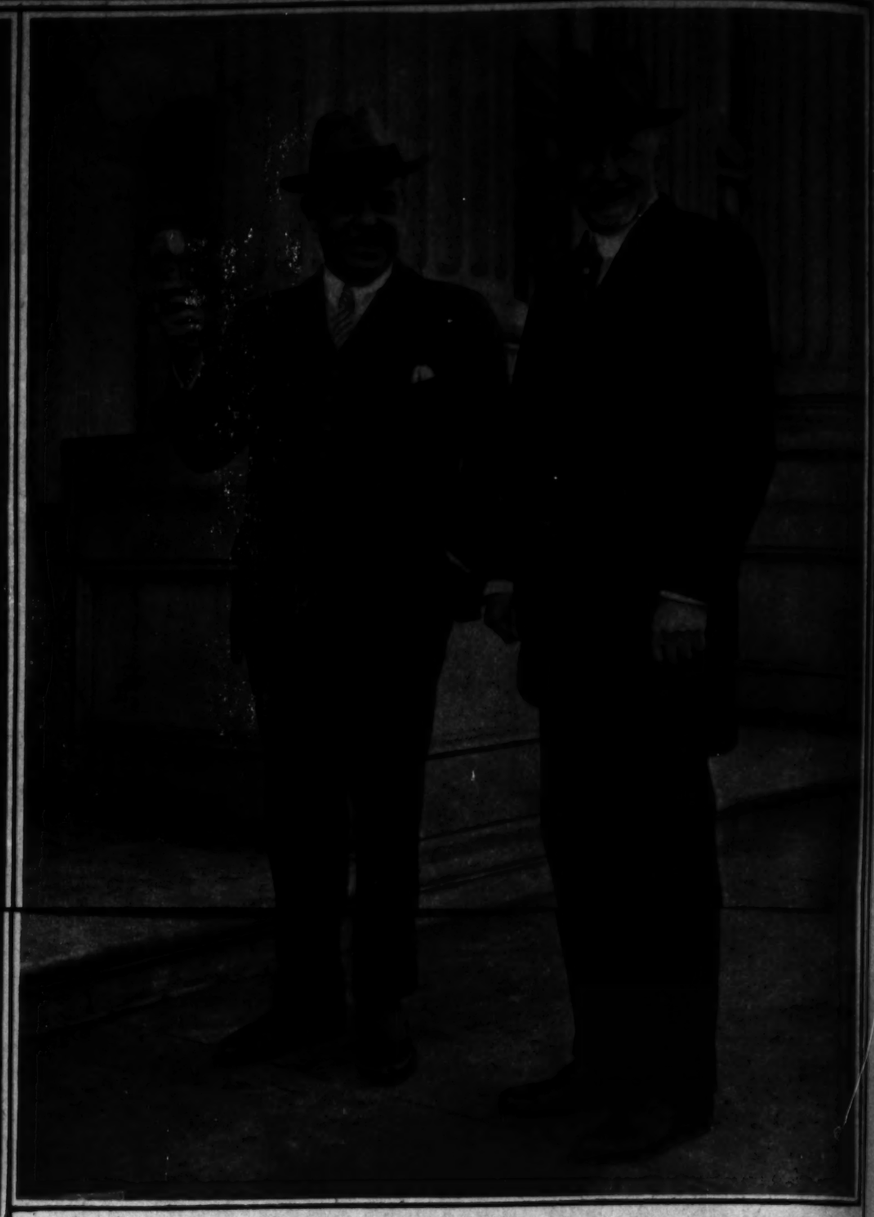
FACING THE OATH that brings with it the highest honor within the gift of the American people failed to ruffle the composure and poise of the Coolidge family. President and Mrs. Coolidge are shown here leaving the White House for the inaugural ceremonies, with Senator Charles Curtis, chairman of the inaugural committee. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

KEEPING UP WITH THE GUMPS at Palm Beach is a strenuous task, if this latest picture of Sidney Smith, creator of the famous cartoon, and Mrs. Smith, is an indication. The photographer didn't say, but it is thought that the figure to the right is not that of little Chester. (Photograph from International.)



WIELDING THE GAVEL as speaker of the house in the Sixty-ninth congress seems to hold no terrors for Nicholas Longworth of Ohio. He is shown here exhibiting his new badge of office after having formally received it from the former speaker, Frederick H. Gillett (right), who entered the senate this month. You can look smart without extravagance

A dress that looks charming on one woman may look terrible on another. Have you ever noticed that? And have you ever wondered what causes one girl or woman to look smart in anything she wears, while another girl of the same age, coloring, weight and height, may have no style whatever? The reason is—figure. Figure truly is fashion's foundation.

When you have good lines underneath, you have style, smartness, in the simplest, most inexpensive dress . . . . To insure the continuance of youthful lines select one of the "figuraides" from The Gossard Line of Beauty. Lovely garments, in a wide range of prices, perfectly designed to fit your individual figure needs, be you unusually slender, medium or stout. If you feel the need of figure improvement—go as soon as you can to your corsetiere and ask her advice in choosing the most effective garment from The Gossard Line of Beauty.

Model 530—A clasp around with wide elastic sections over the hips and a two-inch elastic top. The cloth back graduates to form points to which supporters are attached. Dainty trim of blue and pink braid. Three pairs of hose supporters. Fancy brocade, surgical elastic, pink. Sizes, 24 to 36. $5.00

Model 1272—Longerlype—a long average brassiere of satin made with scalloped bottom which makes the garment fit well around the waistline. Fancy shoulder straps with inserts of elastic. Trimmed at top and bottom with dainty lace edge. Pink. Sizes 32 to 46.

How to judge your figure

Measurements of beauty contest winners indicate that for American girls 5 feet 2 inches tall, the average bust measurement is 32 inches, waist 24, hips (or thigh) 33. For girls 5 feet 4 inches, the measurements are 34, 26 and 35 inches. For 5 feet 6 inches, 34, 28 and 36. Of course no measurements are final and positive, but these furnish an interesting basis of comparison.

Measure yourself
—use this convenient rule—

Take a piece of ribbon or string and lay it alongside this rule to determine your measurements. Remember your corsetiere is trained to help you select your garment from The Gossard Line of Beauty.

SHAPING A MOUNTAIN into a monster work of art has ended in petty quarreling and legal battles for Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor. He is shown here working on the gigantic nose of Gen. Lee, whose figure is one of the heroic group carved on the side of Stone mountain in Georgia.
(Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)

HIGH UP ON STONE MOUNTAIN, Gutzon Borglum and two assistants are shown here in the early stages of work on the great confederate memorial in Georgia. He is accused now of destroying the models for this great art work.

DROPS OF LIFE AND MESH OF DEATH have combined to make these strangely beautiful pictures of one of nature's oldest arts. Glistening dew, caught at dawn by a patient camera, reveals the marvelous structure and varied design of the spider's web. Although the threads of the web are of silk one hundred times finer than hair, a half hour suffices for the tiny spinner to complete a lacy masterpiece like this one. The outline is spun first. Then the web is filled in, with each thread radiating from the center and the cross threads joined at 90 degree angles.
(Photographs from Kadel & Herbert)

A FIERCE BATTLE between the spinner and its insect victim left this closely woven pattern little the worse for wear. This design is sometimes used by the spider in its aerial travels, floating with the wind at great heights.

PEARLY DECORATIONS, wrought by dew, annoy the average spider after it has finished one of these open weave and practically invisible webs. Note the proprietor clearing away the telltale drops on the upper threads.

A HOME TRAIL is always open to the spider. By trailing a thread behind it, the spinner can drop to the ground from any height and retrace its steps with certainty to a particular spot in web, tree or weed. The long thread at the right is an example.

A SHOWER OF SILK like this one has been developed by one species of spider as a combination home and food reservoir. Each thread is so arranged that an insect entangled anywhere in the web will telegraph his presence directly to the trap center.

FANNIE FOOLS FATE! It's the fate of most fair women when they reach the age of 60—to look 60. Not so Fannie Ward! Stage and screen actress for years and probably the world's greatest beauty parlor fan, she has by determined resource to what is latest and best in plastic surgery succeeded in maintaining a "thirty" contour at the three score milestone. This picture was taken of her recently at the Miami race track when she was "just loafing."

"I HAD A FRIEND who was an ardent Fleischmann's Yeast fan, and I used to take great delight in teasing her. This is what she handed me: 'Well, I'd rather be a yeast fan, than a pill fiend. Furthermore, I wouldn't trade my yeast complexion for your pill one!' I was a pill fiend, and my face was sallow, and usually spotted with eruptions. I started that very day to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. It proved to be all the yeast enthusiasts claimed for it. In a few weeks, I had entirely overcome the pill habit; elimination was natural and regular; my appetite and digestion were fine, and I had a complexion instead of a skin."
Miss Edith C. Armbruster, Chicago, Ill.

"THIS SUMMER (1924) I entered the Democratic primary for the State Senate. After a hard campaign I found myself in a run-down condition, with digestive system impaired. . . . I began consuming two cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily; within two weeks I was feeling like a new man. My stomach trouble was relieved; complexion began to brighten; nerves were normal, and morning headaches disappeared."
W. A. S. Furlow, Bristol, Tenn.

Your Body—

How well do you treat it?
How smoothly does it run?

One simple food can tone up your entire system—banish constipation, skin troubles—stomach disorders

Not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics can give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today! And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. 685, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"I HAD TRIED MANY REMEDIES for a very disfiguring eruption on my face and chest. I imagined people passed remarks about my horrible complexion. I knew remarks were justified. One day I decided to try Fleischmann's Yeast. From the first there was a gradual change for the better, and after two or three weeks my complexion has entirely cleared of any blemishes."
Miss Blanche Ward, Watertown, N. Y.

"PREVIOUS TO COMING TO THIS COUNTRY in 1921 I had always enjoyed good health. My first job in the great Northwest was that of school teacher, necessitating my going far into the bush country. The monotony of the diet produced an alarming condition of constipation and dizziness which frequent cathartics only aggravated. While on vacation, a brother-in-law in the city advised me to try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did so with the most gratifying results. The bush and all the terrors it previously held for me is now no longer a bugbear, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast."
J. H. Foley, Winnipeg, Can.

EAT 2 OR 3 CAKES a day before meals on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) night and morning. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

Thompson Radio —an instrument worthy of great music

NOW that the mechanics of radio transmission have been brought to a high state of perfection, programs are getting better and better. Artists of world-wide repute are bringing their talents to the broadcasting studio. Completing the cycle of perfection is the Thompson Neutrodyne receiver, which delivers these improved programs precisely as they are put upon the air.

The great operatic arias; the blended strings, woodwinds and brass of the symphony orchestra; restful chamber music; the foot-agitating rhythm of America's great dance orchestras; the natural voice of a great statesman—the Thompson Radio brings them all to you in the tones of realism. "Thompson Tone stands alone," music-lovers say.

Thompson has the background

Behind the Thompson Neutrodyne is a radio and engineering background unmatched in the industry—fifteen years' experience in designing, developing and manufacturing intricate and delicate radio apparatus for the armies, navies and commercial institutions of the world. Add this to the Neutrodyne superiorities in general and you have a receiving set that stands alone in the world of music.

In the Thompson Radio, range, volume and selectivity are likewise outstanding. These superiorities and Thompson Tone are what induced high-class music dealers and dealers in high-class radio and electrical equipment to seek the Thompson franchise. These dealers are glad to demonstrate the Thompson in your home and to extend, if you wish, reasonable terms of payment.

Six tubes give distance with volume

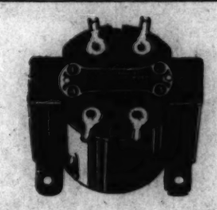
An unique transformer (an exclusive Thompson engineering feat) permits the use of six tubes in the Thompson Neutrodyne—an achievement heretofore confined to the experimental laboratory. Distant programs that come in faintly (if at all!) on ordinary receiving sets are delivered with the volume and brilliance of nearby broadcasts on the 6-tube Thompson. For the first time in radio, such performance is possible.



The Thompson Audio-Frequency Transformer

Here is the culmination of months of scientific development—the Thompson Transformer. Found only in Thompson Neutrodynes. Makes possible the extraordinary feat of using three stages of audio-frequency amplification with quality as flawless on the last stage as on the first. An outstanding accomplishment of radio engineering.

Like the reserve power of the 90-horse-power automobile, the super-power of the 6-tube Thompson Neutrodyne is there when you need it. The 6-tube Thompson Concert Grand can be used with 6 tubes, 5 tubes or 4 tubes by merely moving a simple plug from one socket to another. Truly a power range possible with no other Neutrodyne on the market.

Three sets from which to choose

The 6-tube Thompson Concert Grand sells at $180. This is unquestionably the finest thing in radio today at any price. There is also the 5-tube Thompson Parlor Grand, which sells at $145. Thompson quality throughout, but with one tube less than the Concert Grand. Then there is the 5-tube Thompson Grandette, which sells at $125. This differs from the Parlor Grand chiefly in size and cabinet-work.

Arrange now for demonstration

In the quiet of your home, free from disturbing influences, hear the Thompson Neutrodyne. The Thompson dealer will bring a set to your home and demonstrate it under operating conditions which any set you buy will have to meet. This will give you the opportunity to let your ear decide. The true test of any radio!

Radio programs are getting better day by day. To hear them at their best, you need the musical marvel of radio—the Thompson Neutrodyne. Arrange for the demonstration now! R. E. Thompson Mfg. Co., 30 Church Street, New York.

THE WAGNER OPERA

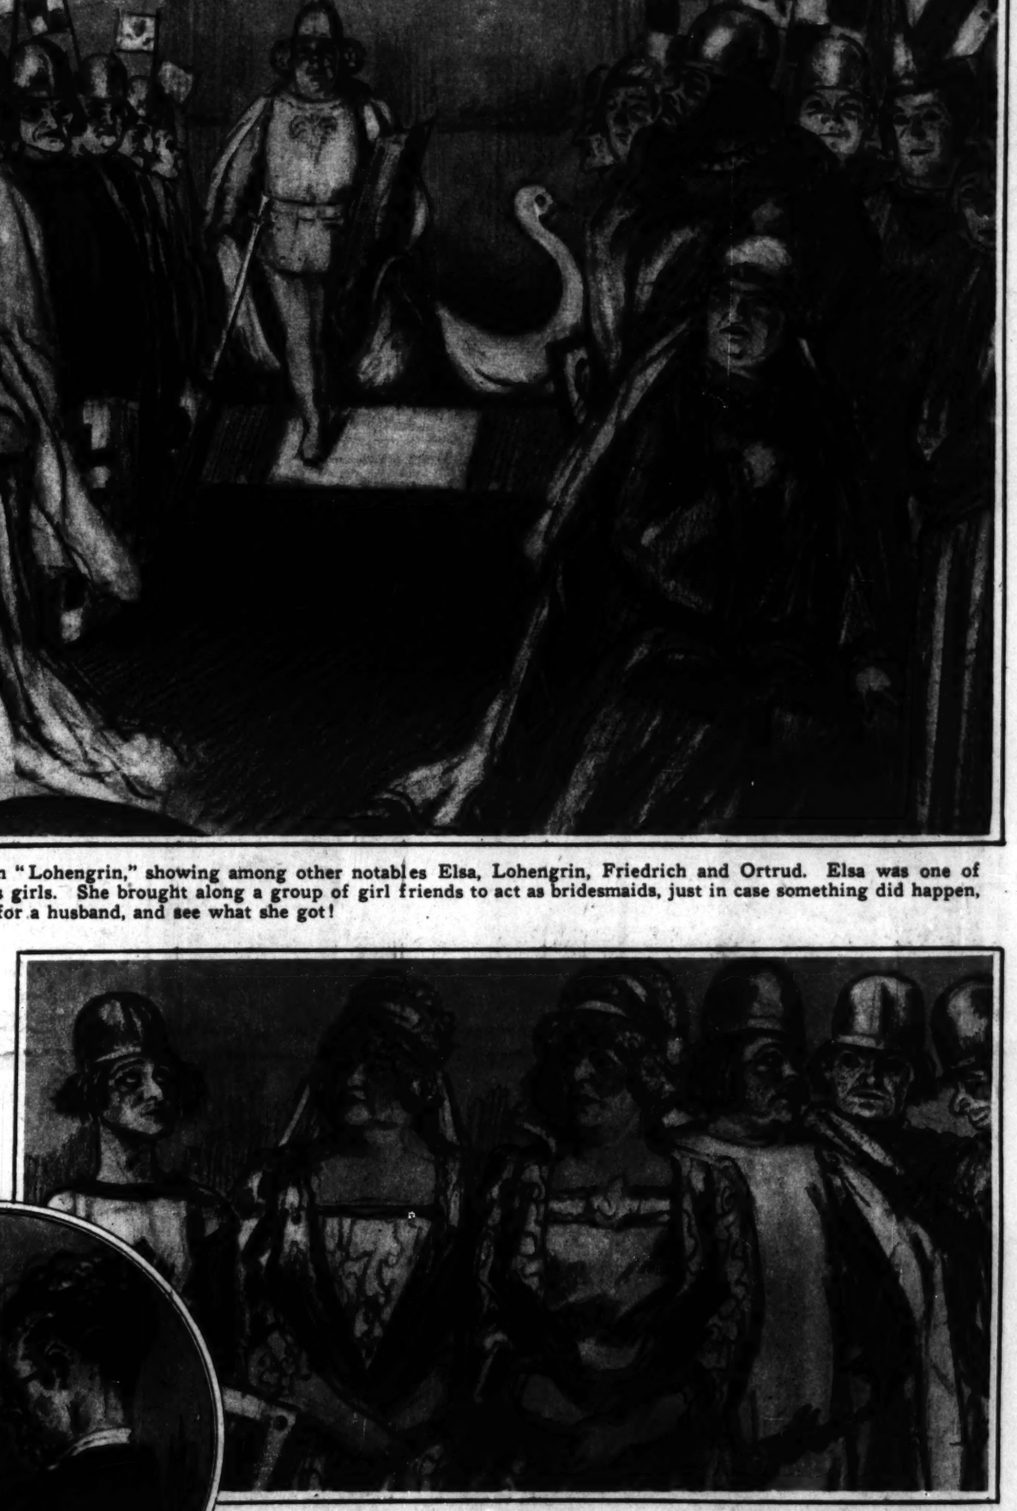
By W. E. HILL

A tense moment in "Lohengrin," showing among other notables Elsa, Lohengrin, Friedrich and Ortrud. Elsa was one of those preparedness girls. She brought along a group of girl friends to act as bridesmaids, just in case something did happen, prayed to heaven for a husband, and see what she got!

Ortrud, otherwise Mrs. Friedrich of Telramund, giving the happy bride and groom a dirty look.

Friedrich of Telrafund in a merry mood.

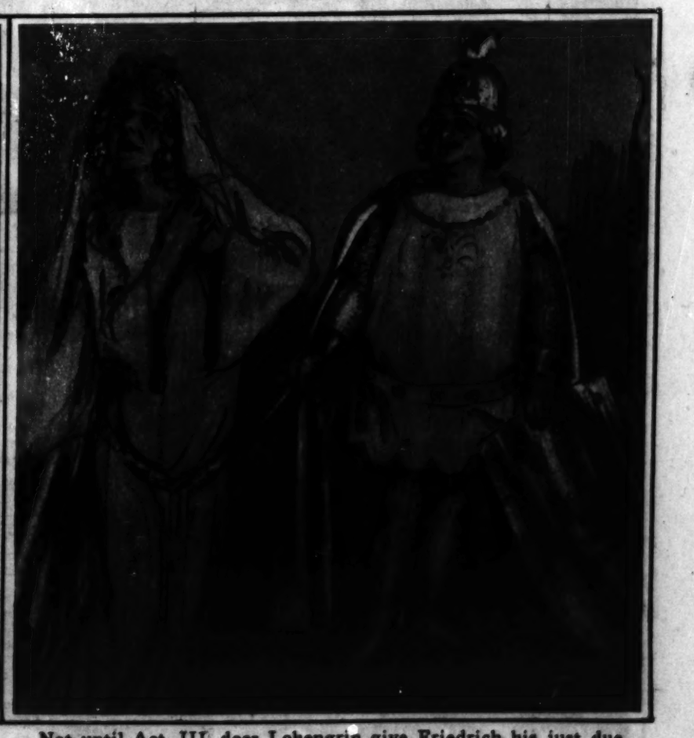
The conductor's collar begins to wilt.



A group of wedding guests, the looks of which leads one to suppose that Elsa and Lohengrin had a somewhat shady set of friends. (Nothing stolen, however.)

One of Elsa's girl friends, played with great gusto by Miss Margretta Kinderbaum, mezzo-soprano. Having no lines to sing at the present moment, Miss Kinderbaum is meditating on the harshness of life in general. It is so hard these days for a mezzo to hang on to a husband. They either go wrong or get spirited away.

"Tum-tum-tee-tum." Two lovely wedding guests followed by two equally lovely pages, marching to the tune of the Lohengrin wedding march.



Not until Act. III. does Lohengrin give Friedrich his just due. Friedrich was a mean cuss—he was nobody's business but his own—and what Ortrud didn't think of in the way of meanness Friedrich did.

Danger is carefully marked wherever children are concerned—that needless tragedy may be averted. This is the day of prevention. Danger is marked wherever it exists and measures of safety adopted. To prevent decay and disease, to safeguard health—even life itself—dental authorities have pointed out The Danger Line on our teeth, which demands our constant care and attention.

Sound second teeth depend on proper care of first teeth at THE DANGER LINE

MANY mothers have the erroneous impression that the first teeth are not important. Yet to insure good second teeth, and their normal growth, it is of the utmost importance to guard against Acid Decay at The Danger Line, where gums meet teeth.

At The Danger Line—in all the tiny V-shaped crevices around the teeth at the gum margin—food particles gather and ferment, forming acids which cause decay and which may lead to infections. Such decay often results in conditions which seriously retard a child's general physical and mental development.

There is one absolutely safe, dependable way to protect your children's teeth and gums from acids at The Danger Line and elsewhere. It is the use of Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. For dental authorities agree that Milk of Magnesia is the one best product for effectively neutralizing acids which attack the teeth and gums.

Squibb's Dental Cream, being made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia—pleasantly flavored—is safe for the youngest child, even if swallowed. It cleans thoroughly, strengthens the gums, allays sensitiveness and protects for hours after use.

For your children's sake—and for all your family—buy Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. At drug stores.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM

If you have not used Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, we urge you to try it and note its definite superiority—its entire freedom from earthy, alkaline taste.

Be on your guard for signs of Pyorrhea

Just as the stability of a building is dependent upon its foundations, so healthy teeth depend upon healthy gums.

Bleeding gums are the first sign of Pyorrhea's approach. Then they begin to recede and the healthy pink color gives place to a pale, whitish tint. Soon the teeth are loosened, pus pockets form and drain their poisons through the system, often causing indigestion, rheumatism, neuritis and many of the other diseases of mid-life.

Let Forhan's help you

Forhan's For the Gums is a most effective agent in the fight against this insidious disease. It contains just the right proportion of Forhan's Astringent (as used by the dental profession) to neutralize oral poisons, and keep the gums in a firm, strong, healthy condition. Also, it cleans and whitens the teeth and keeps the mouth sweet, clean and wholesome. Even if you don't care to discontinue your favorite dentifrice, at least start using Forhan's once a day.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for Forhan's For the Gums. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

The fight against Pyorrhea is a fight against overwhelming odds. Statistics prove that four out of every five over 40 — and thousands younger, too — pay Pyorrhea's dreaded toll. Will you?

Rinse With Lemon To Keep Hair Curly—Whether Bobbed or Long

By Priscilla Dean

"WHEN I shampoo my hair a curd is formed by soap. It settles on the hair and stays, no matter how frequently I rinse with water alone. The hair is sticky and unclean, and loses its curl.

"But then I rinse with the juice of one lemon in a quart of water, and you should see the difference! The lemon juice eliminates the curd completely. My hair is really clean. It keeps its curl.

"Just feel the hair, to know it. Let your mirror, and your friends tell you of its fine, lustrous gloss, its pretty wave.

"The best 'Beauty Shops' rinse like this. It's the natural, harmless way.

"Learn the effect just once and you, too, will always rinse like this.

"Get California Lemons. They are heavy with the most effective juice. I know because I've tried them all."

TWO CHAMPS IN ONE CORNER, a rare sight in pugilism. DO YOU KNOW THIS BOY? The photographer asked the question, and one wondered if a new Adonis had arrived to challenge Mr. Valentino. Ah, 'tis no comely youth—it's Miss Aileen Riggin, a famous swimming champion, just out of the water at Palm Beach after breaking some record or other. But with her bobbed hair all slicked back she does look like a handsome boy, you'll admit. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

YALE'S MAN AMONG MEN, Frank Davis Ashburn of West Point, N. Y. He has just been selected as the senior "who has done most for Yale university." To top his fame, Ashburn is a Rhodes scholarship winner. (Photograph from Wide World.)

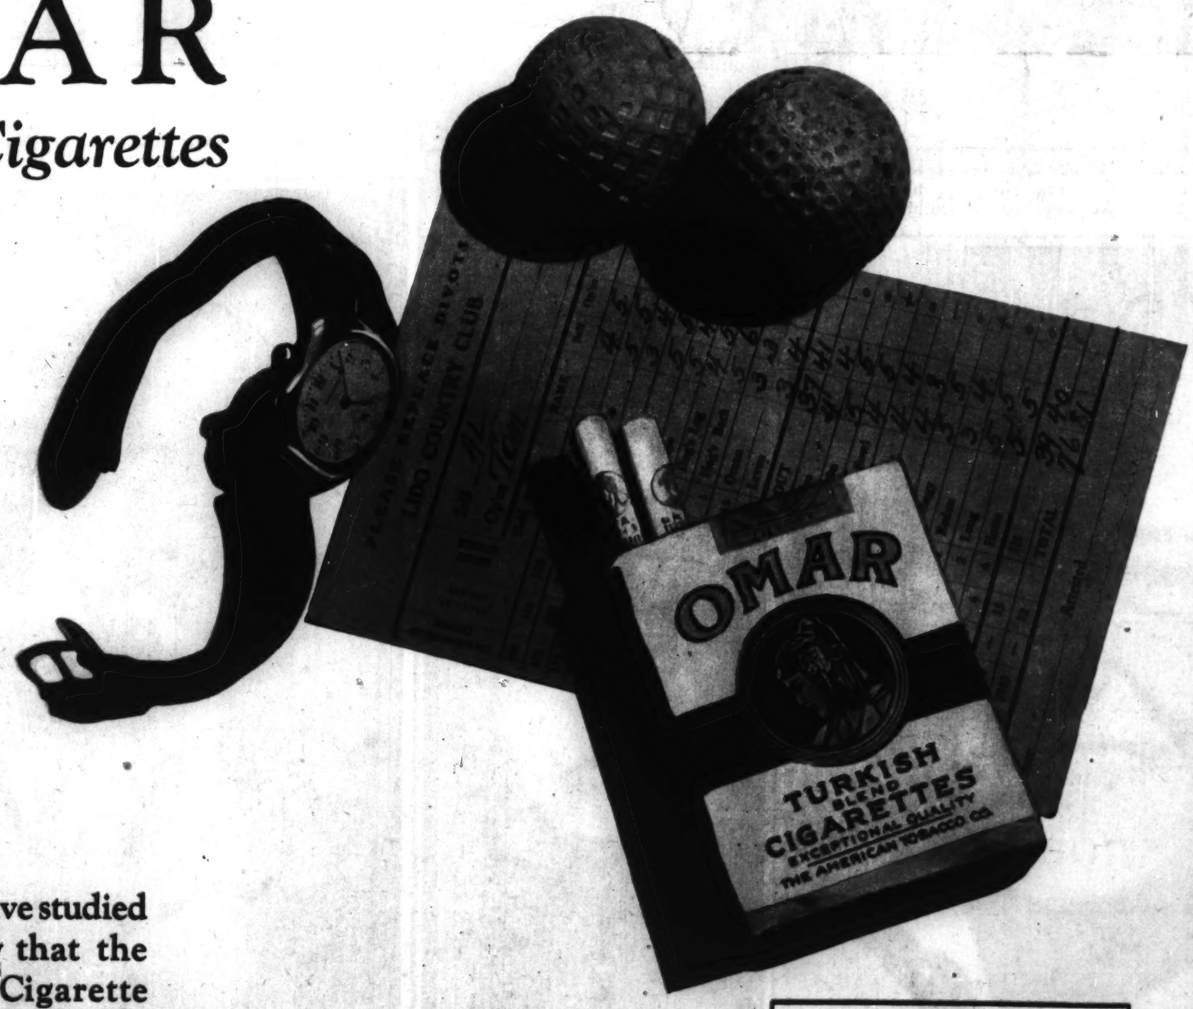
OMAR
Turkish Cigarettes



GOLFERS who have studied the question say that the perfect Omar Cigarette is after the 18th hole (or the 19th for that matter.)

And yet there are many other Omar moments just as pleasant.

OMAR is the aromatic blend of 13 kinds of rich Turkish and 6 of ripe domestic leaves, mixed according to our formula for the perfect Turkish blend. OMAR—the very name suggests aroma—and aroma makes a cigarette. They've told you that for years.

Omar is a really delightful cigarette.

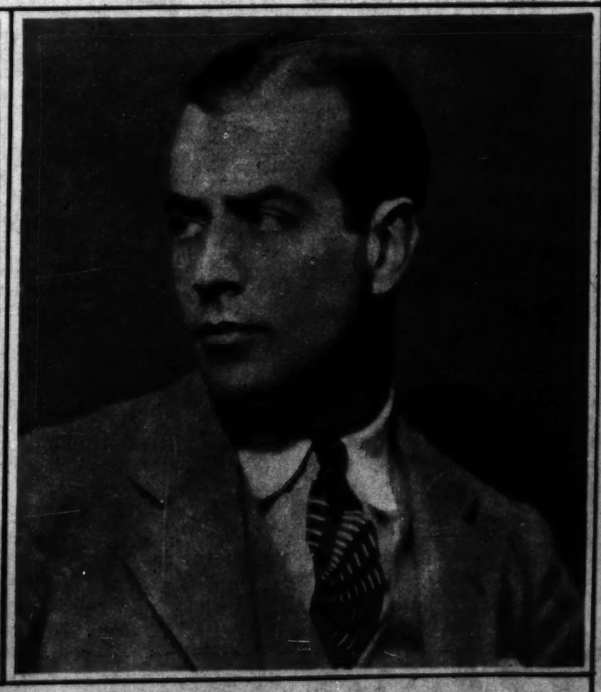
ALLA IS GREAT for wearing pajamas on the home lot. You see her here in her garden in Hollywood. She just loves her garden and spends a lot of her time there.

HELENE CHADWICK will be seen soon in "The Re-creation of Brian Kent," from the story by Harold Bell Wright. Miss Chadwick is clever, and we see too little of her in the pictures.

MARY AND DICKIE! Otherwise known as Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barthelmess. They will be seen together in "New Toys," which stars the male half of their sketch.

"TOO MANY KISSES" is the name of Richard Dix's new picture. Not meaning to be fresh, but one might say he invites the t. m. k. in this fascinating dress of the Basques.

BUSHMAN'S BACK. Francis X. Bushman, champion heart-breaker of pioneer cinema days, is "back" in two ways. Back in America and back in the movies. He has just returned from Rome, where he had a part in "Ben Hur," in which Ramon Novarro plays the leading role.



JOHN PATRICK, comedian and screen leading man, has just signed a long term contract with Warner Brothers. He will play prominent roles in this company's "Screen Classics" during the coming season.

DAINTY, FLEXIBLE, SMART - the things to wear under your slim-as-ever frock this spring

Once just a "corset" was well enough but now a smooth unbroken line must underlie the mode

YOU have to look a second time to be sure of it—that new note in your dainty underthings this spring!

Your pretty frocks are no less slim. But fashion is gradually softening her straight lines with curves — molding the uncompromisingly boyish shapes of last season into something more feminine and vastly more gracious and lovely!

That puts a neat problem up to expert corset designers—to take last year's slim oblong, give it delicately rounded contours and keep it still very slender.

So under the name of Nemo-flex—the House of Nemo—which has long been designing the exquisite underthings fastidious women wear —presents a new group of models which are the maximum of comfort and modishness:—

GIRDLES—The new Nemo-flex girdles, offer lovely unbroken lines for all types of figure. No more unbecoming bulges at the back—no wrinkles to mar your smartly tailored frock. Instead, your figure molded flexibly and smoothly enough to meet that acid test—the untrimmed flat back of the mode!

BRASSIERES—have a new interest this spring! A happy medium between the unconstrained figure and the flattening models of last season. By expert, careful molding Nemo-flex brassieres achieve those smooth supple contours that are now desired.

COMBINATIONS—Most engaging of all are the new Nemo-flex combinations—five different types for as many kinds of figure—each deftly combining a girdle with a brassiere. Each as flexible and light as the supple curves of your own body. So quick, so convenient, they are on, and adjusted in a flash!

ALL these new models by the special name of Nemo-flex are distinguished by the same fine quality of fabric, the same meticulous finish and workmanship that women have come to expect from the House of Nemo.

Shoulder straps firmly sewed on. Garters that don't slip. Carefully adjusted fastenings. Many other distinctive new touches. And lovely fabrics, new in weave and pattern. In short, all your needs anticipated in the next piece of corsetry that you buy.

You can see the new Nemo-flex collection at any store and can try on the models that interest you. Nemo, the House of Complete Corsetry, 120 East Sixteenth Street, New York.

PANELS of elastic in this front-clasping girdle (on figure) allow the ample figure to keep its natural lines. Dainty coutil and broches, $5.00 to $12.50.

A RIBBON-BOUND elastic step-in (A) with ribbon garters, as smart as it is comfy, $8.00 to $10.00.

COMBINATION (B) with the back in one piece for flatness. In front, girdle and brassiere adjust separately, one over the other. Broches, elastic inserts, $5.00 to $18.00.

THREE front bones placed just high enough over the abdomen, and side elastic godets, make this combination (C) do the work of a corset in a lighter, more flexible way. Broches, $3.00 to $22.50.

COMBINATION (D) for the figure that is a trifle heavy through the hips. Five small transverse bones across the abdomen and side elastic godets give support. Broches, $3.00 to $15.00.

A GARTER brassiere (E) for the smooth foundation summer frocks require, is so fashioned of broche and suede that a break between it and your girdle beneath is utterly impossible, $3.50.

THE newer type of brassiere (F) for the slender figure that loves to be active. It has the soft, natural uplifting lines that mold but do not constrain. Silk jersey, in seven attractive pastel shades, $1.00.

[UPPER PANEL]

SILK-COVERED, rubber-reducing Nemolastik girdle (above chair) in attractive brocaded design. Perspiration-absorbing lining, $10.75.

A BACK-LACING girdle (J) adjusts well to the figure that would balance weight with grace. Smart fabrics, $5.00 to $10.00.

THE front of this brassiere (G) hooks down over the girdle to afford perfect diaphragm control. Broches, $1.50 to $4.00.

DAINTY laces and ribbon fashion a long brassiere (H) for evening wear under sheer summer frocks, $6.50.
